Agents Forge Insurance Vote Proxies, Inquiry Told

Not a Necessity, Rather a Joke, Salesmen Say at Monopoly Hearing

Two mild-mannered agents of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. created a sensation in a Senate committee hearing yesterday when they testified that the names of policyholders were frequently forged on the ballots cast in election of Metropolitan directors.

Startling the temporary National Economic ("Monopoly") Committee out of midafternoon lethargy, the two witnesses swore that it has been "common practice" of Metropolitan agents to falsify signatures of policy-holders who have balked at voting for the single slate of directors biennially submitted by the company.

The testimony, offered by Edward Schurr and Bruno Silbiger, New York agents of the company, came near the close of a day in which Gerhard Gesell, special counsel for the SEC, attempted to show that the Metropolitan directors — though nominally elected by the policyholders—were virtually chosen by the management.

Chief Denies Knowing

Schurr had just asserted that "the forgeries took place at every election," when Leroy A. Lincoln, president of the Metropolitan, rose from his chair next to the witness table and interposed:

"I insist on the right to say that I never heard of such a practice, and I don't countenance it in any way, shape or manner."

Schurr, slight and dark-haired, told the committee that every two years, when directors were chosen, he and the other agents in his office were given 40 or 50 ballots for policyholders to sign. Most of the ballots would be duly validated, but whenever there was any difficulty in obtaining signatures, he asserted, he and the other agents did not hesitate to forge policyholders' names. He explained that the agents did it for each other, "so the handwriting on each agent's ballots wouldn't look the same."

Elections Not Affected

"You ought to be in the penitentiary," interjected Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, and then he quickly added, "I'll withdraw that."

It was pointed out that the net result of the election was in no way affected by the forgeries, as never in the company's history has more than one set of nominees been presented to the voters.

Silbiger, who said it was made "very clear" to the agents that they were expected to return the signed ballots within a week after receiving them, declared that "no threats" had been made—"but we were told, 'if you don't bring them in by a certain time, you're disloyal.'"

"The thing was considered more or less of a joke," said Silbiger. "Nothing was ever thought of it.

7 Hurt as 10-Ton Truck Hits Auto; 11th Victim of '39 Dies

House Bill Asks 30 Days For Hit-Runner

Also $5,000 Fine; 100 More Police Sought for District

Seven men were injured last night when a huge truck ran wild and caught fire after colliding with an automobile at Florida avenue and Eckington place northeast, while an aged woman died at Garfield Hospital, bringing the 1939 toll of District traffic to 11.

Police said a ten-ton semitrailer truck, operated by John H. Graver, 33, of Richmond, Va., smashed into the rear of an automobile driven by Howard D. Slater, 34, of Berwyn, Md., and charged out of control, into a traffic light at the intersection. The truck, loaded with merchandise, burst into flames. Those injured:

At Casualty Hospital

At Sibley Hospital

Martin Campbell, 40, of 2015 Fifteenth street northwest, injuries undetermined.

The District's fight on hit-and-run drivers, meanwhile, gained impetus yesterday when a bill under which such offenders would be imprisoned not less than 30 days and fined not more than $5,000, was introduced in Congress by Representative Fred L. Crawford (Republican), of Michigan.

For second offenders, Representative Crawford's bill would raise the jail penalty to a minimum of six months. Penalties in both cases would apply to the type of hit-and-run driver who flees after maiming or killing a pedestrian.

The Representative's action came as legislators on Capitol Hill sought an answer to the recent wave of hit-and-run accidents that first broke with the killing of the son of Representative Caldwell (Democrat), of Florida. The day's developments included:

Mrs. Emily C. Dixon, 88, of 2440 Twentieth street northwest, died

Deputy Cited in Fixing May Accuse Warring

4 Numbers Suspects Plead Guilty, Call Quijano Their Chief

Small fry law breakers pleaded guilty to lottery charges yesterday, then testified that the numbers racket boss who promised protection left them to shift for themselves when they got into trouble.

The numbers henchmen took the stand against Attorney Juan R. Quijano, who went to trial alone on an indictment of criminal conspiracy and running a lottery after four persons accused with him pleaded guilty before Justice Proctor.

The court took part in selecting the jury, which was ordered locked up last night and sequestered when not in court. The trial is expected to last well into Friday.

Assistant District Attorney Tarver, who outlined the Government case, depicted Quijano as running a huge numbers enterprise from his law offices in the Earle Building and from a headquarters in Maryland. He pointed out that Quijano is accused of nine instances of numbers law violation and that there are charged 28 overt acts in furtherance of an alleged conspiracy to violate the law.

Four Plead Guilty

Defense Counsel Russell Kelly, with whom Dudley K. Offutt is associated, promised to show that at the time of the overt acts Quijano was practicing his profession and on one occasion was being sworn in as a member of the bar of the Supreme Court. Offutt said the defense would call 40 witnesses to prove the alibis.

Those indicted who pleaded guilty were Alice H. Haight and Barkley Hawkins, colored; Venancio Q. Liberato and Numeriano M. Del Rosario, Filipinos. William Wooten, colored, the sixth defendant, was granted a separate trial.

First Government witness was Hawkins, a portly, deep-voiced, neatly-dressed man who said he was 76 and never had been arrested until he was involved in the numbers case. He retired as an Interior Department elevator operator at 70. Hawkins said he became a numbers writer for Quijano at the instance of a man named Sidney R. Harris, 27, a musician.

(Harris was in custody, held for investigation, having been seized in

Emmitt and Marshal To Answer Monday On Jury Tampering

District Attorney Pine charged in sworn informations yesterday that Emmitt Warring, numbers racket boss, fought criminal conspiracy charges against his gang with liquor for jurors, bribes for a marshal who guarded them and offered one juror $800 to vote not guilty.

John B. Upperman, accused marshal, weighed giving evidence for the Government, an official source disclosed last night. Upperman was in charge of the Warring juries until removed by Justice Laws Monday.

Corruption in the first Warring trial, in which the jury deadlocked after 80 hours' deliberation, was charged for the first time yesterday. "We were shadow boxing," one of the prosecutors said of the three weeks in which the Government presented its evidence at the first trial.

Four criminal contempt rules were served on Emmitt Warring in court and two on Upperman, who was heavily guarded in a hideout so secret that even Justice Laws was not told where he was.

Chief Deputy Marshal Michael Kearney served the rule on Upperman shortly after it was signed.

Upperman discussed the case with investigators and was considering telling all he knows about the alleged corruption when he appears in court next week. District Attorney Pine and his staff refused to comment on this phase of the case.

Rep. Mills Says He Hit Auto on Connecticut Ave.

Search for the driver involved in a supposed hit-run accident at Connecticut avenue and R street last Thursday, ended yesterday when Representative Wilbur D. Mills, of Arkansas, told police he collided with an auto driven by Louis Orlando, of 2241 Eighteenth street northwest.

"It was raining very heavily," Mills said, "so I told Mr. Orlando that my office was located in room 119 of the House Office Building and I would be glad to talk with him the next morning. Evidently he misunderstood me, for the next I heard of the incident was when police called me and made an inquiry."

Neither will take court action.

Acheson Silent On Report He'll Be D.C. Appeals Judge

Dean Acheson, mentioned in New York dispatches last night as having been offered a place on the District Court of Appeals, told the Associated Press early today:

"I have no comment to make whatsoever."

Acheson, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and friend of Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter, was in New York yesterday representing his Washington firm in a law case.

Legislators Think It's Rude To Foregather in the Nude

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 8.—An Ohio legislative committee argued today over whether a bill to forbid nudism would encroach on American liberties.

Contending the measure would make surgery, medical examinations and nude art posing illegal, Representative Harry Dworkin declared "it is fraught with serious dangers to our fundamental liberties."

"You can't legislate morality into people," he added. "Besides is there any evidence that nudism leads to immorality?"

Representative Lawrence F. Kellar, the bill's author, seeks to bar nudism "in the presence of two or more persons of the opposite sex." He said the bill was patterned after a New York statute except for deletion of a phrase "similarly exposed" relating to the "opposite sex."

"They got around the law in New York," he said, "by having the women wear a few clothes one day and the men the next."

He agreed to attempt writing an amendment to meet Dworkin's objections.

Chairman Jackson E. Betts of the House Judiciary Committee said most of the members favored the bill but that he doubted if it could be made workable without banning "legitimate activities."

Kellar, as prosecutor for Delaware County, last summer conducted several raids on nudist camps.

"There's something cracked, a screw loose somewhere," was Kellar's description of nudists.

"It seems to me that we're trying to outlaw that old Adam and Eve scandal," Betts offered.

Terrorists Jubilant As Kents Cancel North Ireland Visit

Dublin, Feb. 8 (AP).—The terroristic Irish Republican Army, which the government is seeking to curb by drastic legislation, sent a warning to a Londonderry newspaper today threatening further violence in its campaign to rid northern and southern Ireland of British ties.

The warning expressed jubilance because authorities had canceled a scheduled visit of the Duke and Duchess of Kent.

The Dail (Parliament) considered legislation that may provide the death penalty and military tribunals for the conspirators. Active terrorism in London, however, seemed to have eased off today.

Negrin's Desperate Plan

By the United Press.

Le Perthus, French-Spanish Frontier (Thursday), Feb. 9.—Loyalist Premier Negrin, driven out of Catalonia by insurgent bombing planes, early today was reported ready to fly to Madrid for a conference to decide whether the Spanish government will capitulate completely to Gen. Franco.

Diplomats said a decision whether to continue loyalist resistance and carry on the 30-month-old war with its toll of 1,000,000 lives might be reached before nightfall Thursday.

Miaja Reports Conflict

Negrin's reported decision to attempt a hazardous airplane trip to Madrid over a wide stretch of enemy territory followed reports in the French Parliament that Gen. Jose Miaja, commander in chief of about 400,000 government troops in the Madrid-Valencia zone, had begun negotiations with Franco seeking an armistice and surrender. If he should decide to give up the fight, Negrin and his ministers would have no alternative but surrender.

However, dispatches from Madrid said Miaja was determined to continue resistance in the central zone "to the last man."

It was reported, without confirmation, that Negrin's general staff, which fled with him to the border, had refused to accompany him by plane to the Madrid-Valencia zone.

Only 50,000 in Catalonia

The report of Miaja's alleged negotiations with the insurgents was said to have been relayed to French Premier Daladier by Senator Leon Berard, who returned yesterday from a special mission to Franco's Burgos headquarters.

Negrin's foreign minister, Julio Alvarez del Vayo, conferred here last night with British and French diplomats and was understood to have told them the question of surrender would be decided as soon as the loyalist military evacuation of Catalonia is completed.

Army Diminishing

Of the original government army of at least 350,000 in Catalonia only about 50,000 remained on Spanish soil early today, fighting in the rear guard with their backs to the frontier and ready to join their thousands of bedraggled comrades on French soil.

The insurgents were only about 9 miles from the border at the farthest point after announcing the occupation of Figueras—the temporary loyalist capital of Spain after Barcelona's fall on January 26—where the fleeing loyalists blew up the Mountain BoyKills Grandmother as She Begs for Life

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 8 (AP). State Trooper Bill Armstrong said a 15-year-old mountain boy told today how he gratified a long-cherished desire to kill his grandmother, shooting the 60-year-old woman while she knelt in prayer, begging futilely for her life.

BATES

Armstrong said Cecil Allen Bates admitted slaying Mrs. R. J. Foley in her home at Norman, Ark., Monday night because "she had always been calling the Bateses low down and stuff like that until I finally got enough of it."

"The first time the bullet went wild," he was quoted. "Then I stepped forward and put the pistol about 6 inches from the back of her neck and shot her again."

Hopkins Becomes A Grandpa

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins, former WPA administrator, has a new title—grandpa. Cherry Preisser Hopkins, wife of his son, David, gave birth to a 6½-pound daughter yesterday. Hospital physicians said the mother, a former Follies dancer, and the baby were "doing well."

Senator Says Roosevelt Intended Byrd's Defeat in 1940, His Later, 'If I Live Longer Than Intriguers Hope'

By Robert C. Albright.

Senator Glass, of Virginia, last night charged the President with an effort to "purge" Senator Byrd from the Senate in next year's elections and Glass himself later "should I live longer than the intriguers hope."

The 81 year-old Virginian reiterated the assertion, denied Tuesday by the President, that Mr. Roosevelt promised Gov. James H. Price of Virginia the power of "veto" over nominations both Senators made.

In an answer to the President's letter to Floyd H. Roberts attacking the institution of "senatorial courtesy," Glass said he did not "care a tinker's dam for patronage," that he was "looking for a judge, not for a job."

President Roosevelt's nomination of Roberts to be a Virginia Federal district judge was rejected, 72 to 9, by the Senate on Monday because it was "personally offensive" to Glass and Byrd. On Tuesday the President in a letter to Roberts accused Senators of attempting through senatorial courtesy to appropriate to themselves the nominating power vested in the President.

Glass replied last night with a statement that the President in a

$18,000,000 Slash Affects 3 Projects; NLRB Money Voted

By the Associated Press.

After voting to curtail the Tennessee Valley Authority's dam construction program, the House passed an appropriation bill yesterday carrying $1,883,809,709 to operate 40 independent governmental agencies in the year starting July 1.

The slap at TVA came when an amendment was adopted to reduce the authority's appropriation from $39,000,000 to $21,000,000. It would have the affect of stopping work on a dam at Gilbertsville, Ky., abandoning a proposed dam project at Watts Bar on the Tennessee River and halting investigation of dam sites near Coulter Shoals in Tennessee. The amendment was approved by a teller vote of 159 to 122.

Appropriations for the TVA and the National Labor Relations Board were the only points of real controversy in the measure.

After bitter discussion of the labor board, only five members supported an amendment to strike out the board's appropriation of $3,039,600, while 186 favored keeping the fund intact.

As it went to the Senate, the bill was $16,283,670 below the amount recommended by the Budget Bureau but carried $284,758,555 more than was appropriated for expenses

Byrnes Offers Permanent PWA, Relief Act

Single Agency Would Cover Activities of NYA, WPA and CCC Also

With indications of Administration support, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, plans to introduce in the Senate today a bill revamping the Administration's present relief set-up into a permanent program embracing recommendations of the Senate Unemployment Committee.

At a 2-hour luncheon conference at the White House yesterday, Senator Byrnes went over details of the measure with President Roosevelt and Works Progress Administrator F. C. Harrington.

While Byrnes would not comment on the President's attitude, the South Carolinian was believed to have left the White House with assurances of support of many important features of his measure.

To be offered in one bill rather than a series, the rough draft is said to provide for a new Department of Public Works into which would be covered similar public works activities of the WPA and the PWA. Work of the Civilian Conservation Corps and the National Youth Administration also would come under the new agency.

The new measure contemplates revision of the social security act to make unemployment compensation "the first line of defense" in the permanent relief program, with

Radio Conflict Hides Fate Of 30 on 'Sinking' Freighter

By the Associated Press.

Thomaston, Me., Feb. 8.—Conflicting radio advices tonight left the fate of the British freighter Maria de Larrinaga, said to have 30 persons aboard, the temporary secret of a tumbling North Atlantic.

The steamer Clintonia was reported within 32 miles of the position the freighter gave in an S O S.

At 9:25 p. m., more than two hours after the last S O S was received from the Maria de Larrinaga, which reported she was 1,200 miles east of New York in a sinking condition, another ship, believed to be the Irland, appealed to all vessels to keep off the air so communication could be established.

Although Mackay and R. C. A. operators reported no contact with the De Larrinaga, the Canadian transport department's radio at Halifax, N. S., announced the freighter radioed at 7:30 p. m. that her No. 1 bulkhead was holding and the sea decreasing.

The Cunarder Aurania, the American Scantic liner Scanmail and the Holland-American vessel Veendam reported in messages intercepted by Mackay and Radiomarine that "nine or ten calls" to the ship had gone unanswered and that they last heard from her at 7:10 p. m. (Eastern standard time) when she repeated an S O S several times.

At 8 p. m. (Eastern standard time) Mackay radio in New York reported the Scanmail only 80 miles from the British vessel. The Veendam had advised she expected to be at the De Larrinaga's position tomorrow about 5 a. m. The Aurania's position was not known.

Fearing War Soon, House Group Backs Defense Bill

Report Says More Arms Are Needed to Guard U. S. Rights; Floor Debate Monday

Scares Retard Business

Fear War at 'Early Date'

The House Military Affairs Committee last night submitted a report on the emergency defense program declaring that conditions indicate "that war may come in Europe at an early date."

"When and if that unfortunate and regrettable situation occurs," the committee continued, "it will be imperative and essential that we be prepared and equipped with the necessary air fleet and armed forces to provide adequate protection for our own shores that we may command respect of our rights at least in our own country."

Meanwhile, the Army was revealed yesterday to have undertaken a reorganization of the Organized Reserve Corps to assure ready mobilization in an emergency, standardize administration throughout the country and generally "stream-line" the reserve for its part in war.

Form Military Areas

The existing nine corps areas in the United States are being divided into "military areas" and "military districts" to mobilize men and supplies better in war. The District of Columbia, it was said, has been designated the "Washington Military District" and is a part of the "Virginia-Maryland Military Area" with headquarters in Richmond.

Stressing the importance of time in providing armament, the House committee observed that France and Great Britain have been speeding arms production for two years, yet still have to rely on purchases in the United States. While unanimous in an observation that "our present military establishment is woefully inadequate and early improvements contemplated in the legislation are immediately necessary," 11 members of the group filed a minority report calling for spreading the procurement of 3,032 planes over three years instead of 18 months.

Bill Goes to Floor Monday

The bill reported by the committee will be taken up in the House on Monday. It would increase the present authorized Army plane strength from about 4,000 to 5,500, maintain a Regular Army of 190,000 officers and men and a National Guard of 210,000.

Other features of the bill increase the peacetime commissioned strength from 14,659 to 16,719, enlarge the enlisted strength of the Air Corps from 21,500 to 45,000, authorize $42,500,000 for "educational orders" and provide for training of pilots for the new planes. The "educational orders" program, the report said, would give 250 factories small orders of 55 "critical" items of munitions, to test their ability to produce readily in war-time. The officer increase would be spread over 10 years, it was said, while 2,100 of the 5,500 planes would be held in reserve without personnel to man them.

The 10 Republicans on the committee and C. Arthur Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri, signed the minority report. Except for urging spread of the program over three years, they supported the bill, declaring it a "reasonable and sound program." By delaying procurement of the planes, they said, the advantage of later research and experimentation can be realized, employment can be stabilized, and there would be "less strain on the annual budgets."

Committee members said most of the group had opposed the earlier

CONNOISSEUR: The new justice, Mr. Frankfurter, is something of an epicure and a gourmet; he is an authority on cheese and Chilean wines, and he yields to none of his colleagues in his knowledge of grapefruit. He is fond of Austrian foods, like wienerschnitzel, and has a taste for rare fish dishes.

The Frankfurters have taken a house on Prospect Hill with a great wide window overlooking the Potomac near Georgetown, destined to become a salon for the nimble-witted, like their home on Brattle street in Cambridge. An epicure's salon ought to draw well.

Ambassador Johnson is a bold, two-fisted, undismayed American who reminds me of the New England skippers who first sailed to China. He thinks that if a nation is going to be a nation it had better put on long pants, flex its muscles and be a nation, and not let its aunts keep it in rompers.

Vandenberg Seeks More Information On Florida Canal

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, will ask the Senate today to adopt a resolution requesting two government agencies for further information on the proposed Florida ship canal.

Vandenberg will urge the Senate to indorse yesterday's action of the Commerce Committee, which approved a request that the Department of Commerce bring its findings regarding the canal down to date and that the Geological Survey give an opinion of the effect of the canal upon Florida's water supply.

The committee decided to hold hearings on the whole question of the ship canal, the date to be determined at its next meeting.

Amlie Charges Capitalism Is Breaking Down

Tells Senator He Is Follower of Veblen; Warns of U. S. Fascism

Thomas R. Amlie, President Roosevelt's selection for the Interstate Commerce Commission, yesterday told a Senate sub-committee that the "old economic order is breaking down" and that developments in Europe are not more than five to ten years "ahead of this country."

Concluding five hours of testimony before the Senate group, the left-wing Wisconsin Progressive told Senators that "if democratic processes broke down in the United States, the only alternative would be fascism."

The youthful appearing advocate of "production for use" said he was "a follower of Thorstein Veblen rather than Karl Marx" and declared he might be called a "Social Democrat," but never a Communist.

Closely questioned by Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, on the difference between his own objectives and those of communism, Amlie said he objected to means used by the Communists to attain their "ideal—from everyone according to his means, to everyone according to his needs."

"Apparently your objectives are the same—taking over private property in one way or another, and spreading it out among a lot of people. Isn't that the theory of both yourself and the Communists?" asked Austin.

"I can't get away from the means," Amlie replied.

He said he sought attainment of a national income sufficient to give everyone "a decent standard of living." He said the $83,000,000,000 national income of 1929 was insufficient, but he thought a national income of $120,000,000,000 could bring such a goal without interfering with the standards of those who have wealth.

"Would not both your doctrines and those of communism lead to collectivism?" pressed Austin.

"I think that's true," said Amlie. "The only difference is how rapidly and how completely. I think fascism also leads to collectivism."

Amlie insisted that while he had addressed a meeting "controlled" by Communists in Chicago in 1935 their only common interest was opposition to fascism.

Asked whether he was introduced as "comrade" at the meeting as charged in an unsigned letter read to the committee Tuesday, Amlie said he could not recall, but "that's a term used rather freely and loosely."

In answer to a question by Chairman Johnson, Amlie said he thought "we can hang on to democratic institutions a few years longer" in this country, but a totalitarian trend in Europe would ultimately reflect itself here.

Meanwhile, Chairman Johnson last night closed three days of hearings on the appointment, but indicated a sub-committee vote will not be taken for several days. Two Democrats on the group, Schwartz, of Wyoming, and Hill, of Alabama, were believed to favor the appointment, while the two Republicans, Austin and Reed, oppose it. The deciding vote may be cast by Senator Johnson, who was reported uncommitted.

In his hours on the stand, Amlie often talked on without questioning, informing the committee he was "just trying to develop his thinking" over the period of the last two decades. He said many of his views had changed, that he no longer thought his "human rights" amendment to the Constitution was necessary, and that it was offered in the first place merely as a matter of "education."

Bankers' Body Fights Control of Trustees by SEC

The Investment Bankers Association yesterday protested to the Senate Banking and Currency Committee that the Barkley trust indenture bill would "bring within the complete control of the Government for the first time, the great mass of private competitive business." The protest was made by John K. Starkweather, head of the group's Federal legislative committee.

Harold V. Amberg, vice president of the First National Bank, said the bill might cripple "courageous action by trustees in defense of bondholders."

The Barkley bill would extend securities and exchange commission control over trustees and would provide statutory regulations covering trust indentures, with penalties for failure to comply with its regulations.

Amberg, vice president and general counsel for the First National Bank of Chicago, said the bill "completely reverses the national trend and is predicated on the theory that bondholders are incompetent as a group to protect their own interests."

Applied Ideals to Alien Law, Secretary Perkins Tells House

Defends Record as Supporting Democracy, Assails Reds for Curbing Individual Liberty As Committee Weighs Impeachment

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Perkins defended her record of enforcement of immigration laws yesterday in a personal appearance before the House Judiciary Committee.

Answering charges of negligence contained in an impeachment resolution under consideration by the committee, the Labor Secretary said:

"I feel confident that whether examined minutely or at large my record as Secretary of Labor will show a consistent purpose not merely to support the ideals of democracy, of orderly government and of freedom, but a purpose to assure all persons subject to the Government, whether citizen or alien, that those ideals are being carried forward in actual day-to-day practice. I have applied this to my administration of the immigration law and the case in point.

Others Accused

The case in point apparently referred to deportation proceedings involving Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. leader, and Joseph Strecker, former Communist of Hot Springs, Ark.

The impeachment resolution, introduced by Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, accused Miss Perkins; Gerard D. Reilly, Labor Department solicitor, and James L. Houghteling, immigration commissioner, of "high crimes and misdemeanors" for alleged failure to enforce the immigration laws against Bridges. Thomas contended that Bridges was an alien Communist and thus deportable. The Labor Department suspended proceedings until the Supreme Court decides whether Strecker shall be deported.

She Denounces Communism

Miss Perkins declared she was not in accord with communism's principles. She said she found in its concepts the "negation of that individual liberty" for which the United States must stand.

The Communist Party of the United States, meanwhile, informed the Supreme Court that it did not believe in, advise, teach or advocate the overthrow of the Government by force or violence. The statement was made in a brief opposing the Labor Department's order directing deportation of Strecker. The brief disputed the Government's contention that membership in the organization subjected an alien to deportation.

Supreme Court May Clarify Civil Liberties

Murphy Considers Plea To Tribunal in C. I. O.-Hague Hearing

Attorney General Frank Murphy revealed yesterday that the Justice Department may ask the Supreme Court for a clarification of civil liberties as defined in Federal statutes and the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution.

He said the Department was considering asking the court to permit it to file a brief as a friend of the court in the case of the Congress of Industrial Organizations against Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City.

If the request should be made and granted, it is understood, the Department would ask the court to make a full statement on civil liberties in the Hague decision. Such a clarification would be valuable to the Department in its enforcement of the civil liberty statutes, since it would have some idea as to how far it could go.

Such a step would be a follow-up to Murphy's action in establishing a civil liberties unit in the department. He told reporters at a press conference that the unit was established because of "present conditions."

The Hague case, now before the Supreme Court, has been set for hearing February 27. The C. I. O. has won in lower courts in seeking to enjoin the Hague regime, which it alleged denied the C. I. O. the right of assembly.

Murphy recommended, in a letter to Speaker Bankhead and Senator Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, enactment of legislation giving the Supreme Court power to prescribe simplified rules of procedure in criminal trials in Federal courts.

The rules would extend to criminal trials the same streamlining of procedure which has proved effective in expediting the business of the Federal courts in civil trials.

He expressed the belief it would be possible to work out legislation setting up standards for the judiciary which would be effective in discouraging corruption among the Federal judges. One possible plan, he said, would be to require judges to report their business interests.

Rails Spokesman Urges National Transport Policy

By the Associated Press.

A spokesman for the Association of American Railroads urged Congress yesterday to declare a national transportation policy which would provide "impartial regulation of all modes of transportation."

The witness, R. V. Fletcher, general counsel of the railroad organization, appeared before the House Interstate Commerce Committee in opposition to the omnibus transport bill recently introduced by Chairman Lea (Democrat), of California.

Fletcher's proposed statement of policy, he said would be incorporated in a substitute measure for the Lea bill.

Jury Gets Case Of 25 Accused of WPA Conspiracy

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Feb. 8 (AP).—A Federal court jury tonight received the case of 25 defendants charged with criminal conspiracy to violate the Federal WPA laws after nearly eight hours of hotly argued accusations of "extortion" and "political persecution."

Jurors were instructed by Judge Colin Neblett to disregard impassioned political allegations by A. T. Hennett, chief of defense counsel, that "the defendant in this case is Senator Dennis Chavez."

The indictments charged the defendants, including three members of the immediate family of Senator Chavez, had manipulated the WPA by coercion and intimidation of workers for the political benefit of Senator Chavez.

Auto Exports Decline 21.4%

Exports of American automotive products during 1938 had a valuation of $282,313,952, according to the Department of Commerce. This is a decrease of 21.4 per cent from 1937, but above the yearly average of $265,000,000 over the past five years.

In the domestic field, reductions from 1937 amounted to 46 per cent in production and 45 per cent in new car and truck registrations.

Senators Hear Pleas Against Tax on U.S. Pay

It Would Necessitate Real Estate Levies, Sub-committee Told

By the Associated Press.

A group of witnesses told a Senate finance sub-committee yesterday that real estate owners would have to dig down into their pocketbooks to pay increased tax bills if the Federal Government put a tax on State and municipal bonds. The Administration is proposing to remove exemptions on future issues.

Most of the eight witnesses who appeared before the committee said wealthy investors in local Government securities would demand larger interest returns if the income from such securities were to be made taxable.

This, they said, would result in higher interest payments by the local governments. To meet these costs, the witnesses contended, the local governments would have to increase their taxes and they pointed out that real estate often bears more than 80 per cent of the local tax burden.

Fears Relief Rise

C. E. Armstrong, comptroller of Birmingham, Ala., warned that this situation might be reflected in decreased local contributions to the cost of relief, entailing further Federal relief expenditures.

"Already our cities are frequently strained almost to the breaking point with their part of the relief load," Armstrong declared.

W. E. Kershner, of Columbus, Ohio, secretary of the State teachers' retirement system, estimated that it would add $4,000,000 to Ohio tax bills because of increased interest.

New Jersey particularly doesn't want the program of reciprocal taxation, because it has no State income tax law and is not likely to enact one, said Walter R. Darby, commissioner of local government in that State.

John R. Lindsay, Louisville, Ky., director of finance, said the program might prevent the construction of needed public projects.

Testifies on Bridges

Joseph K. Costello, general manager of the Delaware River Bridge, testified Federal taxation of the bonds of publicly-owned toll bridges might prevent the construction of additional bridges of that nature and would make it difficult for some bridges now existing to be refinanced.

A similar argument was made in relation to publicly-owned water supply systems by William W. Brush, editor of Waterworks Engineering."

O. F. McShane, member of the Utah industrial commission, pointed out that local agencies, in refinancing present debts, would be forced to pay higher interest rates.

House Accounts Committee Asks $100,000 for Dies

The accounts committee agreed yesterday to ask the House to provide $100,000 for the Dies committee to continue its inquiry into un-American activities.

Chairman Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, said the committee voted unanimously and that the request would be made to the House today.

As it did last year when $25,000 was provided, the accounts committee wrote a provision requesting assistance of governmental agencies in providing clerical or local personnel for the investigation. Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, has said Government agencies ignored the request of the House for assistance to his committee.

On Capitol Hill

O'TOOLE

Representative O'Toole (Democrat), of New York, yesterday introduced a bill to raise the salaries of all Federal judges, including the Supreme Court.

Under his plan, members of the United States Supreme Court would receive $30,000, with the Chief Justice getting $35,000. The Chief Justice now receives $20,500, the Associate Justices $20,000. Circuit and United States District judges would get $17,500. Circuit Court judges are paid $12,500 and District judges, $10,000.

The Chief Justice of the District Court of the District of Columbia and his associates would get $15,000 each, as would also judges of the Customs Court. At present the District Chief Justice is paid $10,500 while the Associate Justices and judges of the Customs Court receive $10,000.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, is worrying a bit about what is going to happen to the people of Tennessee if the TVA keeps on expanding.

"If TVA puts much more concrete and water in Tennessee," he told the House yesterday, "probably there won't be any place for the good people to live."

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 8 (AP).—The Ohio Supreme Court today dismissed the election contest case of Emory F. Smith against James F. Polk, re-elected to Congress from the Sixth District.

The court held that the National House of Representatives was the sole judge of the qualifications of its members.

Smith charged irregularities in the vote resulted in Polk's re-election. Smith is a Republican, Polk a Democrat.

Gen. Frank T. Hines, of the Veterans Administration opposed before a House Committee a bill to liberalize the marriage date requirements for pensions to widows of men who served in the Spanish War, Philippine Insurrection and China relief expedition.

He said advancement of the eligibility date from September 1, 1922, to January 1, 1938, as proposed, would bring on to the pension rolls some widows born many ye ars after the conflict was over.

Wage Conference To Get Budget for Women Tomorrow

Proposed budgets for a legal pay for women employed in wholesale and manufacturing industries will be submitted tomorrow to the minimum wage conference, which opened public hearings yesterday.

Mrs. William Kittle, chairman of the minimum wage board, urged all persons desiring to appear at the conference to communicate with Miss Gwen Geach, board secretary. The conference voted to hold the hearings each Wednesday and Friday at 10 a. m. in the old Police Court Building.

Blue-Bloods Band to Combat 'Tory' D. A. R.

50 Form D. C. Chapter Of Descendants of American Revolution

The American Revolutionary War broke out again last night in a quiet sector of Northwest Washington, as more than 50 citizens banded together to form a District chapter of the "Descendants of the American Revolution," dedicated to a campaign against "Tory propaganda" of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Eligibility standards will be stricter than for the D. A. R., sponsors of the Descendants proudly claimed. Applicants for membership must buttress with genealogical charts their claim to descent from "a man or woman who loyally served the cause of the American Revolution as a soldier, sailor or civil officer, as a recognized patriot or who rendered material aid thereto."

"The term 'Americanism' has become confused in the popular mind because of its exploitation by modern Tories," explained Miss Susan B. Anthony, great niece of the famous feminist, and membership chairman for the local branch of the Descendants.

To Combat Reaction

"Whenever the Daughters of the American Revolution issue a reactionary statement, we're going to come out with a liberal democratic one, in the real spirit of the American Revolution," she said. Miss Anthony works on the National Youth Administration staff.

Margaret Hatfield, chairman of the original New York chapter of the Descendants, told the organization meeting that "if any of us have to 'go back where we came from,' we'll all have to go, except the Indians." She appealed to her "fellow immigrants" to "keep fighting in the democratic spirit of the shot heard round the word in 1776."

To Defend Oppressed

Platform of the Descendants includes advancement of democratic principles in "political, social and economic life of America," defense of the right of asylum in America for oppressed groups of other lands, and continual reaffirmation of the Bill of Rights.

The meeting was held at the home of the acting chairman, Mrs. Charles Putnam, 3200 Highland place northwest.

Women's Bar Association Entertains at Banquet

Asks Co-operation With Government Agencies by Bar

Lawyers are "tilting against windmills" when they protest the rapid growth of administrative law, Frank J. Hogan, president of the American Bar Association, last night told 300 guests and members of the District Women's Bar Association at their twenty-second annual banquet in the Mayflower Hotel.

"Administrative law is here," Hogan said. "It is going to increase in importance. Acceptance of its place in carrying out the functions of a modern government is plain common sense."

The only issue, he declared, is "how we lawyers are going to help the Government to improve and clarify this new field." He described himself as "astounded" at the failure of lawyers to prepare themselves in the substantive law administered by various boards and commissions in Washington before coming here to argue cases.

Cites Attacks on NLRB

Attacks on the NLRB for allegedly "one-sided" administration of labor law overlook the fact, he asserted that the Wagner act is "purposely one-sided. He pointed out that the act took no rights from employers and gave them no new rights because its only aim was to guarantee employes the right of collective bargaining, free of any coercion, a right already confirmed by the Supreme Court before the Wagner bill was passed.

Experience has demonstrated one desirable modification of the act, he stated, recommending provision for an appeal by the employer for an election among his employes, "where there is no question of a company union and when industrial peace and the welfare of the community are involved."

Representative Sumner Speaks

Representative Jessie Sumner (Republican), of Illinois, only woman lawyer in Congress, appealed for more active participation of women in politics, asserting that in such critical times it is not enough for her sex to exert its traditional indirect influences.

Dr. Phoebe Morrison, assistant professor at Yale Law School, spoke on "Legal Problems Under Neutrality Law."

Toastmaster was Mrs. Grace Brown Stiles, assistant district attorney. The audience included Senator and Mrs. William H. King, Representative Hatton W. Sumners, Justice and Mrs. Bolitha J. Laws, Justice Oscar B. Luhring, Commissioner and Mrs. Melvin C. Hazen and District Attorney and Mrs. David A. Pine.

Women Swarm To $940 Year Jobs

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—A line of women that numbered 172 tonight, with prospects of lengthening apace overnight, augured a battle tomorrow over a dozen $940-a-year civil service jobs.

Officials allowed the women to spend the night in a nearby armory, where they saw a tennis match, military drill and basketball game.

Little Hope Held For One of Triplets

Ripley, W. Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Nurses shook their heads tonight over Delano Janney, whose tiny body shook with convulsions, and feared the Roosevelt birthday triplets might soon be but two.

Oxygen was being administered at times to the middle member of the trio—Franklin, Delano and Roosevelt—born to Mrs. Thelma Janney. Franklin and Roosevelt were gaining rapidly.

ICC Formulates Code to Reduce Truck Accidents

H. H. Kelly, chief of the section of safety, Bureau of Motor Carriers of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was guest speaker of the Washington Safety Society at the Department of Labor last night.

"In an effort to reduce the number of truck accidents along the United States highways, the Interstate Commerce Commission has suggested a code of six rules, that have been accepted and are now a part of regulations in 40 out of 48 States," he said. They are:

(1) Properly qualified drivers; (2) basic rules of the road; (3) necessary parts and accessories that would aid the driver in case of emergencies; (4) all drivers must report all accidents to their superiors immediately after collisions; (5) limitations of service, and (6) basic rules for inspection of all vehicles.

Reception Planned By Society for Hard of Hearing

The Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing will celebrate its eighteenth anniversary on Saturday afternon at a reception at the society's headquarters, 1116 Vermont avenue northwest. Miss Elizabeth Brand, newly-appointed secretary of the society, will be introduced.

More than 400 invitations have been sent to officers and staff members of the Community Chest and other agencies, as well as District medical officials. Receiving with Miss Annah M. Fletcher, president of the society, will be Miss Betty C. Wright, executive director of the American Society for the Hard of Hearing, and members of the board of the local group. The founders, Miss Josephine B. Timberlake, Miss Mary D. Suter, and Miss Jennie Hedrick, will also be honored.

Radio Star Faces Gun Charge in N.Y.

Rhinebeck, N. Y., Feb. 8 (AP).—Andrew Pickens Malone, of the radio team of "Pick and Pat," was arrested here late today on a charge of possessing firearms without a permit. He was released on $1,000 bail.

A State policeman said William McMahon, whom he described as a former secretary to Postmaster General Farley, asked State police to arrest Malone coming from New York.

Truck Runs Wild, Wrecks Va. Home; Boy Killed, 1 Hurt

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Pa., Feb. 8.—Carter Lupton, 18, of Millwood, Clarke County, was fatally injured last night when a runaway truck crashed into a 200-year-old stone residence on the eastern outskirts of Paris, after going out of control while descending the Blue Ridge Mountains.

A companion, Ellis Blanchard, 19, of Winchester, is a patient in a local hospital, suffering from a broken leg and other injuries. Thomas Huff leaped and was uninjured.

The house into which the truck crashed was virtually demolished. It had been used by George Washington as a headquarters while he was surveying in that section, according to tradition.

Actor Refuses To Salute Even A Movie Hitler

Hollywood, Feb. 8 (AP).—Warner Brothers' troubles in making an anti-Nazi movie reached a new high today when Actor Horace Brown, in Storm Troop uniform and swastika armband, refused to salute Hitler, even in make believe, and stamped off the set.

"I wouldn't do it for all the money in the world," said Brown, former Richmond (Va.) policeman.

Other performers refused to have their names mentioned because of relatives living in Germany.

The studio said it had received more than 100 threatening letters since production of "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" was announced. Officials said they were having difficulty obtaining newsreel "clips" showing Hitler addressing throngs in Germany. They hinted that "pressure" was being brought to bear not only from German sources, but from rival movie concerns.

Friends Urge Borah To Take Short Vacation

Senator Borah, recuperating at his home from an attack of grippe, is being urged by his friends to take a short vacation in the South before returning to his desk at the Capitol, it was learned last night.

Meanwhile, Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, another Capitol Hill convalescent, is expected back to work in a day or two. Minton is recuperating at Naval Hospital.

Britain Weighs Loan to Franco, Paris Hears

Anglo-French Move Would Counter Axis Influence in Spain

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Feb. 8.—A British-French plan to get Germany and Italy out of Spain by countering Nazi-Fascist wartime help with peacetime gold was reported by informed quarters today.

Diplomatic circles said Britain and France had offered to finance reconstruction of the war-torn country in return for a promise by Gen. Franco to eliminate German and Italian influence from a new insurgent state.

In Italy the Fascist press declared it was "too late" for moves by nations wanting to get on good terms with Franco and added that Italy insisted on a victory which would not benefit "those who, after having favored the exportation of bolshevism to Spain," hasten to make contacts with the insurgents.

Concerned Over Minorca

There was a belief in the two democratic nations that the relative poverty of Germany and Italy would make it hard for them to help in the rebuilding of Spain after the war.

Of more immediate concern to London and Paris, however, was the situation of Minorca, only one of the western Mediterranean Balearic Islands still held by Spanish government followers.

The British cruiser Devonshire was at Minorca today and was reported to have aboard an envoy from Franco. If his terms are rejected, Franco was expected to attack the strongly defended base.

The British and French governments apparently were alarmed lest Italian troops and Italian airplanes now occupying the neighboring insurgent-held island of Mallorca should seek to invade Minorca.

Should Italy control both islands, French and British sea traffic in the western Mediterranean might be paralyzed in time of war.

Five days ago, it was learned, squadrons of Italian warplanes flew over Minorca, dropping leaflets calling for the island's surrender today.

Chamberlain told Commons today "the government are in agreement with the view that permanent peace can only be secured by a general settlement.

Cabinet Discusses Loan

"They are of the opinion that before such a settlement can be obtained by a peace conference a considerable amount of preliminary preparation would be necessary."

Informed British sources said Chamberlain had discussed in the cabinet meeting the possibility of a large loan to insurgent Spain. British officials acknowledged that Britain had asked Franco to agree to a truce.

Since the beginning of the war European chancelleries had expected Britain to step in with some kind of economic offer near the close of the war to counter Nazi-Fascist help to the insurgents. Significantly, the Duke of Alba, insurgent representative in London, called twice today at the British foreign office.

Foreign office quarters in Paris let it be understood they considered a Franco victory inevitable within several months and diplomatic sources indicated Britain and France had offered an "understanding" to the insurgents.

The understanding, which was said to have been offered by French Senator Leon Berard, semi-official French envoy to the insurgent capital, was described as providing for the loan on condition that Italian and German influence be eliminated.

Demand Recognition

Well-informed sources said Berard brought back from Burgos an insurgent demand for legal recognition of Franco's government.

Bound up with this was a demand for return to the insurgents of gold belonging to the Bank of Spain deposited in France by the Spanish government, as well as Spanish art treasures shipped to France for protection.

These sources, said Berard, expected to return to Burgos for conferences with Franco himself. His first negotians were with Francisco Gomez Jordana, insurgent foreign minister.

Berard was said to have brought Foreign Minister Bonnet five specific insurgent promises which they hoped would make immediate recognition possible. These were listed as:

No foreign troops would be allowed to approach the French frontier.

No foreign troops would be allowed to remain in Spain proper, the Spanish colonies or the Balearic Islands after military operations of the civil war are finished.

An expeditionary force of 10,000 men now ready to sail for a conquest of the Island of Minora would be made up exclusively of Spaniards.

Spanish refuges now in France would be taken into insurgent Spain without conditions or reprisals.

A general amnesty would be proclaimed for all government refuges now in France except "criminal leaders."

These assurances, Berard was said to have told Bonnet, are considered by the insurgents as proof of their intention to be good neighbors to France, and to maintain a government free of all foreign influences.

Berard was said to have told Bonnet that in his opinion Italian influence, despite the fact that Franco had willingly accepted any foreign aid he could get to help him win, had not spread beyond Falangista (Fascist) circles.

The real leaders of insurgent Spain, Berard's report said, are much more inclined to a restoration of the monarchy along modified lines, than to the establishment of a true totalitarian system.

town's famous old fortress to destroy its ammunition stores.

Thousands upon thousands of war-weary loyalists streamed across the frontier tonight, surrendering their arms and being herded into barbed wire concentration camps. They joined more than 200,000 military and civilian refugees.

Just a few feet from French soil at Bourg Madame, loyalists feverishly dug a line of trenches to be used for a brief stand to cover the evacuation of the last remnants of government troops from Puigcerda.

Puigcerda Garrison Flees

Nearly 30,000 loyalists of the Puigcerda garrison have fled from the town in the last 48 hours.

Franco's Burgos base said Puigcerad would be occupied today and that by nightfall on early Friday Franco's red and gold flag would be flying all along the frontier.

Negrin, del Vayo and other ministers took refuge on the frontier here "with one foot in Spain and the other in France" after being driven out of Catalonia by insurgent bombers and swift-moving motorized units striking up to the border.

French Take Precautions

Perpignan, France, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—The French government tonight sent additional troops and mobile guards to the frontier to suppress unrest and potential revolt among more than 200,000 Spanish military and civilian refugees in concentration camps.

The plight of more than 20,000 wounded inmates and a shortage of medical personnel and equipment prompted France to call for volunteer doctors and to send four ships to nearby ports to be used as floating hospitals.

Rome, Feb. 8.—Italy announced tonight that she is speeding up war preparations because of a "true and real military alliance" between Great Britain and France and reports spread that officers and specialists of three or four additional army classes were being called to the colors.

(Notices went up throughout Germany calling up two classes of reserves for three months military training.)

The announcement of the speeding up of Fascist military preparations was made by the semiofficial government organ, Informazione Diplomatica, in a reply to British Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement before Commons Monday that British and French fighting strength would be pooled in event of war.

At the same time reports circulated that from 50,000 to 80,000 Italian soldiers were being assembled at certain ports because of "reported French troop movements in Tunisia."

Premier Mussolini was in conference with his Supreme War Council for the third time within three days.

The defense council, which will meet again at 4 p. m. tomorrow was said authoritatively to have discussed the new program, including the calling up of more reservists.

Warn London and Paris

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Feb. 8.—The Nazi press today warned London and Paris to keep hands off in Spain.

Complete unanimity with Italy in a policy of stubborn defense against reported efforts of France and Britain to secure influence in the councils of Franco is reflected in the editorials.

Both the editorials and information from informed quarters show that Berlin and Rome are determined to let nothing—not even formal undertakings such as those of the Anglo-Italian agreement—stand in the way of a program of binding Franco's expanding state unalterably to their close-knit authoritarian system—a development which they expect the insurgent leader to accede to in recognition of Italian and German military aid.

Zionist Asks Britain to Save 'Ghost of Race'

Weizmann Pleads for Palestine Home; Arabs Wrangle Among Selves

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 8.—Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the World Zionist Organization and the Jewish Agency for Palestine, tonight asked Britain to open the gates of the Holy Land to his "disembodied ghost of a race."

Opening negotiations on behalf of Jews at the Arab-Jewish conferences called by Britain to determine the future of her League of Nations mandate over Palestine, Weizmann delivered a "secret" two-hour speech to British officials at St. James's Palace while Arabs wrangled among themselves at a nearby hotel.

Prime Minister Chamberlain received a delegation opposed to the leadership of the exiled Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, Haj Amin Effendi Al Husseini.

Colonial Secretary MacDonald still was unable to reconcile differences between the moderate Arabs and the Mufti's delegates.

Weizmann's Demands

Freedom of Jewish immigration up to the absorptive capacity of Palestine; Britain must maintain the Balfour declaration, of 1917, promising to facilitate establishment of a Jewish national home.

Peace must be maintained under the British mandate.

Jews must be guaranteed the right to buy land.

Jews must not be asked to accept official minority status.

MacDonald told Commons that in 1919 there were approximately 635,000 Arabs and 58,000 Jews in Palestine, and in 1938, there were 1,004,000 Arabs and 411,000 Jews.

Weizmann argued against limiting immigration at a time when hundreds of thousands of Jews were "worse than homeless."

Americans Act

By the Associated Press.

In the United States yesterday there were these refugee developments:

The American Friends (Quaker) Service Committee, a spokesman said, is "making a serious study" of a section of Alaska as a possible site for a permanent colony of Jewish refugees from Germany.

The American Federation of Labor announced it would not oppose a Quaker plan to bring 10,000 refugee children from Europe to the United States under special Congressional legislation.

Four members of the International Commission for the Resettlement of European Refugees left Miami for British Guiana, where they intend to purchase land for a colony.

Madras Mission Parley Praised by Mexican Leader

"When the history of modern missions is written, the Madras (India) Conference will prove to have been a sign-post marking a turning point in missionary enterprises," declared Dr. Baez Camargo, of Mexico, last night at the closing sessions of the Post-Madras Foreign Missions Conference held at the First Baptist Church.

The Madras Missionary Conference last December considered such problems as the church and its relation to the outside world; co-operation and unity. Sixty-four countries were represented.

Also participating in last night's meeting were Dr. Horace E. Cromer and Dr. W. L. Darby, president and executive secretary, respectively, of the Federation of Churches.

Aranha Arrives Today For Roosevelt Parley

Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, Brazilian minister of foreign affairs, will arrive here this afternoon on a mission which Latin American diplomats expect to influence the military and commercial securtiy of the American continent.

His visit resulted from an exchange of notes between Washington and Rio de Janerio in which President Roosevelt expressed a desire to discuss with a high official of Brazil "various questions of great importance in which our two governments are equally interested." President Getulio Vargas accepted the invitation for Aranha.

Fear Felt for 12 Americans in Line Of Japanese Attack

Shanghai, Feb. 8 (AP).—Foreign circles felt increasing concern tonight for 12 American and 53 other foreigners stranded since last summer at Kuling despite a Japanese promise to postpone a long-announced attack on the mountain resort town.

The United States gunboat Oahu was sent from Hankow this morning to Kiukiang to try to help the Americans in Kuling. American authorities, however, still lacked direct information. It was reported no reply was received from Kuling to notes reported to have been dropped by Japanese airmen warning of the contemplated attack.

Japanese are besieging 4,000 Chinese guerrillas entrenched on Lushan, the mountain on which Kuling is perched.

He canceled audiences for a second day, but planned week-end celebrations.

German Finds Opposition to Hitler Wider

Widespread Among All Classes in Reich, Reimann Says Here

The possibilities of underground opposition to Hitler are greater in Germany today than at any time since his rise to power, Gunther Reimann, German economist, told the newly formed Washington chapter of the International Relief Association last night at the Young Women's Christian Association.

Opposition to Hitler is now widespread among all classes in Germany, bankers and manufacturers as well as workers, said Reimann, who recently returned from a tour of Germany. He is the author of "Germany—World Empire or World Revolution," published a few years ago.

German industrialists who originally favored Hitler now despise the Nazi bureaucracy as a parasite taking away their incomes and destroying Germany's economic existence, he said, adding that only a few small businessmen now benefit from the state machine.

"The Nazi Secret Police is the only group in Germany that has any real idea how big the underground movement is," said Reimann.

Although all the old political parties in Germany are now disbanded, Reimann continued, it is impossible to prevent the formation of intimate groups based upon personal contact. These are united chiefly through their contact with organizations outside Germany, he explained.

The Washington sponsors of the International Relief Association, formed in Europe in the 1920's to aid political refugees from all countries, include Catherine Bauer, Frank Bohn, Ewan Clague, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Eleanor Dulles, Alfred Friendly, Gardner Jackson, David Saposs and Ralph Turner, who was chairman of last night's banquet. Mrs. Henry C. Fleischer is treasurer of the local chapter.

Miss Freda Kirchwey, publisher of The Nation and treasurer of the American Committee of the association, also addressed the group.

Hull Blames Business Lag On War Scare

Opposes Barter System Of Totalitarians in Cotton Conference

Secretary of State Hull declared yesterday that recurrent war scares were holding back business recovery.

"So long as there are threats of war," he told newspapermen, "you will not see a boom in business anywhere."

Hull attacked the "hopelessly complicated" barter system employed by the totalitarian states in international trade, describing it as inherently autocratic.

The barter question arose as a result of a conference between Administration officials and Senators Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, and Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, on reducing this country's cotton surplus by stimulating export of cotton.

Hull Explains Difficulties

Hull explained to the Senators the difficulties inherent in any attempted barter arrangement with the totalitarian states.

One question raised at the conference, it was reported, was whether means could be provided to export a large quantity of cotton to Germany. Dr. Walther Funk, successor to Dr. Hjalmar Schacht as German economic minister, in a recent speech said Germany could absorb 3,000,000 bales of cotton if the proper basis could be found for obtaining it.

At his press conference, Hull declared there had been no change in this country's policy of trying to foster world trade through the principle inherent in the reciprocal trade program. He stressed the essential conflict between this policy and the totalitarian barter system.

Ask Proper Appraisal

Asked if there had been any developments in the Spanish situation, Hull said:

"If we could properly appraise international conditions, 50 per cent of our problems would be solved."

Hull, it is understood, was asked at the conference with the Senators why business was not booming, as had been expected. The conference was attended by Hull, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Assistant Secretary of Commerce R. C. Patterson, jr., and technical experts from the State, Agriculture and Commerce departments.

Johnson Act Discussed

Smith said he had urged repeal or modification of the Johnson act prohibiting loans to nations defaulting on debts to the United States Government as well as the anti-dumping laws. He felt that this would boost cotton exports.

Any proposal to repeal the Johnson act, it is understood, will raise the question as to whether the totalitarian states, as well as England, France and other war-debt defaulters, should be given access to this country's capital markets.

Smith and Bankhead said the conference confirmed their conviction that a lower price for cotton would not increase exports, which have dropped sharply this year.

Straight Barter All Right

Hull declared there was no objection to a straight-out barter arrangement. This system, he explained, is resorted to when a farmer who needs a plow mule for the crop season swaps a saddle horse for one.

A totally different situation arises, however, he pointed out, when the barter arrangement is coupled with such a complicated condition as accepting credits in askimarks—the system employed by the German government.

He said several countries, according to information which has come to him, "are getting tired of the "concentrated form of autocracy" inherent in the totalitarian barter device.

Old Canal Survey Will Be Extended To Harper's Ferry

By the Associated Press.

Representative Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, said yesterday he had been assured a National Park service survey for restoration of the old Chesapeake & Ohio Canal would be extended promptly to Harpers Ferry, W. Va.

Randolph said the work from Seneca, Md., to Harpers Ferry would include restoration of the canal, dams locks, and lockhouses.

Randolph said a CCC camp would be established at Harpers Ferry to carry on the work.

The Federal theater project division of WPA has received an offer from a commercial producer for the "swing" version of the "Mikado," now playing under Federal auspices in Chicago, it was learned yesterday.

War Department proposal to waive competitive bidding in procuring the additional planes, but that some proposal of this kind might be approved by the group if sufficient safeguards were provided.

Members of the committee said meanwhile that legislation amending aircraft procurement methods was being drafted at the War Department which would tighten controls over export of military planes.

Several weeks ago and before the present row over the sale of planes to France broke out in the Senate, it was stated, a new aircraft procurement bill containing added restrictions on sale of planes abroad was submitted to the committee. This was to have been a part of the emergency defense bill reported by the group yesterday, but as there was committee opposition to other phases of the bill, it was withdrawn by the department for further study, members said.

House members said they expected some legislation at this session dealing with the problem. Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, chief senatiroal critic of the French plane deal, said yesterday that he was preparing legislation to further limit sale of latest type airplanes.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee meeting at which members were to have voted on making public the testimony on the recent plane sales to France, was again postponed and the group will probably vote tomorrow on the matter.

Under the new War Department mobilization plan, officers said, greater reliance will be placed on Reserve officers. Upon declaration of war, the existing corps area commander and his staff at Baltimore—as with other corps areas throughout the country—would take the field with the Regular Army. Their field command would later be augmented by the National Guard.

A reserve unit would take over Corps Area Headquarters under a Regular Army officer and begin its task of mobilizing and supplying an army. The number of reserve units — "Service Commands" — which would handle the recruiting and drafting of a million man army, is being reduced—in the Third Corps Area from 38 to 12.

There will be one recruiting unit for the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania, it was said. Reservists will co-operate with civilian committees in securing sufficient recruits to fill the Army's needs until a universal draft law is passed. Five other such "Service Commands" would take charge of "reception centers" at Camp Sims here, Fort Belvoir, Va.; Fort Meade, Md.; Fort Monroe, Va., and Camp Lee, Va.

Changes in the Third Corps Area will not be as extensive as in other sections, officers said, for the three military areas to be created will generally conform to the old divisional organization. Headquarters of the new areas will coincide with Eightieth Infantry Division Headquarters at Richmond, Va.; Seventy-ninth Division at Philadelphia, and Ninety-ninth Division in Pittsburgh. However, the separate organization heretofore maintained by the Cavalry and Coast Artillery will probably be brought into the new areas, it was said. The new setup will be made permanent next October.

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee meets today in executive session. Chairman Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said the group will decide on plans for hearings. The House Naval Affairs Committee, concluding two weeks of hearings on legislation to establish 12 naval air bases, will fly to Florida to inspect several proposed sites for major naval air base.

The first phase of the fleet's Atlantic war games—the simulated attack on American-owned Culebra Islands in the Caribbean involving 7,000 or more bluejackets and marines—has been concluded, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Four battleships, and nearly three-score warplanes engaged in the maneuvers, officially designated merely "fleet landing exercise No. 5." New weapons, equipment and tactics were tested.

The fleet—an armada of 140 ships and 600 aircraft—will continue in the maneuvers until March 5. Involving a test of the Panama Canal defenses, the tactics are the first major fleet exercises in the Atlantic in five years.

In action at the Culebra Island land maneuvers were the first brigade of the fleet marine force, about 1,500 officers and men from Quantico, Va., as well as the crews of the battleships New York, Texas, Arkansas and the demilitarized battleship Wyoming.

It included these major appropriations: Veterans' Administration, $561,093,000; Social Security Board, $350,000,000; Civilian Conservation Corps, $295,000,000; Railroad Retirement Board, $123,404,000, and Civil Service Commission, $91,404,000.

Senate Fight Likely

TVA supporters, unable to make a last-minute attempt to restore the reduction in funds because of parliamentary complications, said they were counting on the Senate to bring the total back to at least $39,000,000.

The House voted last year against including money in the independent offices bill for starting construction of Gilbertsville Dam. The Senate inserted it and finally won out after the measure had been held up for weeks.

Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, offered the amendment reducing the TVA fund. He and his backers contended the agency was hurting coal miners with its power program, carrying on unauthorized activities, and running up unnecessary expenses.

public assistance and public works programs revised and co-ordinated as a supporting backlog.

The waiting period for unemployment compensation would be shortened, probably to one week, with the benefit period lengthened, possibly to 13 weeks.

Byrnes also proposes strengthening of the United States Unemployment Service, its co-ordination with related agencies and establishment of one office where a worker can register for unemployment compensation and obtain employment assistance.

One of the most controversial features would provide for 50 per cent Federal contributions toward assistance to the aged, the blind, and dependent children, with the stipulation that Federal contributions be increased for those States where the per capita income is less than for the country. The latter provision has the general support of Southern Senators, but is expected to be opposed by Senators from the higher income Northeast.

Either a part of the Byrnes bill, or introduced later as a separate measure, would be the unemployment committee's far-reaching recommendations for restricting political activities of Federal employes.

Senator Byrnes played a leading role in holding the House $150,000,000 slash in the deficiency relief bill despite opposition of the President. Byrnes devised the so-called "snow amendment" which limits reductions in relief rolls to 5 per cent in February and March. President Roosevelt, who Tuesday asked Congress to appropriate the $150,000,000 it lopped from the bill, said it was because of the 5 per cent proviso that he approved the curtailed $725,000,000 measure.

Another approach to a permanent relief program was proposed in the House Monday by Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, who led the House fight for the deficiency bill slash. Moving for ultimate return of relief administration to the States, Woodrum would slash relief estimates for the next fiscal year to $1,120,000,000 and co-ordinate limited Federal relief activities under a new "unemployment relief administration."

Board Urges Jobless Pay After a Week

Report Hits 6-Week Delay; Favors Halving Employer Contribution

Unemployment benefits would be collectible the week after an eligible applicant is out of work, instead of six weeks afterward, if an amendment to the District unemployment compensation act recommended yesterday by the board is adopted by Congress.

Another recommendation would halve contributions to the unemployment fund by District employers, and might go even lower.

A third recommendation included in the annual board report submitted to Congress yesterday, would amend the social security act so as to provide unified State control of unemployment operations.

$10,366,449 Reserve

The report, prepared by Director John A. Marshall and his staff, revealed a balance in the board's reserve fund of $10,366,449. It was suggested that this is a desirable figure at which to maintain the fund, but that to keep it from growing large, a considerable reduction is needed in the amout of taxes collected from the District's 15,000 employers.

In the past year there were 43,992 claimants for unemployment benefits from among the 175,000 employes covered by the act, it was stated. Payments to the 28,182 found eligible totaled $1,675,000. At the same time a total of $6,476,443 was collected from employers under the 3 per cent of pay roll totals set by the existing act.

Seek to End Delay

It was explained that, because of other rigid requirements, a waiting period of six weeks often results from the time a worker is separated from his job before he can collect any money from the board. This includes an enforced three-week "waiting period," a fourth week without compensation, and a further delay because the basis for reckoning compensation is based on reports that are due quarterly and thus do not provide cumulative data necessary for a complete, immediate computation.

Director Marshall suggests that compensation be based on the highest quarter in the preceding eight quarters. Divided by thirteen it would give his weekly wage, and he would be given half of that.

Unequal burdens placed on District employers with less than eight employes subjected to a lower District tax and those still required to pay the national 3.15 percentage, make advisable, it was said, amendment of the national act so that the District and States would have undivided control of their own unemployment operations.

4,166 Get Jobs

Grants to the board by the Social Security Board were $563,436, and $164,478 for the District Employment Service Center. A total of 2,156 white and 2,010 colored applicants were placed in regular or temporary jobs through the United States Employment Service.

It was recommended that the board be given a new and adequate building to house its force.

Mealor Infant Improved After Blood Transfusion

Children's Hospital reported yesterday that 3-month-old Robert Mealor was much improved.

The baby's condition was so serious on Tuesday that his mother, Mrs. Ann Mealor, 2309 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, applied to the Third Precinct station for a policeman to volunteer for a blood transfusion. Policeman Ernest Waters, station clerk, responded.

Hospital physicians stated that while Waters' blood did not match, they were able to supply the necessary help.

Glass Expects 1940 'Purge' Against Him, Byrd

Glass

letter to him reserved the right to consult on Virginia appointments "Nancy Astor, the Duchess of Windsor, the WPA, a Virginia moonshiner, Gov. Price or Charlie McCarthy."

"I cheerfully absolve Charlie McCarthy from giving the advice designed to discredit the Virginia Senators, and the record shows that none of the persons named was consulted except Price," Glass said in his statement.

The Senator called the President's light reference a "trivial evasion" of his inquiry as to whether press reports of Gov. Price's patronage powers were true and said the President "disdained a frank answer to my simple question."

"Instead, the President wrote me a page essay on the requirements of the Constitution as to Federal appointments," said the Virginian, "whereupon I ventured to reply that I had a fairly intimate knowledge of the fundamental law and nowhere discovered anything in it requiring Federal appointments to be made by and with the advice and consent of a State Governor."

Glass repeated the charge he made before the Senate Judiciary Committee that the Attorney General "never had the slightest idea of giving consideration to the recommendations of the two Virginia Senators because the Governor of Virginia had been promised the right of veto on nominations that they made."

Despite the President's assertion that this was untrue, Glass said "the record demonstrates that both statements are true."

Twice in his letter the Senator alleged "purge" efforts directed at both himself and Glass.

He said former Gov. Peery of Virginia "was not, nor, in my belief, was any other Governor since the foundation of the State, invited to project himself into a scheme to 'purge' the two United States Senators from a State by practically vetoing their recommendations for executive appointment."

The six and a half page mimeographed statement was handed out personally to reporters by Glass, who passed the afternoon preparing it. He said Senator Byrd would make an additional statement today.

Gallinger Class Held 58% Tubercular

Nurses Overworked, Situation 'Unspeakable,' Representatives Say

Conditions so shocking "seven out of twelve nurses graduating last year contracted tuberculosis from overwork" were charged to Gallinger Hospital yesterday at a meeting of the House District Committee.

"The Gallinger situation is right on the doorstep of Congress and I think we should wade into it," declared Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, who made the charges.

Gallinger Hospital authorities last night described Schulte's figures as "obviously inaccurate." Although complete records were not immediately available, they said it "should be evident to anyone" that Gallinger graduated more than 12 nurses last year.

"The actual number graduated," one said, "was 40 or 50. And it is unlikely as many as seven of those developed tuberculosis during their courses here."

Representative Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, new committee member, said he had been "making a little investigation around the District on my own" and that he had found Gallinger "unspeakable."

Held "Unsafe"

"I'm telling you the nurses there are not safe. If some cities of 20,000 population had that hospital they'd feel like going out and burning it down. It doesn't begin to serve Washington," he declared.

Commissioner Hazen said he considered the personnel problem at Gallinger the "worst thing there."

"The situation there is not good. We have asked for an increase in the budget to remedy it, but it will not reach Congress. The Budget Bureau has already cut it out," he said.

Budget Bureau Blamed

"Yes, it is the result of the Budget Bureau," Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, declared.

Chairman Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, asked Commissioner Hazen's office to supply committee members with summaries of District health findings by the United States Public Health Service.

"The trouble about an announced tour is that they get ready for you," he said. "The best kind of investigation is done single handed, as Representative Bolles did his."

Bolles said his visits had included the police and fire departments. The police department, he said, is undermanned and "burdened by Federal duties."

Schulte joined in laying the blame for "many District ills" to the Budget Bureau.

Members Asked to Fight

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, said, "If the Budget Bureau doesn't cut out the estimates, the sub-committee on appropriations does. We have had the same problems up here since time immemorial, and we always snag on the money."

Chairman Randolph asked that sub-committee chairmen from the District Committee attend meetings of the sub-committee on District of Columbia appropriations and "present your claims."

"I don't think we have been in the habit of fighting to keep appropriations in."

Representative Ross Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the sub-cimmittee on District of Columbia appropriations, said he did not recall District committee members "ever coming before us."

"The only thing they've ever asked us for was money for that Griffenhagen report, and we gave them that," he said.

Upperman Leads Warring Jury to Lunch from outsiders was a relay of deputy marshals and police officers who attended him in shifts.

Several other witnesses were sequestered and guarded. These included the alleged Warring contact men and jurors who were said to have been approached with bribe propositions.

Warring and Upperman were ordered to show cause next Monday why they should not be held in contempt and jailed for as long as the court thinks proper, there being no limit to his power. The hearing will be without a jury.

Pine and Assistant District Attorneys Wilson and Fihelly filed the charges after an investigation ordered by Justice Laws. Pihe handed up four long informations and they were signed in open court. Listening in silence while Pine told the gist of the technical pleadings were Emmitt Warring, 34; his lawyers, William B. O'Connell and Harry T. Whelan; Charles (Rags) Warring, 30, trigger man of the gang; his brother, Leo Paul, 35, and their counsel, former District Attorney Rover.

Also in court were Gordon L. R. Sadur, income tax expert, and his lawyer, Irvin A. Goldstein.

The Warrings and Sadur were tried last autumn for conspiracy to defraud the Government by concealing from income tax agents huge profits on the $2,000,000 a year Warring numbers business. The first trial ended with the jury hopelessly deadlocked, 7 to 5 for conviction. The second trial was voided Tuesday when Justice Laws considered the evidence that its jury might have been tampered with. Sadur was declared not involved in this.

Bond Increased

The Warrings bond was raised from $5,000 to $50,000 each when the jury fixing investigation was ordered. After Emmitt was cited yesterday his bond was increased $100 more.

When Pine made no charges against Charles and Leo Paul, Rover appealed to the court to reduce their bail. He had remained silent during the investigation, he said, but he now felt that the bonds were unjust "financially and physchologically."

"I should have been surprised, grieved and disappointed if they had been involved," Rover said.

Justice Laws said he would let the bonds stand at $50,000 each. He said he would see about setting a date for the third trial of the conspiracy case after the contempt man has been placed in custody?" Justice Laws said.

"May I ask whether Mr. Upper- charges were disposed of.

"Your honor, I'd rather not answer that at this time, if you don't mind," Pine answered.

Marshal a Veteran

That Upperman was remaining with guards because of the charges became known late Tuesday night. He is 57, a veteran of 12 years service as a marshal and had been in charge of many important juries. He is known for strictness in seeing that nobody approaches his juries while they are deliberating.

The charges of jury tampering in the Warring conspiracy case, which were submitted to Justice Laws yesterday by District Attorney Pine, follow, in substance:

Criminal Contempt No. 98 asserts: Emmitt Warring, on January 15, at the Brown Derby Restaurant, asked Harry Fine to tell Carl T. Denekas, who was called for jury duty in the second Warring trial, that Warring would pay Denekas $600 if Denekas got on the jury and "would vote not guilty and see that things came out right." Fine did this on January 29, at or near Denekas' home, 108 Varnum street northwest, and again on January 30 at Sherman avenue and Barry street northwest. Warring, on January 30, at the Brown Derby, asked Denekas what he was going to do to aid Warring. Denekas was seated in the trial, as juror No. 1. A contempt rule asked against Emmitt Warring and anyone else shown to be involved.

Criminal Contempt No. 99 asserts: Emmitt Warring on January 24 telephoned Thomas Harrison Quinlan and asked if he knew Edward D. Spedden, of 2412 Chain Bridge road northwest, and Robert L. Sayles, of 4706 Eighth street northwest, who were called for jury duty in the second Warring trial. Quinlan said he did. Warring invited Quinlan to his home, where he told Quinlan he was looking for somebody on the jury list who could be fixed. A contempt rule asked against Emmitt Warring and anyone else shown at the hearing to be involved.

Charges in Retrial

Criminal contempt No. 100 asserts: Deputy United States Marshal John B. Upperman on February 1, took the oath not to speak to the jurors in the second Warring trial or to let anybody else do so and was placed in custody of the 12 jurors and 2 alternates. That evening Emmitt Warring sent to Upperman at the Continental Hotel, where the jury was kept, 2 quarts of whiskey, which Upperman and some of the jurors drank. Two more quarts were sent and consumed February 3. Emmitt Warring on February 5 got in touch with Upperman at the hotel and asked whether Upperman wanted any more whiskey. Contempt rules asked against Warring, Upperman and anyone else shown to be involved.

Criminal contempt No. 101 asserts: Before the first Warring trial started, Emmitt Warring caused Upperman to be informed that if the verdict was satisfactory Warring would take care of a $150 note Upperman owed, which was soon to be due. In the trial Warring told Upperman he "would send something over to him." This meant liquor with which Upperman was to seek favor with the jurors. Upperman and another deputy marshal were placed in charge of the jury on December, 1938, and forbidden to talk to the jurors and ordered to shield them from outside influences. The first day the jury was deliberating Warring sent Upperman 2 quarts of liquor, which Upperman shared with some of the jury. Similar packages were sent after that. "Upperman spoke favorably of the Warrings whenever the opportunity afforded to certain of the jurors." While the jury were deliberating Warring caused Upperman to be given a $10 bill. After the jury was discharged hopelessly deadlocked, Warring caused Upperman to be given $100. Contempt rules asked against Warring, Upperman and anyone else shown to be involved.

Dr. Woronow was slugged and robbed of $81 and a gold wrist watch. Dr. Woronow lives with his sister, Miss Rose Woronow, at 4919 Ninth street northwest.

4 Numbers Aides Plead Guilty And Testify Against Quijano

Numbers

Quijano's home Monday night by Detective Lieut. Joseph Shimon, who listened to him for an hour.—Editor's note.)

Hawkins gave the jurors an hour's lecture on how the numbers racket is operated. Writers like himself, he said, collect bets which they turn in to pickup men who relay them to the backers. He said Quijana was his backer. The pickup men later return and pay off the winners at 600 to 1, a nickel bet paying $30.

Hawkins said that when he was arrested December 21 he telephoned Quijano and told him trouble had come and asked for the help promised him if he was arrested. "I'm not in the business any more," Hawkins said Quijana replied. "Well, you was in the business up until today," Hawkins retorted.

Hawkins pleaded guilty, he said, because "I had been thinking and I decided to let the law take its course. I wanted to tell the truth." He said he was not promised clemency and did not expect it.

Hawkins told of efforts to get Quijano to post bond and pay for an appeal for Helen Johnson, colored, of 416 Twentieth street northwest, who is serving 6 to 15 months for numbers writing.

Juror W. Wylie Giffin stopped Hawkins when he started to leave the stand, asking for more details about his association with Quijano. Justice Proctor asked questions until Giffin was satisfied.

Sidney Schwadron, unemployed hotel worker, of Atlantic City, N. J., testified that last fall he called on Quijano with a check for $60 which was paid to a bondsman named Weinstein as a premium for a bond for Mrs. Johnson. The bank dishonored the check, Schwadron said, and he got the cash from Quijano.

Mrs. Johnson testified that she wrote numbers and turned them in to Hawkins and that she and Hawkins went to Quijano's office two weeks after her arrest.

Her husband, Lincoln Lee Johnson, said after his wife pleaded guilty he went to Quijano for help and Quijano said no lawyer could do anything about the case and refused to advance the $100 needed to handle the appeal. Johnson admitted, on cross-examination by Kelly, that he was convicted ten years ago, once for having liquor and twice for assault.

Alice H. Haight, of 520 Twentieth street northwest, testified she was Hawkins' maid, that she had written numbers for him and that once Quijano himself collected the slips.

The Quijano jurors are William L. Santman, 42, corporation official 1312 Sumerset place northwest; Frank M. Newberry, 58, builder, 6215 Thirty-second place northwest; James B. Powers, 34, insurance officials, 3002 Rodman street northwest; W. Wylie Giffin, 43, Western Union wire chief, 1612 Kearney street northeast; Harvey H. Archives Guardian Makes 'Whooeee,' Routs Starlings

Starlings are being kept off the National Archives Building by blood-curdling cries and clashing paddles.

A middle-aged man, armed with a pair of wooden paddles marches forth daily at 4:30 p. m., lets out a hair-straightening howl and pounds the boards together.

His cry is a cross between the screech of the hoot owl and a hog call. Instead of saying "whooo" like an owl or "whooeee" as pig callers do, he rares back and lets the starlings have "whoooeee" at the top of his lungs.

He says "it scares the feathers off the birds" and the clatter of his paddles adds to their confusion and fright.

Privilege Tax Deductions Held Free of Penalty

The Board of Tax Appeals held yesterday the District must apply legal deductions from the business privilege tax before calculating penalties for late filing of returns.

In a decision handed down by Jo V. Morgan the District was directed to refund the Highway Engineering & Construction Co. $276.75.

The company maintained it paid a tangible personal property tax of $1,104.98, which is deductible from the business privilege levy, and that it was entitled to a deduction before the 15 per cent penalty was calculated. It admitted filing late, but contended the District affixed the 25 per cent penalty on the entire privilege tax.

Movie Quiz Contest Competitors, Stand By!

Major Winners to Be Announced February 20; A Few 'Champions' Come to the Top; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THOSE PRIZE AWARDS are not so far away. I don't mean the ones the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences will bestow upon the foremost artists and practitioners of the film industry during the current month, but the ones that will reward the millions—so they say—of contestants who took time out from their daily occupations to participate in the Movie Quiz Contest that was made one of the vital factors in arousing interest in the notion that "The Motion Picture Is Your Best Entertainment" and "This Is the Movies' Greatest Year." You may recall the slogans, especially if you filled out your entrance blank, wrote your 50-word essay and sent them in to the New York headquarters of the contest.

BELL

Everyone with an eye on the screaming eagle must remember that the grand prize in the Movie Quiz Contest is the more or less round sum of $50,000. I seem to recall no one, the present state of the Nation being what it is, who couldn't use that rotund amount of the legal coin of the realm. Someone will be permitted to when this business finally is wound up. And now we seem to be getting to the point.

The management of the loewcal Loew houses—the Capitol, Palace and Columbia, in case you had forgotten, informs us that on the night of Monday, February 20, winners of the grand prize of $50,000 and the lesser prizes of $25,000, $10,000, $5,000, $2,500, $1,000 and the more diminutive rewards for assiduous labor will be announced in their three houses, already named. It is to be presumed, although I have no definite assurance to that effect, that similar announcement will be made in the Warner houses, RKO-Keith's and all the others whose patrons were made eligible for this scramble for rich monetary returns.

Selection of Winners a Tremendous Task

The selection of the winners of the Movie Quiz Contest has been a Herculean task. For many months a large staff of experts have been continuously engaged in sorting, filing, cataloguing, classifying and otherwise rendering orderly and comprehensible the tremendous number of booklets filed by the fans of the country ravenous for a piece of all that money.

The judges, whose decisions mean an embryo fortune for several thousand ambitious citizens, as has been revealed here long since, include Mrs. Ogden Reid, Dr. James E. West, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, the Hon. Bruce Barton and Henrik Willem Van Loon.

A little prior to 9 p. m., on the nerve-tensing night of February 20, a bonded representative of the Chemical National Bank, of New York, will deliver a sealed envelope to the managers of Loew's Capitol, Palace and Columbia theaters, containing the names of the winners of the handsome money awards. Obviously, the reading of 5,404 names will not be possible, the running schedules of theatrical performances being what they are, so only the top national money winners and the winners resident in and around the District of Columbia will be announced. The complete lists of winners will be posted in the lobbies of the Loew theaters immediately after the announcements have been made from their stages.

This department has no possible way of knowing, or even estimating, the number of localites, who may have entered the Movie Quiz Contest. It has a well founded suspicion, nevertheless, that there were thousands of them. Which brings us to the point that the Capitol Theater only seats a meager 3,400 people, the Palace about a thousand fewer than that and the Columbia only a comparative handful. It might be well to get moving early on Monday night, February 20, in case you wish to be among those present when your name is read out as the winner of that $50,000 prize!

"Box-Office Champions" Bob Up Again

While we are on the topic of potential prize-winners, it might be interesting to revert to an ancient custom of reciting here the "Box-Office Champions" as announced by the Motion Picture Herald, foremost of the motion picture trade papers, on the basis of its poll of bona fide box-office statements of the principal theaters in the so-called "key cities" of the United States.

The issue of the Herald bearing date of February 4, recapitulates the "Box-Office Champions" of a month no more recent than December. And only six champions emerged from the ticket-wicket melees, at that. With one possible exception, however, they are real champions on the basis of Washington appraisal of the pictures which the country at large so enthusiastically supported.

The half-dozen winners are listed in this order: "Angels With Dirty Faces," a personal triumph for Jimmy Cagney, and not so bad for Pat O'Brien, the "Dead End" kids and Ann Sheridan, of whom you may have heard on this page yesterday; "Dawn Patrol," starring Errol Flynn, one of the President's Birthday Celebration visitors; "Sweethearts," which I still contend is the cinema's outstanding light musical production, to date; "Hard to Get," with Dick Powell and Olivia de Havilland, and that perennial bobber-upper on all lists of the "best something-or-other-of-the-year," "Out West With the Hardys."

So there is your list of "champs." It may be possible to detect the one I think does not belong.

By an odd coincidence, the "Selected Motion Pictures" brochure from the Will H. Hays office comes along on almost the same mail. The consensus of opinion as to the best films released up to the date of February 1 embraces so many feature productions of which Washington has not even heard, up to the time of writing, that their summarization here takes on largely the guise of a work of supererogation. The preview committees seem to like an enormous number of pictures. The only ones in which the Capital might be interested are "The Great Man Votes," "Son of Frankenstein," "Stand Up and Fight," "They Made Me A Criminal," "Wings of the Navy," "Zaza" and "Sweethearts." Not a bad list, even so.

Nancy Kelly Encounters First Feminine Competition

Nancy Kelly is more or less stepping out socially as her motion picture career progresses. It will be recalled that the youthful and ingenuous Miss Kelly, proselyted from the New York stage to the precincts of the cinema, so far, in the gelatins, has been surrounded almost completely by males—handsome young devils, to be sure, but still affording Miss Kelly none of the camaraderie of her own gentler gender.

In "Submarine Patrol," if memory serves, she was practically the only feminine member of the cast of importance. Certainly that was true in "Jesse James," despite the presence of Jane Darwell in the cast as the mother of the titular figure in the play. Now Miss Kelly is being featured with a considerable coterie of her own sex that might, understandably, give her what is colloquially known as a "run for her money." In "Tail Spin," prints of which were delivered in Washington last Sunday by a pulchritudinous band of "air messengers," Miss Kelly finds herself tossed in with Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Joan Davis and Jane Wyman. The competition ought to be a little stiff.

Wonder which arrangement of her casting schedules Miss Kelly likes the better? Not that it is any of my business. But then, there is that matter of Richard Greene, the handsome dog!

And speaking of Mr. Greene, the dimpled young English actor who seems to be doing so well for himself, there is a bit of a surprise to be found in a recent popularity vote. This one is conducted by the "Greetings" column appearing in the magazine Young America. Each week this publication offers its readers the opportunity to purchase autographed photographs of various screen stars. Tabulation of requests for the photographs of the four leading stars offered thus far, as announced by Mark A. Schubert, motion picture editor of Young America, show the following results: Richard Greene, 3,075; Tyrone Power, 1,686; Deanna Durbin, 1,846; Errol Flynn, 924, and Wayne Morris, 807.

As I say, Mr. Green seems to be doing all right for himself.

King Vidor will do a story of his own, a subtler version of "It Can't Happen Here." Sounds exciting and timely.

To those who predicted the battle of the century between Jimmy Cagney and George Raft when they started working together in "Each Dawn I Die," I'd like to say that Jimmy has just about persuaded George to build a home near his on Martha's Vineyard. Says he needs another actor for those plays he stages in his barn.

Guess Elso Lanchester made a deal and paid off that income tax, because hubby, Charles Laughton, soon will be with us for a Paramount picture. And it looks as though it would be A. J. Cronin's "Hatter's Castle."

When Clarence Muse was about to sign a contract to act in Bobby Breen's next picture, "Way Down South," he said, "Wait a minute. I'm not selling you my book. I don't own the rights to it." It was then they learned he'd written one with that title.

Now that Lionel Barrymore has moved to the valley, they're trying to elect him mayor of Reseda. But his interest there days is watching the midget races held in San Marino. Yes, they put motors in scooters these days, and Lionel has offered a cup for the winner.

Pete Smith, who entertains in "Shorts," eats onions to build up his voice even though they tear him down—socially.

Myra Kingsley is setting up astrological charts for the winners on Jesse Lasky's radio program. But doesn't tell us how long we'll have to wait to find out if her predictions come true!

Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt isn't wasting any time. While awaiting in Pasadena the arrival of that long-legged swooping bird known as the stork, she's long-distance decorating their new home in Worthington Valley, Md.

Omar Kiam, who's just finished a 5-year stretch with Sam Goldwyn says he's heard Sam is difficult to work with, but he found him tops. Omar goes East to do a collection for one of our biggest houses.

Speaking of fashion, Kenneth Hopkins did a coral pink grosgrain pillbox hat with a long veil and what do you think held it on? A grasshopper—which I bought off a model's head at The Tropics.

Sidney Lanfield and Basil Rathbone were discussing the plight of a young actor who made headlines for an escapade with a fair lovely. "Seems to me," said Lanfield, "he's a victim of high blonde pressure."

What fascinating critters these writers are. Talked with Quentin Reynolds, just back from Germany and whose astounding articles about it are running now in Colliers. He came out to make speeches to some of our private citizens, at their request. He said everywhere you go in London, you run into situations like this: While waiting for the lift in the Daily Express Building, Lord Beaverbrook, owner, stood beside him. Only one lift was running, but two shafts were beside it. Reynolds said, "Economy, eh? When do you use the other two?" "We Don't. Ordered them a year ago, but they haven't had time to make or deliver them," said Beaverbrook. "And that molding above those murals is supposed to be chromium—that was ordered a long time ago, too."

Spring is on everyone's lips—but no eagerness on the faces of those talking about it.

Tough Guys Find Gold in Junk Dump

A treasure hunt, with all the thrill and excitement of an early day gold rush, was launched by Universal's band of Little Tough Guys last week when a technician found several pieces of old gold on a borrowed "junk yard" set for their new film, "Code of the Streets."

The junk yard had been rented as a "character set" and moved by a truck caravan to the studio. During a frantic search for treasure, which took up most of their lunch hour, the boys salvaged an old gold watch case, a link chain, two bracelets and enough other discarded antiques to reach a total valuation of $15.

Lizard Interrupts Notable Film Career

Mistaking Small Reptile for Snake Cost Ferike Boros Two Years When She Fell Down Stairs

By Frederick C. Othman.
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Feb. 8.—How a lizard put a serious crimp in the movie career of one of Hollywood's best actresses was the surprising story that Miss Ferike Boros told today.

Miss Boros, the Hungarian actress who appeared in more than 1,000 stage plays abroad and in New York before coming to Hollywood nine years ago to become one of the movies' better mothers, likes gardening.

"It was nearly two years ago," she said, "that I was out in my back yard, helping the gardener place some plants. I was scratching around on the terrace, when I saw something move. I thought it was a snake.

"I fell over backwards and tumbled down a flight of stone steps and hurt my hip, and only this winter have I recovered enough to go back to work. After I fell and hurt myself, I discovered that it wasn't a snake. It was only a harmless little lizard, but it certainly proved costly to me."

Agile as Ballet Dancer

Miss Boros, who is 60 years old but remains as agile as she was when she did toe dancing in the gay nineties, completed last week her first role since she encountered the lizard. The picture was "Love Affair" and she played the part of Miss Irene Dunne's "landlady."

She had us to tea in her hillside home overlooking University City. She mentioned the fact that she was a physical culturist and we said maybe she could give us some advice on how to pare off our baywindow.

"It will be simple," she said, pouring cream into our tea.

"The main thing is diet," she added, after she had given us two lumps of sugar.

"You must not eat sweets," she continued, passing us cookies with raisins in them.

Gained on Good Advice

So we gained 5 pounds while listening to this good advice. We also learned something of how an actress had to work in the old days, before there were sound cameras.

"It was real work," she said. "I remember I was in 'Friendly Enemies' for four seasons and for three more I starred in 'The World and Woman.' There weren't any retakes then. But there were plenty of rehearsals. We had to know our parts. We literally had to live them.

"And that, I think, made for better acting than we usually see in Hollywood today."

Miss Boros gave us another piece of candy and urged that we start that diet at once. She said also that she hoped we could return soon for a chicken dinner, with paprika dressing, and Hungarian coffee, with whipped cream.

Forgotten Classifications

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has listed all its nominations for best actors, best actresses, best pictures and best this and that—and somehow seems to have forgotten one of the most important classifications in the business.

It hasn't said a word about child performers, who have appeared in more pictures this season, probably, than ever before. The Shirley Temples, Jane Withers, Deanna Durbins, Jackie Coopers, Tommy Kellys, Frankie Thomases, et al., certainly ought to have at least one gold-plated Oscar among them.

George Abbott Comedy Next At National

Noteworthy Films and Stage Bills Mark New Theater Week

An American high school is the setting for "What a Life," the latest George Abbott hit to concern the trials of the adolescent generation, which will open a week's engagement at the National Theater next Monday. The comedy, in its second season in New York, has a cast headed by Eddie Bracken, a lad already familiar to local theatergoers for his interpretation of the bedeviled Billy Randolph of "Brother Rat." Others in the cast are Connie Nickerson, Marshall Bradford, Fraye Gilbert, Irving Morrow, Fred Clarke and Hope Landin. The innovation of low-scale prices, which Producer Abbott has found vastly successful in the present road tour, will be continued for the local engagement. Matinees will be given as usual on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

"Idiot's Delight' opens this morning at the Palace Theater with Norma Shearer and Clark Gable in the roles which Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt created on the stage of the National Theater several seasons ago when Robert E. Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize Play received its world premier. Mr. Sherwood did the adaptation for the screen and has retained the anti-war aroma of the original, expanding the single setting of the Alpine hotel to a larger canvass through the years which transformed Irene from a smart trapeze artist to a mysterious Russian adventuress. With his troupe of six dancers, Les Blondes, Gable is the dancing entertainer of the smart hotel. Also in Director Clarence Brown's cast are Burgess Meredith, Edward Arnold, Charles Coburn, Joseph Schildkraut, Pat Patterson and Laura Hope Crews.

Charles Laughton, after something of an absence from the screen, returns tomorrow to the Earle Theater as "The Beachcomber," a character adapted from W. Somerset Maugham's story, "Vessel of Wrath." Elsa Lanchester, the actor's wife, plays a sanctimonious lady missionary in the Dutch Indies, intent on saving the drunken reprobate. His unsuccessful escape from her furnishes a vastly amusing plot. The film was made in England by the newly formed company, Mayflower Pictures, under the aegis of Mr. Laughton and Erich Pommer, the film's director. Tyrone Guthrie and Robert Newton are also in the cast. On the Earle stage, Russ Morgan and his band of radio favorites will make their first Washington appearance. Others on the variety bill will be Shea and Raymond, the Reddingtons and Larry Collins.

Alice Faye, Constance Bennett and Nancy Kelly are the leading characters in the predominantly feminine cast of "Tailspin," opening at the Capitol Theater tomorrow. The three noted charmers are supported by Charles Farrell, Joan Davis, Jane Wyman and Kane Richmond, in a story of women's part in aviation. Roy Del Ruth directed this Darryl F. Zanuck production. The latest edition of Benny Davis' "Star Dust Revue" will be the stage production at the Capitol. In this revue, Davis, who has offered as newcomers such well knowns as Jackie Heller and Martha Raye, will present his latest finds in the world of entertainers.

"Gunga Din" continues its engagement at RKO-Keith's Theater with Cary Grant, Victor McLaglen and Douglas Fairbanks, jr. The three stars are a trio of swashbuckling lads in the service of Victoria, Empress of India, in the film which Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht were inspired to write from Rudyard Kipling's famous poem. Sam Jaffe, remembered from "Lost Horizon," has the title role and Eduardo Ciannelli, Joan Fontaine, Montagu Love, Robert Coote and Lumsden Hare are also in the cast. Pathe News completes the bill at the Fifteenth street house.

A Technicolor salute to the Blue Grass State, "Kentucky," will open a return F street run tomorrow at the Columbia Theater. Blue grass photography, notably at the Derby, furnishes an authentic setting to the story of rivalry between two great families of the racing stables. Loretta Young and Richard Greene head the cast in which Walter Brennan's work has won him praise for one of the finest supporting roles of the year. Others in the cast include Douglas Dumbrille, Karen Morley and Moroni Olsen.

With sky scenes filmed through the aid of the United States Navy, "Wings of the Navy" opens a second downtown engagement at the Metropolitan Theater beginning tomorrow after a week at the Earle Theater. The story is of two brothers who love the same girl, the three pivotal parts being played by George Brent, Olivia de Havilland and John Payne. A selected program of short subjects and newsreels fills out the bill.

"Dark Rapture," the Leila Roosevelt-Armand Denis film of their adventures in the Belgium Congo, continues its engagement at the Belasco Theater. Made at the express wish of the King of the Belgians, Mr. and Mrs. Denis' latest expedition took them among the giants and the pygmies of the center of the Dark Continent, as well as across the Sahara on the fleet of American trucks. Their camera catches the capture of young elephants, the little people building bridges and a grass fire that nearly destroys their equipment.

"The State of the Nation—1939," the March of Time's most recent episode, will be the featured short at the Trans-Lux Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. It is the story of present-day America. Other subjects include "Blue Grass," a turf history featuring Man o' War and ending with a race between Seabiscuit and War Admiral. "The Practical Pig," Walt Disney's latest successor to the "Three Little Pigs," is also on the bill at the newsreel's home.

With the Capital City as the background for its characters, "Washington Merry-Go-Round" will close at the Wardman Park Theater on Saturday night. This is Leon Pearson's play which the Washington Civic Theater has produced as its first original production. The cast of 49 includes Arthur Bernard, Richard Walsh, Milton Freedman, Mimi Norton, Harry Westcott, John Latimer and Murray Sheehan.

The as yet untitled revue at the Gayety Theater, the Ninth street burlesque theater, will include comic Bob Ferguson, a large chorus and as extra added charmer, Carrie Finnell. The new attraction will open, as usual, with a Sunday matinee performance.

Mother and Daughter Honor Students

Mrs. Gladys Bollinger, 41, and her daughter, Phyllis, 18, both of whom are honor students at the University of Maryland, do a little co-operative studying while Phyllis recovers from an illness at their College Park home. The mother plans to complete a four-year course in the College of Education by next February in 2½ years, and the daughter will finish her studies in the College of Arts and Sciences this summer in three years

Little

The delicately human "Ballerina" entered its second week at the Little Theater yesterday, a week warmly deserved by this moving story of life in the wings of the Paris Opera.

The inherently glamorous setting is made human through the chief characters, children of the ballet school drawn from all faubourgs of Paris. It is the custom of each "rat"—operatic slang for youngster—to choose a temporary god-mother from the older dancers of the opera. Rose Souris, whose story we follow, is a mouse-like little wonder who chooses the premiere danseuse to be her heroine and when a new ballerina arrives to threaten the star's place, the deeply sincere child pulls a trap door from under her twinkling toes though only intending to make the inteloper look like a gawk. Instead the brilliant debutante is crippled for life and is only saved from despondent madness by her sudden decision to teach. Her favorite pupil becomes her unknown assailant. Rose, and it is only a brief while before that ugly dame, Gossip, brings the truth to the startled instructor.

The story is told with that fine sense of perception so ingrained in French films. The setting of the great opera is a fascinating spot for the jealousies and gossipings of that emotional world and we are also shown scenes of the Opera's ballet during the fourth act of "Faust," an act hardly ever performed in the United States. There is also music by Chopin for "La Morte Du Cygne" with the Ballet Russe's Mia Slavenska.

Altogether "Ballerina" is a film which the discriminating must not miss.

Pierce Hall Players Offer 'Ceiling Zero'

Local Group Enacts Frank Wead's Famous Drama of Aviation

The Pierce Hall Players last night joined the current fashion for dramas of the air when they offered Frank Wead's popular aviation play of several years ago, "Ceiling Zero," before an audience obviously interested in the story of the three musketeers of the air mails.

As the dashing Dizzy Davis, Burke Edwards, despite his too obvious youth, gave a spirited and credible performance. He it is, you may recall, who comes back to join his pal at the Newark Airport after an absence spent on the Pacific Coast with all the bathing beauties that came within his compass. Then he trades runs with one of his pals in what turns out to be ceiling zero weather. The single scene in the operations office at the airport brings together not only the three buddies, but also a good many of the types which are a part of the aviation background.

Charles R. Hohein was a dependable Jack Lee and Edmund J. Evans effectively completed the leading trio. Thomas M. Cahill scored a spontaneous hand from the audience as Mike Owens, the old flier, a part played, incidentally, in the original cast when it opened here prior to New York, by that excellent character actor, John F. Hamilton, now at the National as the mournful Candy in "Of Mice and Men." James H. Garrett was effectively soft-spoken as Buzz, the radio operator, and Peggy Mansfield was an attractive hostess, "Tommy."

In a play whose technical demands are stringent, Willard Jones, Tom Ormsby and Neil Linger did a commendable job. Howard F. Wentworth's direction was sure-fire, especially after the more talky sections of Act 1 were achieved.

Flood Tension Easing; May Says WPA Refused Aid

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 8 (AP).—Flood tension eased today along the Ohio River from Louisville to the Mississippi as the stream reached its crest here and barely covered the waterfront and lowland areas.

The plight of flood sufferers in the eastern Kentucky mountains brought criticism of WPA from Representative May (Democrat), of Kentucky, who said the WPA had refused to help them. George H. Goodman, State administrator, said the criticism was "groundless."

"May wants to put the mine workers on the relief rolls," Goodman said, "but we have our quota for the month and cannot exceed it."

Are you so blue that life is no longer worth living? Do you cry easily? Do you feel low, mean, depressed—just absolutely SUNK?

Then here's good news for you in case you need a good general system tonic—just take famous Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Let its wholesome herbs and roots help Nature build up more physical resistance and tone up your system, so that it can more easily throw off the "blues" and give more energy to enjoy life.

MILLIONS of women have depended upon this Compound and have passed the word along to friends and neighbors, and to their children.

Why not take Pinkham's Compound and so "smiling thru"? —Adv.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acid waste in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be over-worked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of poisonous waste.

When functional kidney disorder permits poisonous matter to remain in the blood, you won't feel well. This may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. If you have trouble with frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning, there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as bowels, so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.—Adv.

Gaekwar Of Baroda

The late Gaekwar of Baroda was one of India's most progressive rulers. During the 58 years of his reign, his small but important state was transformed from one of the most backward and oppressed to one of the most enlightened in all of India.

Remembering his own humble origin—he was a shepherd boy when summoned to the throne of Baroda by the British viceroy following the removal of the then ruler on grounds of gross misgovernment—he strove valiantly and successfully to improve the lot of his people. His monument is the well-governed and prosperous Baroda of today.

But of all this it is doubtful whether the American people, or the world generally, knew much or cared much. Despite all that has been written about it, India remains remote and mysterious and for that reason, perhaps, continues to exercise a fascination over the minds of the people of the West even as it did in the days of Prince Henry the Navigator and Christopher Columbus.

The Gaekwar of Baroda lived up to that India legend. A great statesman, interested in education and sanitation, agriculture and industry and other unromantic activities, he was also a figure of romance. The outside world might pay no attention to the notable reforms he put through in his state; it did hear of his fabulous income, his necklace of diamonds containing the famous "Star of the South" and valued at more than a million, his gem-encrusted crown, his carpet of diamonds, rubies and pearls.

Returned travelers told what appeared to be tall tales of the Gaekwar's palace with its beds, tables and chairs of silver and gold and the battery of silver cannon on the palace grounds. The tales were true, or largely true at any rate. There was apparently something to the dream of that long line of adventurers who had set out to find the wealth of India. Golconda was no myth, nor is the Gaekwar's diamond carpet.

But the India of grinding poverty and dire want, of the caste system and the untouchables, is also no myth. While preserving in his person and appurtenances the truth of the first, the last Gaekwar of Baroda sought, at least within his own provinces, to modify the worst aspects of that other India.

Spanish Refugees

The victory of Gen. Franco in Catalonia has set in motion a new wave of refugees to swell the terrible tide of unfortunates who, in recent years, have been uprooted from their homelands and thrown on the mercy of foreign countries.

No praise is too great for the action of the French republic in providing shelter for this latest flood of refugees. And it is a flood. Since the fall of Barcelona, every road into France from Catalonia has been crowded with men, women and children seeking a way of escape. At first, the French authorities allowed only civilians to enter and turned back all able-bodied men of military age. But with the total collapse of republican resistance the bars have been let down. The stream of civilian refugees is now reinforced by whole regiments of defeated and disorganized soldiers.

It is estimated that the total of Spaniards now fleeing from Franco's armies may amount to half a million persons. They have left not merely their homes behind them but also virtually all of their possessions. With few exceptions these refugees must depend on the generosity of their French hosts for even the barest necessities of life. And they face a very uncertain future.

It is doubtful if France, already crowded with expatriates from many European countries, can possibly absorb more than a small fraction of the latest influx. The plight of the Spanish refugees, like those of others, cries out for international action. Some of the newcomers, possibly a large number, will sooner or later drift back to Spain. And if Franco is statesmanlike he will refrain from taking reprisals on those who have fought him so valiantly. The gaping wounds of his nation will never be healed unless there is a liberal application of the salve of charity and magnanimity.

In the meantime, however, the task of caring for the Spanish refugees, feeding and clothing them and providing those for whom return would be suicidal with permanent havens, cannot be left to France alone. It is a task which devolves upon all civilized peoples. It is a task in which the United States should be anxious to perform its share.

It is interesting, in this connection, to notice that while France is now admitting tens of thousands of Spanish refugees the greatest number which can annually be admitted to the United States under the Spanish quota is 252. It is fortunate for humanity that the French immigration laws are less inflexible.

A Smell of Corruption

The accusations in the Warring case brought by the district attorney yesterday are a matter of importance to the entire United States. The underlying issue is of as much concern to Maine and California as to the District of Columbia. For it would be nothing short of a national disgrace if it were demonstrated that jurors can be bribed, and court officials seduced from their duty, at the seat of National Government.

In the minds of thoughtful Washingtonians the Warring case has come to assume symbolic qualities. The atmosphere surrounding it has begun to raise doubt whether racketeers can actually be brought under control in the District of Columbia. With this question is involved the whole issue of decent, honorable, progressive civic life in the Capital of the Nation. If Washington is too weak to control the forces of the underworld there will be less hope of stamping them out in communities which naturally look to the District of Columbia for leadership.

Twice the Warring brothers have been brought to trial and twice the Government case against them has broken down. Now it is intimated that one element in the failure to secure conviction has been outright jury tampering. No obstruction of justice could be more objectionable than this. For no other form of corruption strikes with such destructive effect at the very roots of the judicial process.

It is not only the accusation of bribery; it is also the cheap form of the alleged corruption—through gifts of whisky—which arouses a feeling of disgust. If jurors can be bought that easily, through the mediation of a deputy marshal which is charged, then the time for improvement of the machinery of justice is overdue. The seriousness of the current development in the Warring case was emphasized on Monday by Justice Laws, when he linked it with the defendants' "claim for deductions in income taxes because of bribes to police officials." The flavor of corruption given earlier to this case is now markedly accentuated.

District Attorney Pine is to be congratulated for the quick and effective way in which he has prepared and presented the contempt informations. Justice Laws has shown full realization of the gravity of the situation by making bond commensurate with the alleged offense. It now remains to ascertain the truth behind these shocking charges, to settle the Warring case once for all, to let the people of America know definitely whether or not racketeering is a privileged and protected occupation in the Capital of the United States.

Fortunately the present accusations of jury tampering, if substantiated, will place in the hands of the court a powerful weapon for demonstrating that the machinery of justice is not clogged in the District of Columbia.

To The Supreme Court

It is a matter of general satisfaction that the Hague case is to be heard shortly by the Supreme Court. Despite the forthright and logical reasoning of the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, in declaring the Jersey City "street-meeting" ordinance unconstitutional, this vital issue cannot be finally settled without action on the part of the highest tribunal. And there is general agreement that all doubt surrounding it should be cleared away.

The question which the court will be asked to decide is not whether Mayor Hague may violate civil liberties under the pretense of maintaining public order. No such right is claimed by the Jersey City executive. In principle his attorneys agree that the rights of free speech and free assembly must be afforded "the fullest degree of protection and enjoyment." Rather the problem for the court will be: What constitutes violation of the constitutional guarantee of freedom of speech and of assembly?

Obviously, then, the significance of the foreshadowed opinion will extend far beyond Jersey City. Most cities have ordinances regulating the use of city streets and public places. When do these ordinances or their enforcement begin to encroach upon the basic civil rights which virtually every American citizen wishes to protect?

Probably no American city has ever suppressed freedom of speech in time of peace so flagrantly as that over which Mayor Hague presides. But the question as to when measures taken ostensibly to maintain order cease to be legitimate and become an encroachment upon freedom of speech is one that often arises. If, in deciding the Hague case, the court throws much-needed light upon this point, it will have rendered a very important public service.

Not The Whole Story

In his open letter to the rejected nominee, President Roosevelt seeks to give the impression that the Senate's refusal to confirm Floyd H. Roberts' appointment to a Federal judgeship was due entirely to a desire to protect senatorial patronage against executive interference.

If that were the whole story one could unreservedly applaud the President's vigorous indictment of the practice which often enables a single Senator to block appointments to positions traditionally regarded as his special political plums. Indeed, the Roberts case provides a particularly striking example of the evils of this aspect of the patronage system. For the appointee was rejected by a huge vote, without any discussion of his professional qualifications, solely because he was "personally obnoxious" to the Senators from Virginia.

It requires no great insight, however, to perceive that behind the rejection of Judge Roberts lies another story about which the President preserves silence. Senators are not so naive as to believe that Mr. Roosevelt's only consideration in selecting the candidate preferred by the Governor of Virginia was to secure the best qualified man. Neither are they so credulous as to assume that by pure coincidence the President's sudden revolt against a traditional evil resulted in depriving two hard-hitting senatorial critics of the New Deal of their customary patronage.

The purge tactics attempted during the last primary elections have made a large number of Democratic Senators suspicious of the motives behind any executive move that in effect disciplines or penalizes nonconformists. If it had not been for a widespread belief that the Roberts appointment was being used as a club with which to belabor two Virginia rebels, more than nine votes could surely have been mustered for the President's candidate.

In view of the attendant circumstances it is believed by many that the President used his appointive power in the present instance as a means of chastisement. Such action would be as reprehensible as the practice of treating Presidential appointments as senatorial political spoils. Needless to say, both methods of playing politics with such important offices as Federal judgeships are thoroughly obnoxious.

The President's letter to Judge Roberts has the unquestionable value of calling public attention to the abuses of patronage in a field where merit alone should guide selection. Insofar as the letter is a personal attack upon the Virginia Senators, it is neither convincing nor calculated to persuade the Senate of the unwisdom of its ways.

Fifty Billions

Secretary Morgenthau is reported to have told a House Appropriations subcommittee that the national debt would reach $50,000,000,000 and that it could do so without endangering the country's financial structure. It is greatly to be hoped that Mr. Morgenthau's optimism is justified because if the present rate of spending is maintained, we shall soon be looking forward to an even more astronomical total of Federal obligations.

It is useless to guess how great a debt the Federal Government could support without risking financial collapse. The upper limit to public indebtedness is dependent not only upon the economic capacity of the people to pay taxes to cover debt charges but upon many intangible factors.

The politically feasible limit of taxable capacity may be reached long before the economic limit has been attained. The ability of the Government to borrow is affected, moreover, not only by its ability to tax but also by the degree of confidence which it succeeds in instilling in buyers of its obligations. That confidence is seriously impaired when the Government persists year after year in piling up heavy deficits and shows no inclination to curtail its spending.

Secretary Morgenthau's reported anticipation of a debt totaling $50,000,000,000 is perturbing, chiefly because it implies official acceptance of spending policies calculated to keep the budget seriously unbalanced for a number of years. The constant efforts of spokesmen for the Administration to minimize the dangers that flow from deficit financing and to treat them, as the President does, as "investments for prosperity" are more destructive of investment confidence than the actual size of the debt, great though it is.

"The Good Samaritan"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations to The Post and to Elderman for his fine cartoon of February 2, "The Good Samaritan," which showed Uncle Sam helping France and Britain up the road while leaving the Spanish Republic bleeding in the dust.

It is not a pretty picture, but Elderman was easier on Uncle Sam than he might have been. The parable of the Good Samaritan as we remember it begins with the attack of the thieves. Some held the victim's arms and prevented his striking back while the others robbed him. Suppose Elderman had shown Hitler and Mussolini in the role of the chief thieves, with America, Britain and France holding Spain's arms? Isn't that the true picture?

The French-British "Non-Intervention" pact which we joined with our notorious embargo deprived the Spanish Republic of the means of defense in the face of German and Italian attack. TOM PAINE.

A Missing Friend

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: By promptly publishing this letter you will help me to discover anew a well-wisher of the National Symphony. We need them all at all times, but especially when our campaign for the sustaining fund is just opening.

Some weeks ago I received a most welcome letter from one of the orchestra's friends offering her services as a worker in the campaign when the time should arrive. I now confess to three signs of the encroaching years: one, I have put the letter so carefully aside that the most stringent search fails to discover it; two, the name of the writer is too insecure in my memory to suggest; three, and this I hope is wisdom at last—I admit my grave mistake in not answering at once.

In the hope that our lost friend may read this and give me another chance, and with appreciation for the help of your columns.

Maryland Politics

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just how much do the Democrats believe in good government? Let us take the advice of a one-time great Democrat and "look at the record."

As Hoover was balked at every move by a Democratic Congress so was Gov. Nice of Maryland by a Democratic Legislature. According to precedent, it was Nice's turn to appoint members of his party to the park and planning commission, but a narrow and selfish Legislature blocked the appointment by extending the tenure of office of the incumbent Democratic members. Talk about sportsmanship and fair play! None but a Democrat would have continued to remain in office after such an exhibition of poor sportsmanship.

It has been frequently observed that politics does things to men who in other affairs of life are the very soul of fairness and honesty and no better examples of the truth of that observation can be found than in the conduct of the Democratic politicians of Maryland and particularly of Montgomery County.

When Montgomery County went Fusionist and the political plums were distributed according to party connections, the Democratic State Legislature suddenly became very holy and at the instigation of the Democratic bigwigs of Montgomery County, voted a merit system to be placed in operation in said county, which, while placing Republicans in office, also salvaged some jobs for Democrats.

What great pounding of the breast and boasting of civic righteousness resounded from the Democrats of Montgomery County. However, since the Democratic sweep of the State in the November election the Democrats have fallen from grace, and, exhibiting all their old unfair and unsportsmanlike greed for public office, have repealed the merit system on very flimsy grounds and have gone back to the old familiar grab bag. An Elective Supreme Court

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The present Supreme Court of the United States consists of Justices Hughes, McReynolds, Butler, Brandeis, Stone, Roberts, Reed, Black, Frankfurter. Not one of them was ever a judge of any court of record prior to appointment to this highest court of the land. But few of them have ever at any time been before any body of the electorate as a candidate for office.

Whether the groups now in power in the land like it or not, the people will look into the present situation and make changes. There is no warrant in our American philosophy of government to shut the doors of the Supreme Court to judges of record, and almost as much to men who have had fine experience in high elective offices.

No change in the Constitution itself is required; no new statute is absolutely necessary; but when we see the present situation as it is, and when we observe also that every present justice is from the North save three, and every justice is from east of the Mississippi, many of us believe that the Senate of the United States itself should take seriously its function to confirm "by and with the advice and consent" of itself.

It may well be that there is not a man on the court today but is fit and competent; the court as a bench is all askew with the spirit of the American people as a Nation. Our judges of record, our abler Governors and mayors, our Western men from beyond the Great River, all should be considered before the next appointments are made. Today the court is an assemblage of friends of one-time Presidents. Unless a great change takes place, the people will change their minds about having an appointive court and proceed to authorize an elective body, with due regard to the geographical distribution of justices. In such case judges of record will come into their own.

If Germany Had Won

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While Hitler fumes and rants over the outrages perpetrated on Germany by and under the Versailles Treaty, it would be well for our press to work the deadly parallel by comparing with it the terms of the Brest-Litovsk Treaty, to show what Germany tried to do to Russia and what she would undoubtedly have done to her other enemies had she won the war.

Surplus Milk

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see by The Post that the House has materially cut the President's recommendation for emergency relief. This will naturally lessen the amount of relief funds available for Washington and vicinity. There is a way whereby the District Allied Relief Organizations can augment their funds and make what they have go a lot further than at present.

We suggest that the Allied Relief Organizations purchase 10,000 gallons per day of the so-called "surplus milk." First, pay the farmer 15 cents per gallon for the surplus milk, as against the 11 cents he is now getting, minus 3 cents reduction. This milk can be pasteurized, bottled and delivered to the organizations for another 10 cents per gallon, making a total cost of 25 cents per gallon, or 6¼ cents per quart, thereby saving the organization and the needy the difference between what they are now paying and 25 cents per gallon.

The Rejection of Judge Roberts

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The rejection of the nomination of Judge Roberts by the Senate because the President did not accept the advice of the two Virginia Senators in making the nomination, while a closed incident, raises some fundamental questions which should receive further attention. The Constitution, article 2, section 2, referring to the President, provides:

And he shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme Court, and all other officers of the United States, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law.

A fair interpretation of this provision seems to be that the duty of nomination rests solely on the President nor does the Constitution place him under any obligation to accept the advice or obtain the consent of anyone in deciding upon such nomination.

When the nomination has been made and the matter comes before the Senate as a body for its advice and consent in making the appointment, the duty of giving such advice and consent is imposed upon it, and distinctly not upon two Senators who may chance to represent the State from which the nominee comes. If the Senate surrenders to the two Senators, on account of courtesy or tradition, its right and duty to decide the appointment upon its merits, in biblical paraphrase, it makes the Constitution—the law of the land—of no effect by its tradition.

If the nomination comes before the Senate and no question of the character and fitness of the nominee is raised, as seems to be true in the Roberts case, it is difficult to understand upon what grounds it could be reasonably rejected. The practice of deferring to two Senators in such cases invades the Constitutional right and destroys the President's prerogative in making nominations. It may be a very effective method of building and maintaining a political machine, but morally and legally it would seem to be advisable to defer adopting it until the present Constitution has been amended. The Post Impressionist

Yeats: A Memoir

"THE IRISH," Goethe once wrote, "always seem to me like a pack of hounds dragging down some noble stag."

A century after the German penned that acrid accusation, I heard it echoed, and the sting it left I knew was well deserved. The time was 1926. The place—Dublin's famed Abbey Taester. A few minutes before, noisy students from the National University, egged on by a cohort of wild-eyed Amazons, had attempted to break up the third performance of Sean O'Casey's "Plough and the Stars." Shouting imprecations, they had jumped on the stage and grappled with the actors. Pandemonium broke loose. Fists flew. The inside of the theater resembled a Donnybrook Fair Ground. Then a squad of detectives from Oriel House restored order and the show went on without further incident.

But not before William Butler Yeats had flung Goethe's words to the audience. His hair disheveled, his hand raised for silence, the white-maned poet-dramatist strode to the footlights to speak. The music of the wind had left his voice. Anger and bitterness seemed to dwell within him for a moment, then burst their bondage and rushed forth in a torrent of words:

"Once again Irishmen and Irishwomen have disgraced themselves . . ." he began.

Once again? Yes, there had been another time. Memories are long in Ireland and the audience remembered. I remembered, too. Remembered not as a spectator because I had been too young then. I remembered only the white face of my father when he returned from the theater.

I learned the whole story the next day. Just as the curtain rose the night before on the second performance of Synge's "Playboy of the Western World," 40 men seated in the middle of the pit opened up with tin trumpets. Yeats first pleaded with the disturbers, then realizing the futility, ordered the play to go on. And the play did go on, though father said he could not hear a full line above the noise-barrage of the rioters (hooligans was the best word he could call them).

The Abbey played the "Playboy" for seven nights as announced. And for seven nights the dissenters, liberally supplied with pot-still, did their bit to restore to Ireland her cultural niche in the sun. But they failed in their purpose. Before the week was ended public opinion turned in the Abbey's favor.

Not all the plays were received with harsh words, though. Sometimes there were lighter sides. Reminiscing once, Yeats told us of a man who came up from the scene of Lady Gregory's "Kincora" at Killaloe that he might see her play. He applauded loudly and even cheered the warrior Dalcassions, but became silent and troubled when Brian took treacherous Gormleith for wife. "Now, isn't it a great pity, a great pity surely," he said loudly to his neighbor, "that Brian didn't marry a nice, dacent girl from his own parish?"

Few know it was Yeats who discovered Synge. It happened in Paris in 1896. Yeats had taken a room in the Quarter. Then one day he learned that a countryman had the room overhead. Calling, he met Synge.

"I was very poor then," Yeats told later after Synge died, "but he was much poorer. He had been wandering throughout Europe playing his fiddle to poor men on the road. I advised him to go to Aran and study its life. He had acquired a good knowledge of Gaelic in college."

Synge went. And from that day on the outlook in Ireland began to grow bright for the first time since the night of apathy had settled over its people in the seventeenth century.

With the possible exception of Lady Gregory, Yeats was closest to George (AE) Russell. They had been fellow students in art schools in England and the Continent. Which brings to mind a story Yeats was fond of telling about a strange mad student who used to call on them with a daisy chain around his neck. One day AE loaned him a little theosophical treatise called "Light on the Path." The mad student stayed away for several days and then returned looking very troubled. He gave the book back saying, "You will drift into a penumbra."

The favorite story told in Dublin, of course, is how W. B. (as he was familiarly called) and AE set out respectively from 82 and 84 Merrion Square to call on each other and how they passed without recognition at 83. AE always kept his eyes glued to the ground while Yeats' usually challenged the stars. The story was never confirmed by the principals, though we often urged them to verify it. Nevertheless, it was a good story and Dublin held its sides for days.

Yeats never became acclimatized in the new Ireland. The guns that blasted the Four Courts in 1922 blasted romantic Ireland too and his heart was heavy with its passing. He was often bitter about the new order. Not because he hated it but because it puzzled and annoyed him. His familiar Dublin was no more. He continued to live on in a kind of a half-world—a world in which some of the things he knew and understood still existed, but in which all the standards of the older, more beloved Dublin, had been changed.

"Now he is gone . . ." Perhaps he heard, like Maire Bruin, the music of the wind faintly calling him from Faery. Or lake water lapping with low sounds by the shore. L. L.

Fair Enough

Flynn's Fuss

JOHN FLYNN has a piece in Harper's called "The Social Security Reserve Swindle," from which it would appear that this country's only hope lies in the possibility of his being wrong. He gives little comfort on that score, for he is one of those tip-of-the-tongue, I'm-glad-you-asked-me writers who can carry in his head a string of figures as long as the score by innings, and he never steps back. He is an economic Anthony Comstock, forever on the prowl for obscenity in the field of his interest and yelling "Officer, arrest that man!" He can fuss big.

John is saying that, in the first place, a Government insurance plan needs no great reserve because a government can put the bite on the citizens for the necessary money as it goes along. If it puts a great big lump into dead storage that is not so good, because the money ought to be on the loose among the people, buying shoes for the baby and all like that. If it invests in property or industry, then pretty soon private industry is paying taxes to finance cut-throat rivals in which the Government is a partner. And if it invests the money in its own bonds at 3 per cent and spends both principal and interest for current expenses the money is gone and the bonds are strictly Peruvian.

Treasury Drops In Its I. O. U.'s

THAT IS WHAT they are doing with the reserve. Employe and employer pay their money into a kitty, but instead of saving it for them the Treasury grabs it as fast as it comes in, dropping in its I. O. U.'s, and spends it off on Quoddies and rest cures for tired Cabineteers. It pays the reserve 3 per cent on these touches, but that interest money, too, is then lifted out and spent and replaced in the reserve for further I. O. U.'s.

"All the time," says John, "the Government will pay interest on the reserve. To pay this interest it will have to impose additional taxes. By 1942 it will have to raise taxes for interest of $84,000,000. By 1950 almost $500,000,000.

John calls this a fraud because the people were given to believe that the benefits would be paid out of the tax on the pay roll and wage of American industry and labor. They didn't understand they would be double-taxed to provide spending money for the Government, and he puts the finger on this reserve thing as an intentional gyp never intended as a reserve at all but as a sucker to which the Treasury might peddle vast quantities of bonds which there is no intention to redeem.

George Spelvin Also Understands

HARPER'S COSTS 40 cents, which is more than most people can afford to pay for good news, much less for bad, so I hope John will warm over his piece for the 3-cent trade. He writes, for all that I can detect to the contrary, a very high-learned type of knowing on this kind of thing, but does it in language that can be understood by my friend George Spelvin, the average American, known earlier, in the phrase of the late Bill Shepherd, as the milkman in Omaha.

If Mr. Spelvin and the milkman are being swindled out of their social security contributions and losing wages, too, as employers cut pay rolls and replace men with machines to reduce their social security taxes, all in a pretense of creating a reserve which is spent as fast as it comes in, why, men, that there is stealing! If John is right, then the social security embodies and conceals an income tax on a lot of people whom Congress, in its wisdom and pity, expressly exempted from the regular income tax on the ground that it would be a shame to take their money.

Marse Henry Was 'Informal'

THERE HAS BEEN other writing and talk to this effect, but it is a free topic and Mr. Flynn is the first to picturize a pyramiding deficit which isn't carried on the regular books at all but on the cuff and falsely represented as a reserve.

It recalls a story they tell in Louisville of Henry Watterson's informality about money. He used to help himself out of the cash drawer, which was always out of balance because he wouldn't bother to drop in chits. So they called him on that, and the next time he hit the till for poker money Marse Henry put in a little memorandum which said, tersely, "Took it all. Henry Watterson."

Passage Unlikely For Neely Bill, Says Steward

The Neely bill, affording optional retirement at the age of 58, "has not the slightest chance of being enacted into law," Luther C. Steward, president, National Federation of Federal Employes, said yesterday.

Steward urged employes to support the projected Ramspeck bill "with the reasonable changes suggested by the National Legislative Council of Federal Employe Organizations."

The council favors giving Federal employes the option of retiring at 60 after 30 years' service and at 62 after 15 years, on full annuity, or at 55 after 30 years' service on a reduced annuity. It favors 70 as the compulsory age of retirement.

Arming The Axis

By S. Miles Bouton

German-Italian War Preparations

A GERMAN-ITALIAN planning committee which has been at work for more than three months has submitted far-reaching proposals for synchronizing the industry of the two countries for war purposes.

Several of them are reported to have been already accepted. These provide, among other things, that Italy shall manufacture no medium, heavy or heaviest bombs, shells and gun barrels, no torpedoes, no profile iron, including railway rails and, as far as technically possible, no large castings of iron or steel. These articles will be imported from Germany, especially Austria, in order to lessen imports of coal and ore and thus free methods of transportation and release workers for other purposes. Germany will take the raw materials which Italy does not need. Italy will rush the production of machine guns, airplanes, tanks, submarines and automobiles.

Behind this arrangement are also financial reasons. Of Italian imports from Germany amounting to 2,810,000,000 lire from January 1 to September 30, 1938, 820,000,000 lire went for coal and coke and 460,000,000 for machinery and tools. In the same period German imports from Italy amounted to only 1,465,000,000 lire, of which 726,000,000 lire went for fruit and vegetables.

In other words, Italy incurred a debt of some 845,000,000 lire to Germany in the nine months, which is covered by long-term obligations which Germany wants to convert into cash. Since Italy had in the same nine months an export surplus of 2,646,000,000 lire, the Nazi government desires to get hold of some of the foreign currency that came in through this favorable balance.

Split On Seizure Of Church Wealth

ONE REPORT, dated January 11, declares that the Rome-Berlin axis partners are not in agreement on one point. This is the manner in which the property of the church can be secured for financing a war. The Third Reich favors direct, immediate and complete expropriation, insofar as the wealth cannot be secured by what the Nazis call "legal methods." The Italians, however, believe such a measure would be too dangerous in view of the still unbroken influence of the Catholic clergy in the rural districts. A considerable part of the church property, they think, could be acquired by "voluntary" cession through clever propaganda, and they point to the sacrifices made by the church for the Ethiopian campaign.

The disintegration of Germany's currency system appears from the Reichsbank's report for 1938. It showed an increase in money in circulation from 5,844,000,000 marks at the end of 1937 to 8,605,000,000 marks. Total current obligations — paper money and checking deposits—amount to 10,132,000,000 marks, an increase of 3,100,000,000 marks.

New restrictions upon taking money out of the country are expected within a few days, and also restrictions or perhaps complete prohibition of removing any jewelry from the country. Reports required at the end of last October from all watchmakers, goldsmiths, silversmiths and jewelers disclosed that their stocks of valuable articles on hand had decreased from January 1, 1938, to June 30 the same year to 86 per cent of the value six months earlier, and the following three months brought a further decrease of 15 per cent. Only about a quarter of the articles sold were bought by foreigners.

The steadily worsening financial situation is one reason for fearing that the threat of war is near. Another is Germany's vast surplus of imports over exports last year, amounting to almost half a billion marks; still another is the coming victory of Franco in Spain, and one can find no explanation except a belligerent one for Italy's recalling of soldiers to the colors. From London came last week references to "quiet military moves by Germany which have followed the announcement of German army changes." In line with this last report is one reaching me from The Hague, dated January 13. It says:

"Renewed serious German military measures have been observed on the Dutch borders since Tuesday (January 9)."

The same dispatch says that "Keitel, Brauchitsch and their colleagues in the great general staff have declared that the time for a war has never been so favorable as now, and hence unrestricted diplomatic action can be ventured at the cost of any risk."

'Drang Nach Westen,' As The Nazis Plan It

THE NAZI PLAN for a sudden thrust westward, described in this correspondence recently, may be regarded by many persons as absurd, but it exists. It calls, as reported, for a drive through the Netherlands on a line south of The Hague to the North Sea coast, thence southward along the Belgian coast to Dunquerque, in the northern tip of France, and a developing of the movement against the northern end of the Maginot Line. A frontal attack from the Siegfried Line and an attack from Spain by combined Italian forces would complete the menace to France on both flanks and in front.

It is more than a little difficult to picture Neville Chamberlain as awake to this situation, but the Haagsche Post of The Hague reported in its issue of one of the first five days of January a conversation between Mr. Chamberlain and Gen. Gamelin, French commander in chief, in Paris. According to this newspaper, "Gen. Gamelin said to the English Prime Minister that he would need about 200,000 English soldiers immediately upon the breaking out of war. 'Can you furnish them?' he asked. Chamberlain answered slowly: 'We have them, to be sure. But we calculate that we shall have to send an army of that size direct to Holland to support its defense against the German invasion which we expect.'"

When Mr. Chamberlain was in Paris on his way to Rome, a dispatch said that he and the men around him were disquieted by Germany's announcement that she intended to build her submarine strength up to that of Britain. A statement described as coming from a German naval expert declares that German submarines already assembled ready for use amount to 60 per cent of the British strength, and that so many others are ready to be assembled that they could be put into operation within eight weeks after the outbreak of war, bringing the German submarine strength far above Britain's. Since February, 1934, according to this expert, a system of mass production of standardized parts has been carried on, mainly for small, fast submarines. Planned war production per month is set at 16 small, 8 medium and 6 of the largest of these series-built boats.

Estimates as to the number of German fighting planes continue to be merely guesses. That more men to serve the air force are needed can be deduced from an appeal issued on December 31 at Hitler's order to all honorably discharged soldiers to enter that arm of the service as volunteers immediately. Wanted are particularly men who have had some experience as pilots, observers, radio operators or anti-aircraft artillerists. "Especially favorable conditions" are offered to those who answer the call.

War Seen As Both Likely And Imminent

IT MAY BE that, despite his belligerent and boastful short speech last Thursday, Mussolini will think twice before shedding blood instead of words, but the conviction can hardly be avoided that his attitude and the attitude of the "cheering crowds of Fascists" who heard him make war very likely. Whether Germany will be in it from the start remains to be seen, but it is certain that the Italian dictator has taken no important step in the last six months without consultation with the Nazis, and that all arrangements have been made for welding the German and Italian armed forces into one great army. With Spain in the hands of their deputy, the situation will become very grave.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Tragedy In The Making

THAT THE PRESIDENT'S position has become very difficult is so evident to all experienced observers in Washington that not even his friendliest supporters deny it. He is at a point where he stands a better than even chance of wrecking himself, his party, and his whole program, both domestic and foreign. For this he is himself responsible, though it is the country, and very possibly the world, which may have to suffer the consequences. Mr. Roosevelt is following a course of personal conduct which, if carried any farther, will almost certainly paralyze the operation of the Government and illustrate once more the weakness of democracy.

The root of the trouble is that Mr. Roosevelt is unable to make up his mind whether he means to be a national statesman or a factional politician. He is trying to be both. It cannot be done. And in the end he will forfeit his national leadership and he will be defeated in his factional enterprises.

Position Is Likened To That Of Wilson

DURING THE PAST 30 days—that is, since the convening of Congress—he has laid out a program of national defense and a foreign policy designed to prevent war which can be carried out only if he has the broadest kind of national support. He has followed it up at once by a series of specific actions in domestic politics which have divided his party, have divided him from Congress, and have brought him to a position, so far as his political influence is concerned, which begins to look extraordinarily like that of Wilson at the end of his Administration, and of Hoover at the end of his.

But whereas Wilson had to struggle with the aftermath of a World War and Hoover with the effects of a world-wide depression, the President has provoked his own difficulties and almost daily he aggravates them.

The beginning of his present troubles was the ill-fated decision of last summer to purge the Democratic Party of the Senators who had shown some independence, particularly in regard to the Supreme Court. The purge failed completely. The voters would have none of it. But Mr. Roosevelt has refused to accept the result and to abide by it. One of his very first acts after Congress met was to appoint to his Cabinet, Mr. Harry Hopkins, the man who, as former head of the WPA, represents to every one of the Senators who were to be purged the power which threatened them with political destruction.

Stubborn On Full WPA Appropriation

MR. ROOSEVELT'S next move was to insist stubbornly and unco-operatively on a deficiency appropriation for WPA, which, in the eyes of Congress and of a large part of his own party, symbolized the President's determination to accept no important reform in the system of relief. His next move was to challenge one of the most respected figures in American public life, Senator Glass, of Virginia, on a judicial appointment. Had the President had his way in this, it would have been regarded as meaning that the political position of Senator Glass in the State of Virginia was to be attacked by the use of Presidential patronage.

The personal merits of Mr. Hopkins, the complicated question of whether the WPA will need next June to have $150,000,000 more than have been appropriated, the personal qualifications of Judge Roberts, of Virginia, the abstract question of senatorial courtesy—all these things are beside the point. The fact is that the President's actions are regarded by Congress as an attempt to carry on the purge after the purge had been defeated by the Democratic voters in the primaries and by the people generally in the November election.

On top of all that came the appointment of Mr. Thomas Amlie to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Now Mr. Amlie is by his own profession in his official biography "active in the movement for new political alignments." That means that he wants, or has wanted until he became interested in a good job, to break up the Democratic Party and then to organize on the ruins some sort of very radical Farmer-Labor Party. Taken in conjunction with the purge of last summer and the attempt to continue it this winter, the Amlie appointment is bound to be regarded by the Democrats in Congress as evidence that the President is trying to rule by ruining their party.

Political Existence Of Many Dependent

ALL THESE THINGS together have precipitated a situation where the controlling issue in Washington is not the national defense and the national interest but the life and death of the President's political party and the political existence of the most prominent politicians in it.

The effect on the Republican opposition is as demoralizing as it is on the Democrats. For though the Republicans made gains in November which indicate that they are likely to win in 1940, the Republican Party has by no means recovered from the disasters of the past eight years. It is not yet ready to assume the responsibilities for the National Government. It has no program. It is not really united. And it has as yet few well-known and seasoned leaders.

They could no doubt be developed in the next two years if conditions were such that the party could win in 1940 only if it were united on a program under positive leadership. But the disruption of the Democrats offers the Republicans an altogether too-easy opportunity to win, too easy for their own good or for the good of the country. Their present policy is to let the President destroy the Democrats. Their only tactics are to fish in the troubled waters. The fishing is very good.

G. O. P. Chances Lie In Rivals' Disruption

FOR THEY FIND themselves in a situation where they can ignore the great tradition of their party, the tradition of Theodore Roosevelt, Elihu Root and Charles Evans Hughes, to name only Republicans who are not involved in the present struggle. And what the Republicans are headed for at the present time is something very much like 1920, with their party controlled by their politicians rather than by their nationally minded leaders. They are under no inducement to make the effort of deserving to win; they have much too good a chance to win by capitalizing the disruption of the Democrats.

The President alone can avert a general political disintegration in which the country will suffer because its two parties are demoralized. He has not much time to lose. Unless he can rise above factionalism, above his grudges, above his minor purposes, unless he can change the climate by displaying an enlightened magnanimity, the United States will have for more than two years to come a government incapable of governing.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Twitchell and James

"Well," said Elmer Twitchell, "after all these years I know what Jesse James was like. He was a glamour boy, with pearly teeth, perfect features and the finest head of hair in all Missouri.

"He would have won a male beauty contest anywhere, hands down. Or maybe I should say hands up. He had the skin you love to touch. And dimples!

"There wasn't a blemish on his handsome face, his eyes were big and blue and soulful. He had the best profile in the bandit business and as beautiful a pair of eyebrows as ever blew up a safe.

"I've read about Jesse James ever since I was knee-high to a grasshopper and always wondered just what he looked like. I always felt it would be great to see him face to face. Well, I've seen him, and the old West never knew a better looking train scuttler. He could have got by in any company on his eyes alone.

"Yes, sir, Jesse James could have made a living as a collar ad, if he hadn't turned to banditry. And clothes! Say, what a faultless dresser he was! He planned a bank robbery in the smartest cut clothes, rode right up to the loot in a perfectly cut outfit and came out of every train robbery without a hair mussed or a suit rumpled!

"I feel that I now know everything about Jesse James except who his tailor was.

"One thing I found out was that he never was a bandit at heart, but really a swell young boy who probably would have gone to Harvard or become an orchestra leader or something if he hadn't been driven into banditry by the railroads.

"A railroad president who wasn't good-looking, didn't know how to dress and never had a dimple in his life double-crossed Jesse, and Jesse went tearing around the country stealing and killing just in a fit of resentment. Every bank and railroad president in the old West wore store clothes, let his skin go to seed and didn't bother much about haircuts. And this helped to make Jesse sore.

"Boy, was Jesse the glass of fashion and the mold of form! Did he have charm! And was he fussy about his horses and saddles! A new one for every ride! It was too bad he lived in those early days. If he was alive today he would have been chairman of the junior prom."

"Say, Elmer, where did you see Jesse James?" asked the Inquiring Reporter.

"Only the other night, in the movies," explained Elmer.

Miami Medley

There is the usual high light in civic comedy, the city officials conducting "anti-gambling" crusades . . . But the wire service supplying the bookies with results was ripped out by the Governor recently, and for the first time, it may be more than a wrist motion.

Still, the quarter machines that used to block the doorways of drug stores, ice cream parlors and even the corridor of the building where the anti-gambling organization had its offices are gone . . . But, believe it or not, bingo, which ten years ago was considered a game for old ladies, is sweeping Florida . . . This is like hearing that Monte Carlo has become the parchesi center of Europe.

Too Many Retorts

By Mark Sullivan

Statesmanship Lacking

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is doing too much retorting. Doesn't he realize that the quantity of retorting he is addicted to in domestic affairs makes us a little disturbed about entrusting him with foreign affairs—at a time when threat of war is on the horizon?

The President, any President, ought to have more discretion than our existing neutrality law gives him. He ought to have flexibility, opportunity to exercise his judgment as situations arise from day to day. And he ought by all means to have the united support of the people.

But if the people are to give a blank check of united support and a blank check of discretion to anyone, they would prefer that the exerciser of this discretion—which might keep us out of war or take us into war, or direct a war after we enter it—should be a person of exceptional prudence, calmness and patience. Mr. Roosevelt, right at the time he needs this support and discretion, and right at the time when the country needs that someone should have this support and discretion—Mr. Roosevelt right at this time makes an impression which is not one of prudence, calmness and patience.

Statesmanship Is Questioned

CONGRESS REDUCES by $150,000,000—from $875,000,000 to $725,000,000—an appropriation for WPA asked by Mr. Roosevelt. Mr. Roosevelt resents the reduction. So he signs the bill for the reduced amount—and simultaneously sends to Congress a new request for the exact sum, $150,000,000, that was cut off the original measure. This is calculated to "put Congress in a hole," to "turn the heat on Congress." It's a clever retort—belligerent, exciting, and otherwise entertaining, but is it the highest statesmanship?

The Interstate Commerce Commission somehow or other gets "in bad" with President Roosevelt. Mr. Roosevelt retorts by appointing to a vacancy on the commission a lame duck Congressman who appears to be a believer in some kind of collectivist form of society. This retort may give to President Roosevelt the kind of thrill Gen. Hugh Johnson would describe as the fun a small boy gets from tossing a dead cat into the front yard of a resented elder. But does it give the country the impression that the President is a serene man who rises above petty emotion and makes appointments solely on the basis of high ability to fill the office? (Some persons think the appointment of Mr. Hugo Black to the Supreme Court was made in the same spirit as the appointment of Mr. Amlie to the ICC.)

Intelligent Plan That Went Wrong

SENATORS Carter Glass and Harry Byrd, of Virginia, opposed Mr. Roosevelt's measure to change the courts, and other measures of his. Mr. Roosevelt retorts by ignoring the two Senators in the matter of selecting a judge for a Virginia district. In this particular retort by Mr. Roosevelt there was at least an intelligent plan, if a mistaken one, and one that went wrong. For obviously the purpose must have been to encourage the building up of a political machine in Virginia which would have allegiance to the White House direct and would drag down the two Senators. That action by Mr. Roosevelt, taken in the spring and summer of 1938, was obviously part of the plan to "purge" the Senate of those who were not sufficiently obedient to the President's wishes.

In this case Senators Glass and Byrd make a counter-retort of their own. They ask the Senate not to confirm the appointee whom Mr. Roosevelt named—and the Senate, by a vote of 72 to 9, does what the Virginia Senators asked. Thus far we have had retort by Mr. Roosevelt, counter-retort by the Virginia Senators. Finally comes rebuttal retort by Mr. Roosevelt. He writes to the defeated appointee a public letter, 2,000 words long, in which he expresses acrimonious opinion of the stand taken by the Virginia Senators. Again, it is all quite racy and exciting and entertaining. But is it the best way to achieve co-operation between the President and Congress?

May Lose Confidence By His Retorts

SOMEBODY SAYS that somebody else heard that some other somebody understood that Mr. Roosevelt said our first line of defense is in France. Mr. Roosevelt retorts "deliberate lie." Could he not have been just as convincing with some less short and ugly word—something like, let us say, "premeditated prevarication?"

It may be fun to feel you're a good retorter, especially if you're President, with all the country listening, and palace pets in the White House to say "atta boy, that's a corker." But Mr. Roosevelt may retort himself out of our confidence.

Youth Slightly Hurt In Fall at High School

China Moves West

By Barnet Nover

After 20 Months Of War

THE UNDECLARED war on China which, in Tokyo's original calculations, was to have been over in six weeks has just entered its twenty-first month. And the end is not yet in sight.

For Japan the wholly unexpected prolongation of the conflict is proving little short of disastrous. The war was to have marked a further stage in Japan's 40-year-old bid for domination of Eastern Asia. Today, despite an almost unbroken succession of military victories and the occupation of a very considerable and very important stretch of Chinese territory, Japan literally finds herself fighting for her existence as a great power.

Of all the paradoxes of our paradoxical era this is by no means the least striking. Japan is being ruined by the very magnitude of her victory and the enormous difficulty of making that victory stick.

FOR CHINA, too, the war has been anything but a picnic. Many of her most flourishing cities have been laid waste either by Japanese bombs or as a result of the "scorched earth" policy pursued by the retreating armies. Her casualties, military and civilian, mount up into many hundreds of thousands. Millions more have been made homeless, while hunger and flood and pestilence are multiplying the slaughter begun on the field of battle.

But as a consequence of the war, one very constructive development has occurred which may have an enormous bearing on the future not only in China but of all of Eastern Asia. That has been the retreat of the government, and following the government the armies, the industries, the educational institutions, to China's Far West.

China Discovers Her Own Interior

CHINESE HISTORY began in the northwest, in the valley of the Yellow River. The pressure was almost always from north to south. Now, for the first time, Chinese civilization is moving west. As Bishop Ward has pointed out, China is at last discovering her vast interior.

Hitherto it has been the coastal plain and the rich and fertile Yangtse Valley which have dominated the Chinese scene. That region contains most of China's principal cities—Peiping and Tientsin, Shanghai and Canton, Hankow and Nanking. Most of her industrial life has been concentrated in that area, which has also harbored her principal lines of rapid communication and most of her educational institutions.

This area has been lost, if not permanently, at least for the duration of the war. China is now building the structure of a new life in the area to which the Japanese have not yet penetrated and which, without a back-breaking effort, they cannot reach. The government is doing this as a necessary war measure. From Nanking it moved to Hankow, from there to Chungking. It is prepared to move even farther into the interior if that is necessary. But the consequences of this withdrawal into the interior will long outlast the war.

FOR THE FIRST time in China's long history, therefore, the people of the western provinces are in close and intimate contact with their national government. For while China has had many capitals, all the others before the present one have been in the east. That fact is certain to intensify the spirit of national unity in an area which has never felt it very strongly. And, in turn, the leaders of the nation are becoming more acutely aware, than they have ever been before, of the needs of the forgotten provinces.

Bishop Ward, the Methodist bishop of Chengtu, in Szechuan Province, tells, for instance, of two journeys he had made between Chungking, the present capital, and Chengtu. The distance is about 270 miles. In 1919, with the authorities en route providing him with every facility they could, he made the trip in nine days and a half. There were no roads then worthy of the name. The journey was made in sedan chairs. Last year he made the same journey by automobile in 11 hours and 30 minutes.

PERHAPS the most remarkable achievement of the war was the construction of a road from Chungking to the Burmese border, a distance of 2,100 miles, much of it over extremely difficult mountain terrain. That road provides China with a "back door" to the western world, now that the entire coast from Tientsin to Canton is in Japanese hands.

The road was built entirely by Chinese labor and without benefit of any modern road-building machinery. But it is capable of being used, as Ambassador Johnson recently demonstrated when he traveled over it to get to the outside world.

Four Colleges Have Moved West

IT IS APPARENT, therefore, that China is trying to make up for the destruction that has taken place in her east, as the consequence of the Japanese invasion, by building up her west.

The work of many years has had to be abandoned. Of the 114 Chinese government universities, for instance, 54 have been destroyed or closed by the war. Only 2 of the 12 American-supported colleges in China are still conducting all of their work on their own campuses. Four have found it necessary to pull up stakes and make the long trek to west and southwest China. Cheeloo University, Ginling College and the University of Nanking have reestablished themselves at Chengtu. Hua Chung College, formerly at Hankow, has been transferred to Kweilin.

In the midst of a war which China continues to conduct against the invader, she is finding time for a reconstruction effort no less significant because it was compelled by circumstances beyond her control. But having established herself in the west, China has a rampart against which the Japanese may batter their heads in vain.

Roosevelt Sent Protest on Plan To Tax Churches

A vigorous protest against recommendations of the Social Security Board's advisory council that churches be taxed for old-age pensions was sent to President Roosevelt yesterday by the Trans-Eastern Ministerial Conference of Southeast Washington.

The conference consists of pastors of all Protestant churches in the Anacostia area and the protest also was addressed to Chairman Altmeyer of the Social Security Board and Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee.

The letter was signed by the Rev. John Fort, pastor of the Anacostia Methodist Episcopal Church, president of the conference, and the Rev. Glenn B. Faucett, East Washington Heights minister and conference secretary.

Insurance Men Tell of Board Vote Forgeries

Monopoly

The assistant managers used to kid us along and ask, 'did you sign your ballots already?'"

It was brought out that the signature on each ballot had to be witnessed. When John Lord O'Brian, acting as counsel for the Metropolitan, asked Silbiger if he had ever signed his name as a witness on one of the forged ballots, the agent refused to answer.

Immediately after the hearing, SEC Chairman William O. Douglas, a member of the committee, said, "I think it's scandalous. Tomorrow we are going to show the extent of the practice and we're going into the subject of personal responsibility."

Stressing his conviction that "without any doubt, the directors' elections were conducted in accordance with the law," the chairman of the committee, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, added that "it's perfectly obvious that a company having 27,000,000 to 29,000,000 policyholders is so large that elections are a mere matter of form."

Senator O'Mahoney expressed the hope that the two agents would not be "disciplined" by the Metropolitan, but Lincoln issued a statement last night declaring: "I consider this conduct utterly reprehensible and contemptible. I shall see to it that appropriate action is promptly taken."

Schurr said he thought he had signed ballots in the company office and had seen other agents do so. "I don't think the manager could avoid knowing about it," he said.

Silbiger, who, like Schurr, gave his testimony within arm's length of a battery of Metropolitan officials, asserted that the forgeries were committed "quite openly, but not in front of the manager."

Just before the appearance of the two agents, Clitus Tully, assistant secretary of the Metropolitan, which is the world's largest insurance company, had told the committee that in the 1937 directorial election, about 438,000 ballots had been cast, of which 414,000 were by mail and 24,000 by proxy.

Under New York Law

Tully declared there had never been "a ripple of complaint" over the fact that the company's slate of nominees for the directorate was invariably elected without opposition. It was pointed out that New York State laws rigorously control the method of election. However, it was said that the New York State superintendent of insurance regularly waives some of the regulations in the case of the Metropolitan because there are never two lists of nominees.

In testimony earlier in the day, Frederick H. Ecker, chairman of the board of the Metropolitan, upheld the usefulness of certain board members who, Gesell showed, had rarely attended meetings.

Although the board holds 12 or 13 meetings a year, Gesell asserted that Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of the Bethlehem Steel Co., who was a member of the Metropolitan board from 1932 to 1938, had attended only three meetings during that period. John W. Davis, a member from 1926 to 1931, attended seven meetings in all, and Alanson B. Houghton, former Ambassador to Great Britain, went to two meetings during his membership on the board from 1921 to 1928. L. A. Taschereau, former prime minister of Quebec, failed to attend a single meeting from 1922 to 1938.

Gesell introduced letters from both Schwab and Davis, offering to retire from the board because of inability to attend meetings, but in each case Ecker replied with a request that they remain.

After Collision With 10-Ton Truck

Seven persons, six of them occupying this car, were injured in a collision between the car and a 10-ton truck, which ran wild and burned after the crash. The seventh man hurt was the truck driver. The accident occurred at Florida avenue and Eckington place northwest last night at Garfield Hospital last night, the year's eleventh traffic victim, of injuries received when she was struck by an automobile February 5 at Calvert and Biltmore streets northwest. Police said the automobile was driven by Wilbur McInerny, 38, of 4212 River road northwest.

Without waiting for a bill to be introduced, the House District Committee approved legislation giving the District Commissioners authority to fix the time for lighting and extinguishing street lights. (Representative Caldwell's son was killed in the half-light of early morning.)

Representative Seccombe (Republican), of Ohio, suggested to a traffic conference of Congressional and District leaders that a standing reward of $1,000 be established for information leading to the arrest of hit-and-run motorists.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, asked Congress to give Police Superintendent Maj. Ernest W. Brown at least 100 more policemen, to be put on the traffic squad.

Representative Crawford's action was taken independently of the traffic conferees and followed their decision to seek stiffer hit-and-run and drunk driving penalties.

The street lighting bill was introduced by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, House District Committee chairman, in time to be placed on the House calendar for consideration Monday.

Maj. Brown told the committee that the hit-run penalty "can't be made too severe." "A hit-run or drunken driver is a potential murderer," he added, then went on to explain the need for a more flexible system of turning street lights on and off, at present governed by Congressional mandate.

The hit-and-run tragedy which last week took the life of the young son of Representative Caldwell, Brown pointed out, occurred at about 7 a. m., when, under existing laws, street lights are off and dangerous intersections are shrouded in half darkness. He cited that in this case falling rain further obscured vision of motorists. The law, he recalled, requires lights to be turned off 45 minutes before sunrise.

Representative Nichols told the committee that existing regulations set a maximum of $100 fine, six months in jail or both for hit-and-run and drunken drivers. He suggested a minimum fine of $100 or a possible 30-day jail sentence for first offenders.

Referring to a recent report that the holder of a Congressional tag was implicated in an alleged hit-and-run case, Seccombe said he knew of certain cases where members of Congress, having obtained new Congressional plates, turned their old ones over to secretaries and office employes.

In response to a question, Maj. Brown said he had "heard" of instances where the special tag privilege had been abused.

Schulte had earlier advocated a plan whereby all traffic at intersections would be stopped on a special light to permit the free crossing of pedestrians.

Maj. Brown announced that special police squads would be on duty in the downtown section to regulate pedestrians when the new rule becomes effective ten days hence. He said policemen will be instructed to merely warn offenders during an announced 15-day "education" period.

Commissioner Hazen said he would insist upon rigid enforcement of the law after District residents have become familiar with its provisions. A "test" case in court after the regulation is in force will determine its validity, Hazen said.

Other traffic developments:

James Edds, 27, colored, of Sterling, Va., died in Georgetown Hospital of injuries suffered in a head-on collision early yesterday on the Lee highway in which five other persons were hurt.

Edward Patton, of Arlington, occupant of the other car, suffered undetermined injuries and is also in Georgetown Hospital. With him was Ethel Moore Patton, also of Arlington, who was treated for multiple bruises and shock.

In Police Court, Mrs. Vera Grace Lucas, 49, of 3438 Brown street northwest, charged with leaving the scene of an accident and driving while intoxicated, pleaded not guilty and was granted a jury trial. Her car allegedly struck and injured Peter Donch, 18, of 1420 Harvard street northwest, as he stood in a safety zone near his home Tuesday.

Mrs. Lucas, who allegedly continued on after striking Donch, was reported captured by Frank Riley, a cab driver, of 492 F street southwest.

A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury following an inquest into the city's tenth traffic fatality of the year. Marion Wilson, colored, 36, of 407 First street northwest, was killed Monday when struck by a streetcar at New Jersey avenue and G streets northwest. The jury's verdict exonerated Cavanaugh C. Johnson, 40, of 1435 East Capitol street, motorman.

President Inaugurates Scout Week

Congratulates 8,000,000 Boys In Radio Address

Thousands of Washington Boy Scouts began the celebration of National Scout Week last night when they heard President Roosevelt, speaking over a coast-to-coast radio hook-up, congratulate 8,000,000 American Boy Scouts on the twenty-ninth anniversary of their organization.

As Honorary Chief of the Boy Scouts of America, the President said he found great satisfaction in the report of progress submitted by Dr. James E. West, chief scout executive, "because there is so much work to be done, we need all the workers we can muster."

Appeals to Nation

He further appealed to the Nation "to inculcate in the scout mind principles which embrace strength of body, alertness of mind and growing out of them that sense of moral responsibility upon which all sound character rests."

Walter W. Head, president of the Boy Scouts, speaking from Danville, Ill., and Dr. West, speaking from Miami, Fla., took part in the radio program.

Head reported that on December 31, the total Boy Scout registration was 1,271,900, a 13 per cent increase during 1938 and an all-time high. The membership in the Cubs, younger boy group, increased 37.8 per cent, he said, to a total of 126,339.

Curb on Intolerance

"Conditions today make it imperative," Head said, "that we use every legitimate means at our command to inculcate into the minds and imprint on the hearts of an ever-increasing number of boys and men the precepts and principles of scouting. These precepts and principles will serve to protect us against the religious intolerance which has become so pronounced in so many places in the world today."

Adults plan to make the anniversary an outstanding one with observances led by the Junior Board of Commerce at its "Boy Scout Day Luncheon" in the Annapolis Hotel today and a tour at 1 p. m. of a committee led by Dr. David Hector Castro, minister from El Salvador, to decide which of 35 shop window displays depicting phases of scouting life, is best.

Prizes to Be Awarded

Prizes will be awarded the three troops which have created the best exhibits.

A week which includes church services, a moving picture show and radio broadcasts is scheduled to follow with the local Sea Scouts making their contribution this evening in a broadcast scheduled for 7:45.

Robbed Collector Loses $355 More

Robbed of more than $800 in a holdup last Thursday, Mervin A. Hutsler, 54, collector for the A. & W. Hot Shoppes, reported to police yesterday that his truck had been rifled of $355. During the day he picked up money from eight of the company's branches and told police that the robbery might have occured at any one of them.

Text of Roosevelt's Scout Talk

Fellow Scouts:

On this, our twenty-ninth birthday, we can look backward with pride and forward with hope and courage. We rejoice that our organization has reached full maturity.

Because the Nation never had greater need of the Boy Scouts than it has today, I find peculiar satisfaction in Mr. Head's reassuring report on our progress during the past year. I am glad that our membership is greater than ever before, not from any mere pride in numbers but because there is so much work to be done we need all the workers we can muster.

"I Offer Congratulations"

To all who have had a part in bringing the Scouts to their present splendid standing I offer hearty congratulations. These boys, so full of promise for the future, are a national asset and therefore should be regarded as a national trust. Ours is the duty to inculcate in the Scout mind those simple, but fundamental principles, which embrace strength of body, alertness of mind and above these and growing out of them that sense of moral responsibility upon which all sound character rests.

In building up solid character, we are insuring the future strength and stability of the Nation. Sooner than many of us realize, the Boy Scouts of today will be full-fledged citizens to discharge for better or worse the civic duties upon which the happiness of the Nation will rest.

As one who has long been active in Scout work, and who feels a special responsibility as honorary president of the Boy Scouts of America, I like to think that faithful observance of the Scout oath constitutes an excellent preliminary training in the duties of citizenship. I like to think of the entire Scout training as an apprenticeship for the mastery of civil duties.

I have always been a believer in the discipline and training afforded by camp life. Life in the open constitutes an ideal recreation, while at the same time it encourages initiative, resourcefulness and self-confidence.

On this account, I am heartened by Mr. Head's announcement of the gift of a site for advanced camping in the Rocky Mountains. Camp life is an American tradition. It is a way of life. A generation trained in the art of camping will receive experience which I believe will give them exceptional equipment with which to cope with some of the most vexatious problems of life in the years that lie ahead.

And now, my fellow Scouts, I trust that the year ahead will be one full of achievement and useful service for all of you. I appeal to all of you to be faithful now and always to the Scout oath and the senior Scout citizenship pledge in which Dr. West is about to lead you.

2 U.S. Agents Fined In Wounding of D. C. Resident

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 8 (AP).—Two Federal agents were fined $250 each in the wounding of S. E. Wakeham, of Washington, D. C., after an automobile chase across the Mississippi river bridge here last June, Attorney General Boyd said today.

Boyd said the agents, Leonard E. Hill, 44, and Gus S. Gehlback, 51, investigating liquor violations in Arkansas last summer, attempted to halt Wakeham's car. Failing, they pursued it across the Harahan bridge, where Wakeham ran into a filling station.

"A scuffle followed in which the gun of one of the agents was discharged, and Wakeham suffered a flesh wound on one leg," Boyd said. "They claimed the shooting was accidental."

Board Advisers to Visit Institute for Deaf

Members of the Board of Education's Advisory Committee on Handicapped Children will visit the Columbia Institution for the Deaf, Seventh street and Florida avenue northeast, today at 9:30 a. m. in the second field trip to obtain information for use in planning a long range program for crippled children.

Miss Betty C. Wright, chairman of the sub-committee on partially hearing and deaf children, will lead the tour.

NERVOUSNESS

Medical Science now declares that many conditions of nervousness—fatigue—loss of appetite and lack of sleep—neuritis—neuralgia—and many neuritic muscular aches and pains—are due to lack of certain vital elements the body needs. In such cases, sufferers almost invariably get amazing relief from Neural-Aid, an inexpensive, drugless preparation that contains these vital elements. Clip this ad, bring it in, and you will receive a FREE SAMPLE of Neural-Aid and interesting booklet.

Justices to Accept Holmes Home Gift On Behalf of U. S.

Associate Justices Harlan F. Stone, Owen J. Roberts and Felix Frankfurter, have been appointed a committee to accept for the United States title to the home at 1720 I street northwest of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, Chief Justice Hughes informed Speaker Bankhead yesterday.

Willed to the United States by the famous jurist in 1935, together with an estate of approximately $250,000, the home nearly was demolished for a parking lot before its acceptance was legalized. President Roosevelt signed a bill permitting its acceptance June 23, 1938.

It is expected the building, with Holmes' large law library, will be converted into a national shrine.

Torn Between Rival Attractions of Marriage for Love And Career of Her Own, Girl Asks Guidance

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Since I was a kid 10 years old, I have prided myself on being able to think things out for myself, and on taking the course of action which I, personally, thought best in every puzzling set of circumstances. But right now I'm stumped. For some time I have been dating one of the sweetest (yes, that's just what he is) fellows I have ever met, and I will probably marry him several years from now. At present, however, I'm not able to figure out my own conflicting attitudes with regard to the proposition of marrying him.

On the one hand, I feel that I do want to be married and have a home and a well rounded life; and, of course, I want to marry him. But, on the other hand, I know—deep down inside myself—that I can go quite a way on my own, making a career all my own. In other words, there are too many places I want to go, people I want to meet, and things I want to do, before I tie myself down to one man—even this man.

I don't feel I can discuss this baffling inner conflict with personal friends, because I cannot explain it in a way to make sense, but perhaps you will understand. Some time ago you mentioned a book that might help persons get a right slant on themselves in cases of marital estrangement. Now I am wondering if you know of any book that would benefit a girl of 20 who is facing a problem like mine. Thank you.

READER.

Highway and Bypath

DEAR READER: This so-called "baffling inner conflict" of yours is, I suppose, the inevitable product of your long training—dating from the age of 10—in making and acting upon your own decisions; decisions which, I venture to say, were motivated largely by considerations of self-interest and self-advancement, since it is the way of childhood and youth to be almost entirely self-centered.

It takes a considerable amount of wise and patient example, instruction and persuasion, on the part of alert and enlightened parents and other educators, to train youth in the values and practices of a larger and more selfless social consciousness; to acquaint him with the incalculable and enduring personal satisfaction that is to be found only through developing, and employing, such adaptive, responsive and contributive attitudes as do not have personal aggrandizement or selfish gratification as their aim.

The youngster who, from childhood, orders his affairs according his own necessarily limited and untried sense of values, and comes through with flying colors to his twentieth birthday, has demonstrated two things, perhaps. One, that he possesses an enviable fund of shrewd common sense; and, two, that he has also been benefited by a straight run of "beginner's luck."

But from his twentieth year on, when and as he emerges onto the broad plateau of the adult plane of existence, he is bound to find the sailing less smooth, less straightaway. Whatever way he turns, he is going to find himself face to face with the necessity of choosing between alternatives, of compromising, of yielding ground here in order to gain it there, of putting down his coin on a high-hearted gamble that may or may not pay dividends; and no where, not in any direction, will he find the absolute guarantee of prayer fully answered or profit returned on effort invested.

This is the time when he must begin assessing comparative merits, so that he may make a considered choice while there is yet time to choose. And though he has great need for that type of self-reliance which you possess, he will find mulish self-centeredness a heavy handicap in his search for happiness—and, as someone has said, "every man's life is the story of his pursuit of happiness."

I think your alleged conflict (no doubt rather fancifully overdramatized) means simply that you have come to a first cross road in life, where you are impressed, for the first time, with the inevitable necessity of choosing between various roads in your eager pursuit of the pot of gold at the rainbow's end. You may as well face the fact, right now, that you cannot have everything; that you cannot, tentatively and in turn, pursue several inviting roads without certain loss of valuable time and energy, and without the likelihood of losing your way in life entirely; and that the greater wisdom, probably, is to stick to the main highway and eschew the tempting by-paths.

Certainly, for the average woman, a "career" at the expense of happy marriage is a definitely rocky and essentially dead-end by-path; whereas marriage, family life and children constitute the main highway, which often widens to include an incidental career in its sweep. The woman who has realized her biological potentialities almost invariably is thereby automatically enriched, in personality and hence in social and professional effectiveness, so that she is far abler for a career than the woman who has denied herself natural fulfillment.

Whatever immediate sacrifice of youthful personal ambition, of a career kind, that a really capable woman may make, in order to marry, very often turns out to have been an investment, in disguise; an investment that begins to pay dividends just at the time when her biologically creative powers may be on the wane, and her intellectually creative powers reaching their prime.

I am sorry that I do not happen to know of any book "that would benefit a girl of 20 who is facing a problem like (yours)," but perhaps the foregoing remarks will be of some assistance to you in resolving your conflict. In my opinion, a woman is making a selfish and shortsighted blunder in electing any career which stands to deprive her of lifelong companionship with a worthwhile and well-loved man.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Much Replacement Of Furniture Expected in '39

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

FROM the big winter furniture market in Chicago, where manufacturers show their new offerings and furniture dealers select the things they'll present in their stores during the coming months, we've gleaned several tidbits of interest to a lady with a house:

This year of 1939 is expected to be a big replacement year. Because most of us actually do refurnish about every 10 years and the last peak year was 1929. The low ebb year in home furnishing buying was 1932.

Another hope for furniture buying this year is the fact that marriages are back to the 1929 level after a drop, also lowest in 1932.

As for styles, here is a bird's eye view—Swedish modern will lead in the contemporary group for the reason that it is graceful and light with all its clean current lines. There will be a revival of the gay and jaunty peasant types of furniture. And early American furniture is due for a new lease on life what with many new and interesting colonial accessories turning up to refresh familiar colonial rooms. But as usual Eighteenth century furniture is expected to be the classic.

Precise Tailleur for Spring

As neat as a pin, as slick as a new shoeshine, is the tailleur above from which even the melancholy cocker spaniel cannot steal the limelight. It is strictly man-tailored, which means it is hand-turned, pressed, stitched and cut within an inch of its life. A subtle tone of aqua makes the sport model correct for golf or casual town wear. The care of an artist and artisan goes into such a tailleur and Domenic, the craftsman, deftly plies his needle to create many such precision-turned suits. The jacket shows the very important longer hip line and slit patch pockets as well as a half belt in the back.

Your Figure, Madame!

Reducer Should Eliminate Desserts Or Else Choose Those Low in Calories

LUCULLUS gave banquets that lasted for hours and — after all these years, too — people are still talking about those Lucullan feasts. But the chances are that if Lucullus were to return to this world he would feel completely frustrated until he found out how the modern housewife cooks that lemon chiffon pie, what goes into an old-fashioned fruit cake, and mastered the art of some particularly delectable frozen dessert.

Would he ask her how she cooks spinach? He would not. The reputation of good cooks is not built on such humdrum dishes. Vegetables are just something to go with the meat courses. Salads are a filler. What Lucullus would hear about in advance would be his hostess' clover-leaf rolls, for example, and a cake more delicious than anything he ever imagined.

Being forewarned, he might take two or maybe three of those rolls, with some butter for each, but he would try valiantly to save space for the dessert. It would, as promised, exceed his expectations and he would pay his hostess the tribute of taking "just a little more, please." Then, sighing with repletion but with an acquisitive gleam in his eye, he would bide his time until she had a moment to tell him how to make it.

"Oh, it's nothing!" she would say modestly. "Just take a quart of whipping cream, an ounce of marshmallows, two cups of maple sirup, and . . ."

Or, she might start this way: "Take a pound of brown sugar, 1¼ pounds of flour, a pound of butter, 18 eggs . . ."

Those recipes sound pretty good, don't they? They were picked at random from a famous cookbook as an argument that the last thing on the menu must be the first thing to go on the reducer's diet. How can you ever get slim if you take from 300 to 500 calories to top off a meal that is already adequate?

Most overweight can be blamed on a sweet tooth. You think, unable to resist, "Just a little of this won't hurt me," and the extra calories start rolling up. It may take a few years, but anyone who gets the dessert habit ends up as an overweight. If you are fairly moderate as to other food, you could gradually slim down by giving up desserts.

The main ingredients in the best desserts are either butter and sugar or cream and sugar. The sugar is strictly an energy food. It is full of calories but contains none of the vitamins, minerals or protein your body needs. And while you do need a small amount of butter and cream, you do not need it in the quantities contained in rich pies and cakes. Let me remind you, too, that fat contains twice as many calories as either carbohydrates or protein.

Since a sweet tooth can't unfortunately, be extracted, your solution may be in the choice of desserts which are low in calories. When it comes to a showdown, wouldn't you rather have a lovely figure than the reputation of being a good cook? Anyway, what's wrong with this list of low-calorie desserts?

Spice drops — Hot tea with lemon

DINNER

Fresh fruit cup
Browned lamb chops Celery sauce
Glazed carrots and onions
Boston brown bread — Orange butter
Cole slaw — Coffee
Cocoanut cream pie

BROWNED LAMB CHOPS

Wipe off 3 pounds of lamb chops with a damp cloth. Sprinkle with 3 tablespoons of flour, ½ teaspoon of salt and ¼ teaspoon of paprika. Brown quickly in a frying pan in 5 tablespoons of melted fat. Cover and cook 10 minutes over a moderate heat. Add 2/3 cup of boiling water and cook for 30 minutes. Turn several times to allow even browning.

A Touch of Spice

Add a dash of cinnamon and a little brown sugar to the whipped-cream topping of your pumpkin pie. Another good topping is made with half a cup of white cream cheese to two cups of whipped cream.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 8.

THREE ROUSING huzzahs! We are all getting a brief holiday from the No. 1 Debbie, Brenda D. D. D. Frazier. Two of those D's stand for "ducky" and "delicious." She has gone to Nassau to visit her grandmamma, and just before she went her B. F., Billy Livingston, gave her the grandest cocktail party at the Stork Club. Just everyone was there, looking lovely. And Brenda looked too deevine in red velvet. When approached by a movie scout, Miss Frazier remarked, "I'm definitely not interested." I hear the man fainted dead away.

ALICE HUGHES

—I may have missed that brawl, for I don't run with those people, but I was very much present at Ginger Rogers' party, a few days later. Ginger's a swell kid, and I saw all my friends there, too. Ginger dresses more conservatively than this so-called New York society, and autograph hounds have been known to miss her entirely. She goes for a dark mink coat and a grey flannel suit. She made the Stork Club Debbies look live over-dressed frumps.

My handicap, old Mr. Hall, also likes the Rogers parties. Once, after an interview, Ginger called him "sweet," and he wasn't fit to speak to for days. Few did. But his real devotion is to her pretty, slim mother, Lela. There's a real crush if I know one with the naked eye. So the afternoon passed blithely, with the girls and the food and the drink, and plenty of good Holywood dirt to dish. That's the real secret of movie brawls. Between Brenda Dee Dee's and Ginger's, I'd have taken the latter party every afternoon of the week. And so would poor old infatuated Mr. Hall.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The papers here have recently been filled, and very nicely, too, with pictures of young "society" girls wearing bathing suits in fashion shows—and you know the bathing suit as of 1939. Well, they have taken to wearing about as much as Gunga Din. They look lovely, being very young and curvy.

Before me is a shot of two lovely creatures named Miss Nina Beck and Althea Pardee—and what they are wearing is slightly less than a chorine wears in a Broadway musical hit. But bless your heart—they don't mind a trifle! In the first place, many of them are better looking and more shapely than the cuties who labor on Broadway for pay. And in the second place, the girls of today are so accustomed to exposing their persons to the sun and air that parading three-fourths naked in a night club fashion show is insignificant.

No wonder New York newspapers are filled with cuter things than Hollywood baby dolls doing their publicity stuff. My advice to you, on your next visit, is to keep Papa away from Society Fashion Shows. Much better to turn him loose on Broadway.

There is a strong and determined drive on here to give junior and senior high school students courses in sex education. Mr. Buck, vice president of our board of education, is a leading advocate of the plan. Die-hard tories have long opposed this simple plan. I cannot for the life of me see why kids cannot be taught the simplest truths in an honest manner, rather than leaving such a vital matter to the system of trial and error in vogue when I was a young girl. Is this being too modern? if so, I'm glad of one symptom of modernity in my life. . . .

Little Luise Rainer, the Viennese Tear, has been resting up in a hospital here for a few days. She had a bad cold, but I hear that the real truth is that domestic problems with her husband, the playwright Clifford Odets, was the determining factor. Poor little suffering Luise—on screen, and off.

The latest story on men's clothes is that buttons are disappearing, save on shirts. Elsewhere all the fastening will be done by elastic, clips, slide fasteners or just plain faith—as in socks. Poll father on this. I'll bet he'll be tickled silly, or worse.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Reunion

She dressed with care even though her fingers were so nervous they could scarcely find the snappers. Now why should she be this way, she asked herself. Just meeting Walter—dear old Walter, whom she knew, or at least had known almost as well as she knew herself. Still of course, a lot of years had passed . . . and there was really nothing so uncertain as facing an old friend after a lapse of time. But with Walter it would be different. Surely the barrier of time would dissolve and they would both pick up right where they had left off in campus days—fervidly discussing H. G. Wells, Conrad, Bennett, arguing about Marx, Henry George, Bertrand Russell, quoting Shaw, Mencken, speculating about God.

She grew suddenly excited at the memory . . . why really she had never known such thrill, such adventure in conversation since. And now—why now she was actually stagnating, lost in a bog of everyday trifles. People all around her were so material, interested only in clothes, rent, diet, shows, taxes—just concreate, earthy things. Oh, it would be so much fun to see Walter, to see him leaning forward eargerly with blazing eyes, hear him expounding earnestly some clear simple method for transforming all this terrible confusion and strife into some beautiful orderly pattern.

The heavy-set man in glasses who greeted her in the hotel lobby smiled with Walter's eyes, and after her first timidity, she felt a rush of warmth toward him. "You're still Walter," she said and immediately afterward felt rather foolish.

"You're looking fine yourself," he assured her. "A little weight helps you."

"It helps you too, Walter—" she began.

"Yes, but the doctor says I've got to cut down. I'm about 30 pounds overweight. He wants me to get down to 155. You know the doctors now are all down on fat—especially fat in the stomach. Now this man I'm going to . . ."

He did not drop the subject until they were seated in the dining room. "No, go ahead and order whatever you want," he said." I'm going to get some liver—for vitamin B 1. Oh yes, and some grapefruit—for C. They're doing some wonderful things now with vitamins. This man I'm going to—maybe you've heard of him . . ."

At the first pause she broke in boldly, "Tell me about yourself, Walter, your wife, your children."

His face brightened. "I've got two boys and a girl. My wife—you know I married a Milwaukee girl—well, Grace meant to come along, but just the day before I started the youngest boy took down with the mumps . . ."

At the next breathing spell she tried again. "What about your work, Walter? Are you happy in it?"

For a moment he hesitated, looked at her questioningly. Then he said quickly, "Oh, yes. Of course, business is rotten just now. People aren't buying. They're scared to death. I tell you nobody knows what's going to happen. And then taxes . . ."

He talked on . . . business condition . . . motors cars . . . golf . . . trips . . . how he had run on to old Jed Hawthorne in Detroit . . . whatever had become of old Chett Brown and Daisy Marsh . . .

She felt herself getting desperate. She longed to stop him, cry out, "Wait, Walter! Wait! What about Marx, Wells, Shaw, Mencken? What about Russia, Spain, Hitler? What did you ever decide about God?"

She could stand it no longer. As he paused to pick up the bill, she leaned across the table. "Walter," she asked anxiously, "do you really think there will be a war?"

A shadow fell across his face. "I'm afraid so," he said grimly.

"But don't you think there is something—anything that could be done about it?"

"Well, all I see," he said resignedly as he laid a bill on the plate, "is for this country to mind its own business and build the biggest navy in the world."

They rose and walked from the dining room. "Did you ever write any more poetry, Walter?" she asked half-apologetically.

He laughed, "Poetry? Heavens, no! I've been too busy making a living."

She told him good-by in the lobby. "It's always so nice to see old friends," she said.

"It's been good seeing you," he replied. "I'm glad you're looking so fine. But, say—you want to be careful you don't put on any more weight."

Today's Health Talk

By Dr. Logan Clendening

Development of Chest by Exercise Is Good Defense Against Tuberculosis

A normal human chest is flat, and a chest subject to tuberculosis is round. By "flat" is not meant that the chest is caved in, in front, but that it is narrower from front to back than it should be. The tuberculosis or consumptive chest is bent over the front, looks flat, but in reality it is deeper than the healthier flat chest.

These statements are contradictory to those usually made or believed. I think most doctors, even those who work in tuberculosis, would say, if asked, that the chest least likely to acquire tuberculosis is not flat, but deep.

When Dr. S. A. Weisman, of Minneapolis, discovered this contradiction several years ago, it suggested to him that it might be used to aid in individual defenses against the disease. In any such infection as tuberculosis, there must be the factor of the soil and the seed. For the development of a case of tuberculosis, there must be the load of germs, and there must be a suitable kind of constitution on which the germs may grow. The round barrel chest represents a kind of soil that is favorable to growth.

Dr. Weisman believes that there is much that can be done in young life to change the type of chest. All children's chests are round, and in course of development become flat. Respiratory infections keep them round and thereby make a good soil for tuberculosis. Adenoids, repeated attacks of tonsillitis, bronchitis, chronic bronchitis and asthma are conditions that tend to produce round chests, and all are, to a certain extent, subject to correction.

Exercises especially adapted to developing a proper chest expansion and to the production of reserve defense against tuberculosis can be planned.

Forty years ago Hutchinson wrote in regard to correcting the roundchestedness of the tubercular type, "a month of tree climbing will do more good than a gallon of treatment after the disease has developed." He advised "a reversion to the arboreal habits of our ancestors" to correct malformations in children's chests. In active tuberculosis, rest is important; so tree-climbing is taboo; but for children who have no signs of tuberculosis, other than a poorly developed chest, the old advice is still good.

Other exercises are climbing ladders with the back toward the ladder; the ladder used is that found in orthopedic or fully equipped gymnasiums. Swimming is excellent. Any work with horizontal bars, or rings, or other equipment, which makes the exerciser hang by the hands, is the kind desired.

These days gymnasium teachers are busy teaching children rhythm which does nothing to develop the chest or expand the lungs, while the ropes, rings, horizontal ladders and bars have all been tied up or put away.

New Slip Covers for Spring

GAY AS the springtime—trim as to fit—long as to wear. That's a slip cover!

You can easily make one of leafy green cretonne with lovely koral design centered on back and seat, seams finished in contrasting color. And so durable when you follow professional tips in making and fitting.

No pattern's needed—you just begin by smoothing material over the chair, snugly except at those points where there's extra strain such as between back and seat—where you leave a 4-inch tuck-in.

Whether you work with the material right or wrong side out depends on the finish of your seams. Welting or covered cord finish helps your cover stay in place, resist tugs and strains—and for this type of seam you work with the fabric wrong side out.

Quickly you anchor your material with pins, one row across the top, other rows where seams will be. Cut allowing 1½ inches for seams.

In the same way fit, pin and cut fabric over arms, sides and back, leaving 2-inch tuck-ins between seat and arms—other points of strain. Cut paper patterns for arm fronts.

Now for the basting, trying on and final touches. Slip welting into the seams, stitch from wrong side. Finish bottom with a pretty flounce.

To remove cover easily, keep it from tearing, make placket at a back corner. Finish with snaps or a zipper.

Make your whole house cheerful and smart with attractive slip covers for chairs and sofa. Our 40-page booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," gives step-by-step directions for cutting fitting, sewing slip covers. Suggestions for smart fabrics, trimmings, styles. How to make upholstered covers too.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Sane Headgear That Stays Put Due for Spring

New York (AP).—The fashion world has launched a fleet of "sane hats" for spring.

They rest securely on heads, instead of precariously on hope (the hope that they will stay on), and are designed on less dizzy angles than the winter's crop.

They are exceedingly smart withal—and colorful as a summer garden. Some of the hats are entirely in color—made of pale pink straw or striped ribbon. Others of sober straw trimmed in gay plaid ribbon, striking feathers or a splash of vivid flowers.

For Your Fireside—This Christopher Wren Arm Chair

says "Mary Annette" Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.

This magnificent chair bears the name of the famous architect and designer of Queen Anne's day, and rightly so. The cabriole legs with padded feet, the dainty shell carvings . . . the high back and deep butterfly wings are all typical of that era. To satisfy us comfort-loving mortals of today, a feather-and-down seat cushion is added . . . a luxury the court of Queen Anne never knew. In this modern guise we find it an ideal fireside chair, a piece that will lend definite character to an English or Colonial room.

Capital Society:

Elsa Maxwell Slights D. C. Men-About-Town

Her List of Most Popular Shows a Wide Knowledge of New York but None of Such Personables as Jerzy Potocki, Mr. Hopkins et al.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

ELSA MAXWELL, cafe society's most widely publicized hostess and self-styled authority on what makes entertaining tick, lists the 15 most popular men-about-town in her article in the March issue of the Ladies' Home Journal.

With her usual flair for seasoning what she writes with a liberal sprinkling of noted names, Miss Maxwell lists such well-known men as Cole Porter, George Jean Nathan, Conde Nast, Prince Serge Obolensky, Duc di Verdura, Carroll Carstairs, Milton Holden, Philadelphia-born social light; Rudolph Kummer, theatrical producer; Jules Glaenzer, jeweler; Lytle Hull, real estate agent; Richard E. Berlin, magazine publisher; Edward M. McIlvain, former wine agent; William Rhinelander Stewart, scion of a "first" family; Capt. Allaster MacIntosh, and W. Stuart Symington.

Washington Has Many Popular "Eligibles"

As usual, Miss Maxwell hasn't dipped into Washington circles for names. Her only popular man-about-town with the slightest Capital connection is Mr. Symington, the son-in-law of Representative and Mrs. James Wadsworth. Truth is, La Maxwell never has bothered much about Washington society anyway, and her visits here in recent years have been few and far between.

But if she suddenly converged on the Capital and set her mind to making a local list, I wonder whom she would include. If she picked the men whom Washington hostesses currently are besieging with invitations, she would surely have some, or all, of those on her roster—Count Jerzy Potocki, Attorney General Murphy, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, Joseph Alsop, Angus Malcom and Keith Officer, of the British Embassy; Jacques Dumaine, of the French Embassy; Pendleton Turner, Sherlock Davism and perhaps(but only perhaps) Baron Paul Schell. She might even pick Senator Theodore Green and Senator Arthur Capper. They certainly get about.

To go back to Miss Maxwell's current article—it is man-bites-the-dog news that that author has a strong aversion to both Playboys and Glamor Girls, when both have made up sizeable sections at virtually all of her mammoth parties. Anyway, Miss Maxwell thinks Glamor Girls are "homely little things who, if left to their own devices and to what nature endowed them with, would be about as distinguished and recognizable as Elmer in an American Legion parade."

Lists Rules for "Going Glamorous"

If, in spite of all that, you still want to be a g. g., Miss Maxwell's article outlines the rules as follows:

1. Get a good press agent—and pay him as much as possible. (Editor's note—This won't help in Washington.)

2. Be seen in the right places—bars, cafes, night clubs—at the right time. (For Capital consumption—Be sure they are the right places.)

3. Keep constantly on the move—from New York to Sun Valley to Palm Beach to Aiken. (In other words, spend most of your time getting "away from it all.")

4. Work on your face, hair and figure every day of the week and go in for extreme styles. "The trick," writes Miss Maxwell, "is to look so bizarre and so extreme that truck drivers gasp but the ever-present cameraman will be bound to flash a bulb."

Now, I ask you, debs and post-debs, is it worth it?

Big Welcome Awaits Aranha

First in a long line of foreign dignitaries who will visit Washington this year is Brazil's Minister of Foreign Affairs, Oswaldo Aranha, who will be widely feted during his stay.

Sailing into New York harbor on the Nieuw Amsterdam today, he will come directly to Washington and will stay at the Brazilian Embassy, which formerly was his home.

Senor Aranha's formal social schedule will begin Saturday when he is feted at a luncheon given by Secretary of State Hull at the Carlton Hotel. On Sunday evening, the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles will give a dinner for him at their home in Oxon Hill, Md.

President Roosevelt will be host at a men's luncheon for Senor Aranha on Monday, and that evening, he will be feted at a dinner given by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

The men's National Press Club will have the noted visitor as guest speaker on Tuesday, and the following day, he will be honored at a luncheon given by Senator Theodore Green in the Senate Restaurant. The final party now on the calendar is to be a reception on Thursday, February 16, given by the Brazilian Charge d'Affaires and Senora da Costa Guimaraes.

All these parties, of course, make up only a tentative schedule and may be changed in part after Senor Aranha arrives.

Claude Peppers Are Established In New Apartment

Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper recently moved from the Wardman Park and are now established in a new apartment at 1661 Crescent place.

Mrs. Pepper's sister, Mrs. T. Lansing Snyder, of Jacksonville, Fla., arrived yesterday afternoon and will be here for about a week. A number of social functions are being planned for her.

Mrs. Pepper will entertain at her first "at home" of the season next Thursday afternoon.

Woodwards Hold 'Black Tie' Dinner

Stanley Woodward, of the State Department, and Mrs. Woodward entertained at a small "black tie" dinner last evening at their residence on O street in Georgetown.

Their guests were Hugh Wilson, who is United States Ambassador to Germany; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George Messersmith, Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat, the Financial Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Kenneth Bewley, Arthur Krock, Miss Mary Bradley, Miss Irene Boyle, Mrs. Granger Blair and Harold Horan.

J. R. Fleming Entertains Wallaces Tonight

The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace will be guests of honor at a theater party given by John R. Fleming this evening.

The company later will attend the play, "Washington Merry-Go-Round," written by Leon Pearson and being presented by the Civic Theater at the Wardman Park.

Mrs. Hartigan Hostess to Envoy And Mrs. Johnson

The United States Ambassador to China and Mrs. Nelson T. Johnson were guests of honor yesterday afternoon at a tea given by Mrs. Charles C. Hartigan at her home on Twenty-ninth street. Mrs. Hartigan and her husband, Capt. Hartigan, came to know Ambassador and Mrs. Johnson a number of years ago in China, where the Hartigans formerly were stationed.

Most of the guests in yesterday's company were friends of the Johnsons. The party was also in celebration of Capt. Hartigan's recent return to Washington after a tour of duty off the West Coast. Mrs. Hartigan is the sister of Kathleen Norris, the novelist.

Mrs. Harold Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, as she toured the exhibition of paintings by Hiram Webster at the Corcoran Art Gallery. The artist, a friend of Secretary and Mrs. Ickes, specializes in landscapes with windmills, and some of these can be glimpsed in the photograph

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

DID YOU KNOW:

That the recently arrived Japanese Ambassador and his wife are ardent members of the Oxford Group?

That Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., always keeps in his apartment at the Mayflower two fruit cakes soaked in whisky, one of his favorite edibles?

That Hugh Cumming, jr., of the State Department once held a card as a member of a seaman's union?

That one of the best skiers in Washington is Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, who got plenty of practice when her late husband, a diplomat, was stationed in one of the Scandinavian countries??

THE JUNIOR LEAGUE made almost $8,000 out of the Follies, much to the delight of all who worked so hard for its success. The only calamity note in the whole proceedings occurred when Mrs. Daniel Partridge broke her rib during one of the waltz numbers of the show.

ART-MINDED MEMBERS of society are taking an interest in the exhibit of watercolors by Hiram Webster at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. The Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes have bought one, and yesterday Mrs. Ickes paid another visit to the collection.

Mr. Webster's hobby is windmills, and he paints practically nothing else but. He doesn't live in Holland, as you might suppose, but in Paris, and makes frequent trips around France, where it seems there are still plenty of windmills. Mrs. Ickes met him when she was abroad last year through Anne Halle, a sister of the glamorous Kay Halle, of New York, and a classmate at Smith of Mrs. Ickes. Mr. Webster is a great friend of Prof. Paul Sachs, of Harvard, who arranged to have his work shown at the Fogg Museum in Cambridge and at the Chicago Museum.

WHEN Mr. and Mrs. Leland Harrison arrive some time shortly after February 20, they will stay with Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garret. Much entertaining is being planned for them, and there are other parties galore on the schedule. For instance, the dinner which Senator and Mrs. Peter Gerry will give on Sunday; that at which the Rumanian Minister and Mme. Irimescu will entertain next Tuesday; Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat's dinner February 16, and the dinner which the counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Wennerberg will give on Saturday evening. Nancy Ordway and Nancy Woodward have issued invitations for a tea dance a week from Saturday, February 18, at the Officers' Club of the Army War College.

MORE people out of town! Maj. and Mrs. Henry Leonard are spending two weeks at their ranch in Colorado. Mr. and Mrs. E. Kenneth Jenkins and Thomas Leiter are visiting Mrs. Stewart Spilman, of Warrenton, at her house in Palm Beach. The Marquess of Lothian, who spent several days here last month, will sail for England tomorrow on the Queen Mary. Dr. and Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler entertained with a dinner in his honor at their home in New York on Tuesday evening. Ogden Hammond, jr., who is now in Nassau, was a fellow passenger on the Munargo, going there with Brenda Frazier. Any man who comes near the glamour girl is immediately rumored engaged to her. Won't it be a relief when she finally gets married?

MRS. Nicholas Longworth has returned from a trip and is again at her home on Massachusetts avenue. This house, by the way, has not been sold, and will not become a lodging house, as was widely reported.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil last evening entertained at their second dinner this week.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone was hostess at a luncheon yesterday at her home on Wyoming avenue in honor of Mrs. Cordell Hull.

Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala, was among the guests of Mrs. Daniel W. O'Donoghue at luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham. Mrs. O'Donoghue entertained in honor of Mrs. Frank Adams, of Montclair, N. J., who is visiting Mrs. Arthur McConville.

Representative Lex Green, of Florida, has been joined at the Mayflower by Mrs. Green and their infant son.

Mrs. Thomas Parran, wife of the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service, was among the guests at luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday of Mrs. John W. Oliphant.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Himes have arrived at the Casa Marina in Key West for a stay of several weeks.

Mrs. William Stork, jr., of Amsterdam, Holland, has arrived to visit Mrs. Elonzo Tyner at the Shoreham. She spent a week in New York before coming here.

Mrs. Edward S. Brashears has taken an apartment for the winter at the Flori de Leon in St. Petersburg, Fla. With her are her mother, Mrs. Belle Long, and her daughter, Mrs. George D. Sullivan.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester D. Brown, of Cleveland, Ohio, and their daughter, Miss Joan Brown, are at the Shoreham for several days after a trip to Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Wood, of New York, accompanied by Mrs. H. Shreve Hensel, of that city, are at the Mayflower.

Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Flynn, of the Fairfax, are spending the season at the Frences Carlton Apartments in Sarasota, Fla. Also there for the season are Mrs. Christine Menke, of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. William Pasfield, of Garden City, Long Island, are at the Mayflower on a honeymoon trip. Mr. Pasfield is a nephew of Henry N. Egly, of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Dr. and Frau Thomsen Entertain 10 at Dinner

The Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Thomsen entertained ten at dinner last night at their residence on Colorado avenue.

Dr. and Frau Thomsen will give another dinner next Wednesday evening. Frau Thomsen hopes to leave later in the month for Florida.

Schleys Attend Dinner Dance

Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, Chief of Engineers, and Mrs. Schley were in the company attending the dinner dance of the Corps of Engineer officers and their wives last evening at the Shoreham.

There were 86 in the party, including Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Max C. Tyler and Brig. Gen. and Mrs. John J. Kingman. Col. John C. H. Lee, of Portland, Oreg., was among the out-of-town guests. Lieut. Col. and Mrs. William A. Snow entertained at cocktails at their residence before the dinner.

Mrs. Whittall Hostess For Mrs. W. J. Orcutt

Mrs. Matthew J. Whittall entertained at a luncheon yesterday in honor of Mrs. William J. Orcutt, of Boston.

There were 24 in the company.

Birth Announced

Maj. and Mrs. Frank J. McSherry, of 3232 Garfield street, announce the birth yesterday of a daughter at Georgetown Hospital. Mrs. McSherry is the former Miss Elizabeth Jones, and is the daughter of Charles H. Jones, of Boston.

Cancels Engagements

Senora de los Rios, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, has canceled all engagements for the next few days because of illness.

Alberta A. Eno Preparing Solo New York Show

Exhibit Will Be Held February 20 to March 4 At the Studio Guild

Alberta A. Eno (Mrs. William Phelps Eno), of Washington, D. C., and Saugatuck, Conn., will give a solo exhibition of paintings at the Studio Guild, 730 Fifth avenue, New York, from February 20 to March 4.

Mrs. Eno and her husband left Washington last spring for their Connecticut estate and have been there most of the time since. At present, however, Mrs. Eno is in New York, where she is completing plans for her exhibition and is entertaining and being entertained. Yesterday, she was hostess at a luncheon at the Pierre for Miss Shirley Keeler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alton S. Keeler, of Rye, N. Y.

To Show Work at Butler Institute

A number of Mrs. Eno's recent paintings—landscapes and birds—will be included in a second show this month. Sponsored by the Butler Art Institute, of Youngstown, Ohio, the exhibition will begin February 17. Arranged by the Studio Guild of New York, the Youngstown display includes all schools of present-day art, but comprises only 30 pictures selected from more than 1,000 submitted from all parts of the country.

One of Washington's outstanding hostesses, Mrs. Eno spent last winter here and her many friends have been hoping she and Mr. Eno would return to their home on N street before the season is over. Letters from her to friends here indicate, however, that they will remain on at their estate in Saugatuck, dividing their time from now until summer between there and New York.

Also Noted as Picture Restorer

Mrs. Eno is known in the art world both for her murals and easel paintings, as a lecturer (especially at the Delgaldo Museum, New Orleans), and as one of this country's few first-class women picture restorers. Two of her murals are in the homes of the Misses Nary and Elizabeth Howry, in Georgetown, and E. Alexander Powell, Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Eno is a native of New Orleans and has lived there for a number of years. As an artist she has been largely self-taught. Her first New York exhibition last year attracted wide attention, and as a result her painting has been solicited for shows by more than a dozen museums and studios in the East and Midwest since that time.

Notables Back Recital Here

A number of notables are on the list of sponsors for the recital to be given by Helen Howison, soprano, and Minna Niemann, pianist, tomorrow afternoon at the Sulgrave Club at 4:30 o'clock.

The Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. William D. Leahy are on the list, which also includes the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart, Col. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Col. and Mrs. Calvin B. Matthews.

Also, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Droop, Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Cuniberti, Mrs. Charles W. Fairfax, Miss Mary L. Gildersleeve, Mrs. Royal T. McKenna, Miss Mary B. Kerr, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, Mrs. Reeve Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Elliot Tilton, Mrs. Lee Warren and Mr. and Mrs. Myron Whitney.

Mary Wilkinson Becomes Wife

At a wedding performed yesterday afternoon in the rectory of Sacred Heart Church, Miss Mary Doris Wilkinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winston Howard Wilkinson, of this city, became the wife of William John Lawless. The ceremony took place at 5 o'clock, with the Rev. John S. Spence officiating. Mr. Lawless is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Anthony Lawless.

The bride, whose only attendant was Miss Jean Phillips, was attired in a street-length frock of periwinkle Bermuda flannel trimmed with a girdle of cerise suede. Her hat and accessories were of matching colors and her corsage was of orange blossoms. James Stewart was best man.

After February 11, the couple will make their home at Foxhall Village.

Mrs. Sherman Fetes Rocklens

Mrs. Julitte Evans Sherman, of Los Angeles, who has been at the Mayflower since the first of the year, gave a cocktail party in the lounge yesterday for Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Rocklen, of California.

Among the guests were Senator D. Worth Clark, of Idaho; Attorney General G. A. Giles, of Utah; Thomas A. Morgan, of New York; Delwin Smith and Jack Tenney, of Inglewood, Calif., composer of the hit song "Mexicali Rose."

Lady Leslie Feted

Visitor Is Widely Entertained

Harris & Ewing.

Mrs. Edwin Ball Abbott, of Atlanta, Ga., is now the house guest of her parents, Justice and Mrs. Justine Miller, and during her visit in Washington is being widely feted. She will be honored at a tea to be given tomorrow afternoon by Mrs. Miller. Before her marriage, Mrs. Abbott was Miss Jean Marian Miller

Washington, jr., Glenn Lamson, jr., and Richard B. Washington.

Miss Violet Smith and her brother, Howard Worth Smith, jr., will entertain some 50 guests at dinner at the Mayflower Hotel before the dance; and Douglas Smith has issued invitations to 30 guests who will come from Washington, Warrenton, Winchester, Fairfax and Alexandria.

Mrs. Robert E. Lee 3rd, one of the patronesses for the cotillion, will be guest of honor at a dinner to be given tomorrow evening by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Crockett, of Alexandria.

Their other uests will include Mrs. Francis I. Dupont, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wallace Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Radue, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fauntleroy Harbison, Col. and Mrs. A. D. Rorex, Maj. and Mrs. Gouveneur Hoes, Maj. and Mrs. Thomas J. Betts and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Richardson.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Robert Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Royall Baker, Judge and Mrs. George Washington Williams, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Billingsley, Mr. and Mrs. Rives Childs, Dr. Samuel H. Williams, Miss Emma Perley Sinclair, Miss Helen Cruickshank, Arthur Dale Jackson and Glenn B. Martineauw.

Texas Alumni Plan Dinner

Dr. Homer P. Rainey, president-designate of the University of Texas and at present director of the American Youth Commission, will be guest of honor at a dinner given by former students of the university on March 2, at 7:30 p. m., in the National Press Club.

Mestin G. White, solicitor for the Department of Agriculture and formerly a professor in the law school of the University of Texas, is in charge of arrangements.

Assisting Mr. White will be George Wythe, in charge of the program committee; Hampson Gary, in charge of broadcasting; Clifford G. Beckham, in charge of the ticket committee; McFall Kerbey, in charge of the banquet committee; Ashley Sellers, in charge of seating arrangements; Mrs. E. C. Mather, in charge of decorations, and Bob Baldrige, in charge of publicity.

Senators Morris Sheppard and Tom Connally and 12 of the 21 members of the House of Representatives are former students of the University of Texas. Vice President Garner holds one of the two honorary degrees ever awarded by the university. Invitations have been sent to numbers of outstanding Texas officials. March 2, Texas Independence Day, has been the occasion for many years of the annual reunion.

Bolton Party Honors Senator and Mrs. Taft

Senator and Mrs. Robert Taft were guests of honor at a dinner given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Chester Bolton at the Bolton's home, 2301 Wyoming avenue. There were 18 guests.

'At Homes' Held by Two Cabinet Wives

Mrs. Morgenthau And Mrs. Wallace Are Hostesses

Though the end of the season for Cabinet "at homes" is approaching, society has lost none of its enthusiasm for these affairs, and yesterday hundreds turned out for the two at which Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, were hostesses. The first was held in the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Morgenthau on Thirtieth street, and Mrs. Wallace entertained in her apartment at the Wardman Park.

Mrs. Morgenthau received in the drawing room. She wore a black crepe floor-length tea gown, fashioned with a draped cowl at the neckline. Receiving with Mrs. Morgenthau were Mrs. John W. Hanes, Mrs. Wayne-Chatfield Taylor and Mrs. Stephen B. Gibbons.

Lady Lister-Kaye Noted Among Guests

Noticed here and there among the guests were Lady Lister-Kaye, who was gowned in fuchsia with a matching, peaked hat; Mrs. Brady Ruttencutter, in a black Parisian model; Mrs. George Thorpe, Miss Pauletta Guffey and Miss Ida V. Guffey, Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, Mme. Bianchi, Mrs. Frank T. Hines, and Miss Margaret Delano Gage.

Mrs. Harold L. Ickes came in wearing a smart outfit of Oxford gray, with a wrought silver clip at the neck to match the buckle at the girdle. Mrs. Julian L. Schley was in black with a gray squirrel cape.

Also noted were Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. James Craig Peacock, Mme. Bostrom, Mrs. Charles Hatfield, Mme. Wadsted, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. Frances Cabell Brown, in a smart dubonnet and silver lame gown and a matching tiny hat trimmed with mink; Mrs. John Z. Anderson, of California, Mrs. Robert F. Rich, of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Robert Brennan.

Mrs. Wallace wore a floor-length tea gown of black, topped by a long-sleeved peajacket of iridescent pearl sequins. At her throat was a necklace of twisted strands of pearls. Receiving with Mrs. Wallace was Mrs. M. L. Wilson, wife of the Undersecretary of Agriculture. Mrs. Wilson was in lavender crepe with a hat of slightly darker shade. Generally assisting during the afternoon were Mrs. James LeCron and Mrs. Donald Richberg.

Many Notables Seen in Crowd

Alternating at the tea table were Mrs. Hugo Black, who was also gowned in black, with large silver fox furs and a velvet streamer threaded through her black tricorne hat; Mrs. Ickes, Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, in black, with a bright red velvet hat; Mrs. Harry Brown, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. James Helm, Mrs. Casenove Lee, who wore a brown frock with a hat to match and touches of soft green at the neckline and girdle; and Mrs Wilson Compton, who was in rust with brown accessories.

Noted among the guests were Mrs. John Allen Dougherty, Mme. Marc Peter, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker; Mrs. John H. Bankhead, Mrs. W. C. Harllee and Mrs. Ralph Brewster.

Also Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Albert Gore, Mrs. Guy W. Gillette, Mrs. J. W. Buchanan, Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd Shippen, Mrs. William D. Byron, Mrs. Ames A. Fries, Mrs. Arthur H. Tirrell, Miss Mary Randolph and Mrs. Justin Miller.

Among the others were Mrs. Victor Kwonglee, Kwong, Mrs. Sin-ju Pu Hsiao, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mrs. Philip O. Walker, Mrs. J. W. Kern, Miss Beth Abbott, Mrs. Zed Griffith and Mrs. William T. Davis.

Sen. Walsh Addresses Navy Sponsors Here

Assistant Secretary of Navy Edison Also Speaks at Mayflower Luncheon Closing Annual Meeting

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Declaring this country "will never have war unless it is one of its own making," Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, yesterday advocated "a strong and unmistakable policy of neutrality and adequate national defense" as "two ways absolutely to avoid war." Senator Walsh, sharing the program with Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, addressed the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy at the luncheon which closed their annual meeting in the Mayflower Hotel.

Asserting he placed neutrality above national defense as a factor in maintaining peace, Senator Walsh urged "a state of mind against interfering with what other people think is their right."

"I believe that in a world that is mad, unreasonable and trouble-disposed, strict neutrality is most important and highly desirable."

No Assurance Against Changes

"What assurance have we what the world will be a year from today or a year from tomorrow?" he asked, pointing out that a change might take place in Italy if Mussolini were not at the helm; that the government of France might be different then from now and other conditions in Europe entirely altered.

"It is not our concern what kind of governments other nations have," he said, urging a "mind your own business" policy and attention to such domestic problems as unemployment.

"I am talking about peace," he said. "We will never have war in this country unless it is one of our own making. No one is going to come here to take our gold or molest our people unless we have done something which they deem an injury to them."

Senator Walsh urged a Navy that "every nation or combination of nations in the world in peacetime will respect and in time of war will fear."

Assistant Secretary Edison told the Navy sponsors their membership was in a fair way to be considerably augmented in the years "just around the corner" by the simple expedient of furnishing more ships to christen. Outlining the present building program, he observed: "If the affairs of the world permit us to complete this program before we have urgent need for the added strength it will give us, we will be fortunate.

"Unlike the Army, the Navy that we have when war breaks out is the Navy that we must content ourselves with for many months, or even years."

Mrs. Russell Langdon, of New York, president of the society, presided at the luncheon and Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, also spoke briefly. She asserted her organization had always stood for peace but considered the only assurance of it an adequate national defense.

Many Distinguished Guests Attend

Guests of honor at the luncheon were Senator Walsh and Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Edison. Other distinguished guests included Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations; Rear Admiral William G. DuBose, Rear Admiral H. G. Bowen, Rear Admiral and Mrs. George Pettengill, Rear Admiral and Mrs. J. O. Richardson, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, Mrs. Robert, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, editor of the National Historical Magazine of the Daughters of the American Revolution; William A. Ayres, of the Federal Trade Commission; Mrs. Frank K. Buck, wife of Representative Buck, and Lady Lister-Kaye.

Among other guests were Col. Russell Langdon, Commander and Mrs. Frank Slingluff, Mrs. Albert Niblack, Mrs. Royal K. Joslin, Mrs. Charles Godwin Moore, Mrs. Barron DuBois, Miss Katharine Goodwin, Miss Lillian Chenoweth, D. C. State regent of the D. A. R.; Mrs. P. L. Hodges, Miss Janet Lake, Mrs. H. T. Kays, Mrs. T. Oscar Williams, left, noted New York poet, spoke last night at the dinner of the poetry group of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women at which prizes in the undergraduate poetry contest were announced. Others in the picture are, left to right, Miss Barbara Bellow, winner of second prize; Rex Lowman, winner of first; Mrs. Horace Torbert, chairman of the group, and Miss Solange Strong, third prize winner

University Women Award Poetry Prize to Rex Lowman

Oscar Williams Is Guest of Honor At Dinner for Student Winners; Ella L. Smith to Speak on Spain

Rex Lowman, a junior at Gallaudet College, last night was announced as winner of first prize in the annual undergraduate poetry contest conducted by the poetry group of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women. Oscar Williams, New York poet, was guest of honor and speaker at the dinner given for the students who won honors in the contest. Mrs. Horace Torbert, chairman of the poetry group, presided.

Mr. Lowmain was given first prize on his poem, "Ulysses Remembers." Second prize was awarded to Miss Barbara Bellow, a freshman at Wilson Teachers' College on "Third Sonnet" and Solange Strong, a senior at American University, won third prize on "Nascitur Mus."

First honorable mention went to Miss Elizabeth Hanlon, a junior at Trinity College, on her poem, "On Seeing Renoir's Portrait;" second to Jean Sartwell, a senior at American University, on "Velasquez to El Greco," and third to Cecil R. Martin, a freshman at the University of Maryland, on "Ballade of the Stardust Trail." The poems were read by Miss Alberta Walker.

Writing a great poem is more important than having a great bank account, Mr. Williams told members of the poetry group. He ceased to write poems and even gave up reading them in 1921, he said, inspired with the usual ambition of a young man to make a financial success. Two years ago, he was obliged to awaken to a revaluation of life and has since been devoting himself again to his writing of poetry —"an honorable and important task."

Poetry, declared Mr. Williams, is an element, like water or fire, and no expression has reached that state until it "gets you."

He read examples of his early work and of his recent poems, the former light and romantic in contrast to the bold imagery of the latter.

Mrs. Robert Olesen, president of the club, was among the guests present.

Among the guests were Miss Ruth Henderson, Mrs. Vernon Kellogg, Miss Pearl Cooper, Miss Elizabeth Peet, Dr. Winifred Richmond, Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, Mrs. Richard Hogue and Miss Mary Louise Brown.

Miss Elia L. Smith, M. A. Oxon, will speak Saturday on "Issues of the Spanish War" at a luncheon being arranged by the international relations section of the A. A. U. W. Mis Smith, who obtained a "first in modern history honors" at Oxford, and has been a lecturer on modern history at Smith College, spent the summer in Spain following the outbreak of the war. She made a study of the areas in control of the loyalist government and those held by Gen. Franco's forces.

Miss Smith will be introduced by Mrs. John Donaldson, chairman of the section and will present an analysis of the Spanish situation on the basis of her first-hand knowledge and her study of matters relevant to the Spanish conflict. Dr. Irene Wright will lead the discussion following.

Miss Smith's lectures are presented with the purpose of informing and clarifying the issues rather than to plead the case of either side, according to those who have heard her. President W. Allan Neilson, of Smith College, commented, "I doubt if there is anyone available at present for lectures on Spain who has just her special knowledge and equipment."

Chinese Actors To Play Here

The Chinese Salvation Association of Washington has completed plans for the appearance here of the Chinese Cultural Theater Group, composed of ten young Chinese men and women, members of the professional and international society of Shanghai, who are touring the United States to raise money for civilian relief in China. There will be two performances, one Sunday, principally for the Chinese, and the other Monday, for the general public, both at 8:15 p. m.

With 40 trunks of costumes and properties, the group arrived in California last September, where they made several well received appearances. Their leader is Mrs. Ernest S. H. Tong, wife of the counselor of the Kwangtung Provincial government, who has broken an age-long tradition by taking part in theatricals. Others of the cast include Wei Chung-loh, chairman and professor at Ta Tung National Musical Research Institute and famed as a player of the Chinese guitar; Miss Virginia Chang, daughter of a former Chinese minister to Chile, and Miss Ethel Chun, grand-daughter of Sir Shousen Chow, knighted by King George V for his work in Hongkong.

The sponsoring association is an organization composed of all the Chinese residents of Washington, with Eugene Moy as executive secretary. This group has been active in sending relief to China's war victims.

The committee arranging this event includes D. G. Lam, the Rev. C. C. Hung, pastor of the Chinese Church, and Mrs. Hung; Tennyson Chang, Mr. Moy, Frank Fang, Sing Li and Dr. T. Y. Hu.

Mrs. Roosevelt Patroness for St. Thomas Tea

Mrs. Roosevelt heads the list of honorary patronesses for the charity bridge and tea to be given at the Shoreham Monday, under auspices of the Rector's Aid Society of St. Thomas' Church.

Taxi Factions Offer Four Rate Plans

Threat of Strike Unless Fares Are Raised Is Voiced In P. U. C. Hearing

Taxicab drivers split in four factions, each defending a new system of proposed rate and zone charges, as a threat of a taxicab strike threw the first public hearing yesterday into a state of confusion.

Independent drivers sought cnanges separate from those proposed by associations.

Albert Marcus, who is a member of the Federal Cab Association, but stated he was speaking for himself, faced the Public Utilities Commission and said:

"If rates are not raised we taxicab people will take things in our own hands."

He referred to the Shriners' convention held here several years ago when the drivers threatened a strike if the rates were not changed.

His remarks were applauded by a large portion of the more than 80 drivers present.

Four Plans Offered

The four plans suggested follow:

Division of the city into 15 squares. The rate would be 20 cents in any one square and an additional 10 cents for each square crossed.

Increase of 5 cents for each present zone rate.

A system of auxiliary zone lines within the present zones, and an increase of 10 cents in the rates for the second, third and fourth zones. This plan left the first zone intact, with no auxiliary lines.

A plan similar to No. 3 but including an auxiliary line in the first zone, running along Third street northwest, between Florida avenue on the north and D street on the south.

Approach to Meters

A. S. Lenox, who proposed the "square" system maintained this was the closest approach to meters. He said the zone which would compare with the present first zone would be bounded by First, Twenty-second and P streets and Independence avenue, all in the northwest section.

It was brought out that the average daily intake of a driver approximated $7.50, and the daily expenses, $5.00.

Only one citizen association at the hearing opposed rate increases. Walter A. Wasson, president of the West End Citizens Association, said his group was against any increase or change in zones.

William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Association, said the association would back up any move for an increase in rates if it could be proven that a reduction in drivers' earnings resulted from the recently imposed compulsory liability insurance.

He suggested the commission regulate the "financing of taxicabs by associations" somewhat as it regulates the transit company.

Independents Object

A. L. Livsie, of the independent rate and zone committee, and a driver of a Diamond cab, submitted the plan for changes in the present zones with the exception of the first. He said his plan was indorsed by 1,468 drivers.

The independent drivers said 90 per cent of their daily business was centered in the first zone and that the proposal by Livsie would not help them.

It was pointed out that one may take a 7-mile ride from Sixteenth street and the District line across the city to Bladensburg road, never leaving the fourth zone and consequently paying only 20 cents.

The hearing will be resumed today at 10 a. m.

Federal Pay Roll For December Set Peacetime Record

A new peacetime high in the Federal pay roll for December was reported yesterday by the United States Civil Service Commission. The peak was close to the all-time high of 1918.

During the month of December 917,303 employes were registered. The November, 1918, peak was 917,670 persons employed in the executive branch of the Government.

More than 48,000 persons were put on the Federal pay roll during the month. The November total was 869,256.

Boys Club Plans $75,000 Drive

Plans for raising $75,000 in contributions were mapped last night by the membership committee of the Police Boys Club. The chairman of the committee, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, appointed a committee which will begin soliciting large donations February 18.

A woman's division committee was set up, headed by Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner. The campaign proper will extend from February 27 to March 18.

Many Cripples Held Doomed By Ignorance

Thousands of Children Could Be Cured, Say G. U. Forum Speakers

Ignorant or uninformed parents annually condemn thousands of children who might be cured to go through life crippled, a panel of medical experts agreed last night in Georgetown University's second Public Health Forum broadcast.

Only about 100,000 of the estimated 375,000 orthopedically crippled children in the United States are registered at public clinics, the panel said. Yet the children thus crippled represent a small proportion of the thousands hindered by other defects.

Dr. John R. Cavenagh, chairman of the forum, said the definition "hindered child" correctly should include those handicapped by heart disease, glandular disturbances, blindness, deafness, or defective speech, many of whom could be cured.

Dr. Custis Lee Hall, of George Washington University, discussed the problem from the standpoint of the orthopedic surgeon. Miss Edith Baker, principal consultant of the Children's Bureau in medical social work, discussed that field, and Miss Naomi Deutsch, director of Public Health nursing, Children's Bureau, told of efforts to get crippled children to clinics.

Some 21,000 nurses, employed throughout the country in this work, she said, find that "feelings of shame" or belief that a handicap cannot be relieved may prevent parents from taking hindered children to be examined.

One suggestion to parents of crippled children was that they write to the White House.

Dr. Hill will deliver the weekly forum lecture Thursday at 8:15 p. m. in Gaston Hall on the Georgetown campus. He will deal with the problem of the orthopedically handicapped child.

Window-Smashing Ring Broken Up

A window-smashing ring that had sought to intimidate merchants in the Northwest section during the last few weeks was broken up yesterday, police said, with the arrest of three colored men.

A fourth escaped after a thrilling chase over rooftops in the 1300 block of Park road. He leaped from a third story roof, landed in soft earth and fled.

Lieut. Joseph Shimon and Detectives William G. Fawcett and H. H. Britton, of the pickup squad, made the arrests.

John Caswell, jr., chaplain. Trustees named were Paul Hutchins, Nathan Golden and Capt. Eugene Burr.

Dr. Call to Discuss Force in World Affairs

Dr. Arthur Deerin Call, secretary of the American Peace Society, will speak on "The Place of Force in International Relations" at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow in the third of a series of educational forums under auspices of the Central Young Men's Christian Association at 1736 G street northwest.

A panel will consist of George A. Finch, editor of the American Journal of International Law, chairman; Dr. Herbert Wright, professor of international law at Catholic University; Cornelius Ferris, retired veteran of the Consular Service, and the Rev. Dr. S. R. Brooks, pastor of the National Memorial Universalist Church.

Recorder Says Better Business RaisedReceipts

Thompkins Again Renews Efforts for New Building

Receipts of the office of Recorder of Deeds for the District totaled $164,750.10 in 1937, an increase of $35,360 over 1936, Dr. William J. Thompkins, recorder, revealed yesterday in his annual report. This increase he attributed to better business conditions in the real estate field and new fees under recent legislation.

Business for the current fiscal year, he said, has shown a 12 per cent increase over the same period last year.

Legislation has been prepared for amendments to the corporation laws to prevent discrimination against District of Columbia corporations, and for registration of automobile and vehicle titles.

Dr. Thompkins again called attention to the unsuitable building in which the office is housed at present. Provision made for him, under the $18,000,000 PWA project, as handled by the Commissioners, has proven unsuitable, he explained. He said he will renew efforts to secure legislation authorizing erection of a recorder of deeds building, if not on Judiciary Square, then on Fifth street, directly across from the courts in which the records of the office are used.

The Government expended $208,400 for rent from 1919 to 1937, which, together with the $250,000 representing a surplus in fees collected and turned into the Treasury when the office was placed on the appropriation system, would have been more than sufficient to pay for the proposed new structure, he said.

Brewster Urges Townsend Plan As Relief Panacea

Representative Ralph O. Brewster (Republican), of Maine, yesterday told the House Ways and Means Committee that adoption of the Townsend old-age pension plan "will make it possible to do away with other forms of relief."

William H. McMasters, of Cambridge, Mass., candidate for Governor in the last Republican primary, also urged the Townsend plan.

Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Honor Dr. Weiss, Retiring Chief

President Served Two Terms, Was Active in Group's Affairs More Than 10; New Tax Program Is Offered

The Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association honored its retiring president, Dr. Freeman Weiss, last night in a resolution of tribute to the "outstanding civic leader who has given so generously of his energy, time and talent to community welfare activities."

Dr. Weiss, association president for two terms and a leader in its affairs for more than ten years, was tendered a vote of thanks for his "vigorous and constructive administration."

The association adopted a comprehensive tax program which it urged Congress to consider if revision of the District's tax structure is proved necessary.

The program proposed repeal of the intangible property tax and the business privilege levy and substitution of a selective income tax, a retail sales tax, a five per cent tax on net incomes of corporations doing business in the District and a 2 per cent tax on gross income of parking lots.

The association also advocated authority for the Commissioners to change the personal property tax rate up to $1.50 per thousand valuation. It suggested a sales tax not in excess of 2 per cent with exemptions on foods, medicines and sales under 25 cents.

The association indorsed the Overton plan for establishing a new financial relationship between the District and the Federal Government.

Michigan Park

The meeting of the Michigan Park Citizens Association was interrupted last night by an invasion of citizens loudly protesting against the grade of houses being erected in the area. Permits have been issued for the erection of four houses where the city plotting called for two, they declared, demanding that the association take action.

The association indorsed the request for $2,500,000 for a new library, and termed the Central Library, at Mount Vernon place between Seventh and Ninth streets, a "disgrace to the city."

It was reported that the condition of Frank Keeley, who was hit by an automobile last Thursday, at Twelfth and Michigan streets northeast, was still critical, and that although the association had for 20 years requested a traffic light for this intersection, William Van Duzer, District Director of Vehicles and Traffic, refused the light on the grounds that there was not enough foot traffic there. The report to the association stated that 600 school children use the crossing daily.

Junior College Told China Schools Suffer in Conflict

United States Ambassador to China Nelson T. Johnson told students of the Chevy Chase Junior College yesterday that even the ancient philosophies of China are being given new interpretations under the stress of modern events.

He said the universities and schools are moving westward and educational facilities are at an ebb in the eastern part of the country, as a result.

The ultimate effect on Asia of the rising tide of cultural nationalism, he said, is engendering growing feeling of unity among the Chinese.

Police Hold Secret Tear Gas Drills

Fear Relief Riots After WPA Slash; Study Mob Tactics

Instruction in use of tear gas and formation of four special anti-riot squads has been begun by the Metropolitan Police with a view to preparing for possible demonstrations protesting the recent slash in WPA funds, The Post learned last night.

More than 70 top-ranking police officers, according to the report, were summoned by Maj. Ernest W. Brown to a conference early this week where detailed orders were given on the use of tear gas as well as a gas inducing nausea. All sergeants and acting sergeants were called to a second meeting yesterday for continuation of the instruction.

Secrecy Ordered

Both conferences were begun with brief announcements on the subject of pedestrian control, and officers attending were ordered to observe strict secrecy as to the major purpose of the meetings.

Besides training and equipping four six-man squads for tear gas operations, police plans call for instruction of every member of the force in riot duty, it is understood.

Preparations include plans for protecting the Capitol, White House, Labor and Interior Department buildings and other structures which might be the objective of relief demonstrations. Police would act in co-operation with the Army and National Guard.

Tear Gas Inventory

Another preparatory step was the recent inventory of all tear gas equipment now in police warehouses, squad cars and precinct stations.

The local force drew severe criticism in 1932 for alleged inadequacy of its preparations to cope with "hunger marchers" on the Capital.

Two officers who served on the tear gas squad organized here at that time, Capt. Harvey Callahan and Capt. Lloyd Kelley, are reported to have given instruction at the special conferences this week.

Rep. Fay Awaits New Operation at Hospital

Representative Fay (Democrat), of New York, will undergo a new operation on his left leg at Walter Reed Hospital within the next few days, hospital attaches said last night.

The leg was amputated in the World War, but the injury has been bothering Fay recently and has failed to heal, it was explained.

Fay last November defeated John J. O'Connor, sole victim of the Roosevelt purge.

Civil Service Holds Exams Tomorrow

Examinations for stenographer and typist positions (males only) will be held tomorrow and Saturday by the Civil Service Commission with the commission anticipating 600 competitors here. Every man must bring his typewriter. Re-examination will not be granted because of faulty typewriters," the commission says.

Forgets to Lock Safe

Eugene E. Behrend, manufacturing jeweler, locked the door of his shop above 931 F street northwest when he left to call on a customer, but he didn't lock his safe. That omission cost him $1,000 in assorted jewelry, he reported to police, when someone entered during his absence and helped himself to the safe's contents.

Capital News In Brief

Young as he is, Lacey Jones, colored, 3, of 112 M place southeast, has demonstrated an uncanny capacity for holding on to money, his parents, police and Casualty Hospital physicians learned last night.

Lacey had a penny and, unless some internal cataclysm occurred during the night, still has it. The youngster swallowed this penny and while he gasped and wheezed, a Casualty ambulance was summoned. A half hour of the best medical attention failing to separate the penny from Lacey, the ambulance physician advised his parents to take him to the hospital today for an X-ray examination.

Civitan Boys to Meet

The Washington Civitan Club will hold the first of its bi-monthly meetings for the members of the Civitan Boys Garden Club tonight at their clubhouse 100 Anacostia road northeast. Dr. W. R. Beattie, senior horticulturist of the United States Department of Agriculture will speak on "Good Gardening." Bill Werber will present the film "The First Century of Baseball."

Neighborhood Discussion

Plans for the future recreational developments of the entire upper Northwest section, including Parkview, Petworth, Columbia Heights, Brightwood, and Piney Branch road, will be discussed at a Neighborhood Council Meeting tonight at 7:45 in the Roosevelt Community Center, Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest.

James Ring, chairman of the Coordinating Committee of Neighborhood Councils, will present the council program for neighborhood research and co-operation. D. M. Nichols, chairman of the Parkview Neighborhood Council, will preside.

Woman Interrupts Holdup

Somewhere in Washington is a woman who walked into a holdup last night and walked out of it a little upset because the holdup couldn't be halted to supply her with a newspaper.

Louis J. Gitomer, 58, druggist, of 1030 Fourth street southwest, and his daughter, Betty, 26, were being held up by two colored men when the customer entered and asked for a paper. Gitomer, his daughter and the bandits formed a tense tableau while the woman was informed a holdup was in progress and she couldn't be accommodated immediately.

"All right," she said. "I'll go somewhere else and get my paper."

Griffenhagen Plan Said to Spare Jobs

Will Help Efforts To Add Personnel, Not Cause Layoffs, Kennedy Asserts

Reorganization of the District government along lines laid down in the Griffenhagen report could be launched without any disruption of present personnel, Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, said last night.

While the plan would call ultimately for a reduction of employes, as boards were consolidated and eliminated, no employes would be dropped as a result of the system, he said.

In the general streamlining and bringing up to date the District's governmental structure, Congressional leaders declared, moves to obtain additional personnel in various District institutions and agencies would be furthered rather than hindered.

Representative Kennedy, chairman of the House sub-committee in charge of the bill, helped with the governmental reorganization in Baltimore and learned there, he said, that important changes can be effected without layoffs.

No personalities were involved in the Griffhagen plan, a member of the firm making the report declared yesterday, although the name of Elwood Street, director of the Board of Public Welfare, was conspicuously missing from the list of existing officials who were specified as desirable for retention. The omission was an oversight only, the firm member declared.

The chairman of the House District Committee, Jennings Randolph, reported yesterday that an order for 1,000 copies of the bill—"the limit under present legislation"—had been placed with the Government Printing Office.

D. C. Court Enjoins Cemetery Lot Firm

Justice Jennings Bailey yesterday signed an injunction against sale of securities of Memorial Estates, with offices in the Woodward Building, until the securities are registered under the securities act.

The SEC filed complaint in District Court, asserting that the firm, headed by Kenneth B. Martin, had sold unregistered securities in the District, Maryland, Iowa, Illinois and Maine, in violation of the SEC act. The securities were in the form of profit-sharing agreements for investment in cemetery lots.

H. R. Dooley, Won't Loaf at 82, Now Paints

By Gerald G. Gross.

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.)

Ask Henry R. Dooley, 82 last October 10, if he can play a violin or "shoot the sun" with a sextant and he probably will reply:

"I don't know because I never tried but I wouldn't mind giving them both a whirl."

He has been an automotive mechanic, plumber, vocal teacher, farmer and painter without ever having received any formal education in those fields and today his chief passion is landscape and animal painting, though he never took an art lesson.

"Sitting around without a job worries me," says the energetic Mr. Dooley, who lives at 5513 Eighth street northwest. "I've been that way ever since I was a boy. If I didn't have something to do I would turn a handspring or find someone to wrestle with."

When he started out in water colors a couple of years ago, his purpose was solely to occupy his time. As one who had worked ever since he was old enough to cut wood on his father's farm in western Pennsylvania, retirement at any age was well nigh impossible for him. Painting pictures, he thought, was a good way to kill time but when friends began placing purchase orders with him he realized he had something.

In fact, Mr. Dooley was "turned in" to "Life Begins at 70" by a neighborhood friend who has bought several of his pictures.

"But understand, now, I lay no claim to their being art," the hustling little octogenarian puts in. "I do copying mostly, not real creative stuff. But they're not so bad now, are they?"

Thrown across his bed, as he speaks, are several dozen of his framed works—French cathedrals, country landscapes, dogs and horses, sheep and a still life or two. The colors are bright and cheerful but not exaggerated. His pen drawing of Rheims Cathedral has the preciseness of a steel etching.

"Why shouldn't I do something to keep busy?" Mr. Dooley asks. "I feel as good as I ever did. If I loafed, I'd get sick as sure as fate."

The father of 12 children, eight of whom are still living, he brought his family to Washington in 1889. A fire in his oleomargarine factory put him out of business in 1901 and he became an ornamental iron worker in Hagerstown, Md. He was successively a creamery operator, plumber, chief mechanic for a Washington taxicab company and custodian of a girls' college in nearby Maryland.

His sidelines during these years included bookkeeping and teaching of singing.

GEORGETOWN STOPS MARYLAND, 39-25

Hoyas Solve Foes' Zone Defense to Win Before 4,000

Close Game Is Turned Into Rout in 2d Half Murphy Sets Pace for Winners at College Park Central Bows to Maryland Frosh, 34-21

By Jack Munhall.

Splitting Maryland's gradually-weakening zone defense with a deadly barrage of long, set shots in the second half, Georgetown suddenly turned a close game into a rout last night and walloped the Terrapins, 39-25, in the fifth annual renewal of their colorful rivalry at Ritchie Coliseum.

Before 4,000 wild-eyed fans, divided sharply and vociferously in their partisanship, who jammd the huge field house to capacity and sprawled along the sidelines to fill every available inch of space, the Hoyas duplicated last season's decisive defeat of the Old Liners and took a 4-1 edge in the series.

The victory, Georgetown's ninth in 14 starts, also boosted it into undisputed first place in the unofficial race for the District championship which probably will be decided when the Hoyas get together with George Washington's hot-handed crew, March 8.

For Maryland the game marked its sixth loss in 14 games and pushed it into third position behind the Colonials.

DeWitt Has Edge

One other leadership was altered by last night's rough, action-packed battle, for George Dewitt, Maryland's lanky, sharp-featured forward, again forged ahead of G. W.'s Bob Faris in their nip-and-tuck race for individual point champion.

But even the 13 points which Dewitt flipped in from here, there and everywhere failed to save Maryland, because while Dewitt and his running mate, Capt. George Knepley, almost completely dominated the team's attack no less than five Georgetown players were constant threats.

It was Riches, particularly, and Kurtyka who inspired the fast second-half attack that boosted Georgetown's slender 20-15 half-time lead into more ample and, for the Hoyas rooters, more comfortable proportions. Riches, fleet bantamweight, whose lack of height has handicapped him for three years, finally came into his own. And he did it in the game that all Georgetown and Maryland players most desire to be good.

Murphy Tops Scorers

Murphy was Georgetown's leading scorer with four field goals and three fouls for 11 points. But how well the Hoyas' attack was divided is seen by the fact that Kurtyka, McGowan and Rizzi, in addition to Riches, weighed in with three baskets.

In the preliminary Maryland's freshmen defeated Central High School of Washington 34-21, for their ninth victory in ten games this season.

Mearle Duvall, Terp star, kept intact his record of having scored 10 points or more every game by rolling up five baskets and a brace of free throws.

The yearlings were much too tall and fast for the school boys and could have won even more easily.

Nats' Rookies Unbeatable—At Meal Time

Harris Expects Good Rookie Crop Providing The Food Holds Out

By the Associated Press.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 8.—If the commissary holds out, Manager Buckey Harris thinks his rookie "kindergarten" may produce one or two likely recruits for Washington's Senators.

And if abilities matched appetites the flock of youngsters could run the Yankees into the East River right now.

At the big white boarding house where Bucky has housed his score of hopefuls since beginning classes February 1, "pass the biscuits" is the signal for pitches and catches that would warm any manager's heart on the field.

"Boy, Do I Stuff?"

"Boy, do I stuff?" was the way Southpaw Bill Holland, of Charlotte and Orlando, summed it up.

Harris was more than fairly optimistic that out of the bunch he would develop at least two or three to give the Senators much-needed reinforcements in the "stop the Yankees" campaign come next summer.

Bucky was particularly enthusiastic over Lefthanders Joe Krakauskas and Kendall Chase, who saw some service with Washington last season.

"Those two can't miss," said Harris, violating one of his prime precepts—never go out on a limb.

Won 7, Lost 5 in '38

Krakauskas won seven and lost five with the Nats last year after a late start, and Chase won nine and dropped 10, showing excellent form the latter part of the campaign.

Of the others, Harris regards "Bucky" Jacobs, who won 21 and lost 5 with Charlotte last season, as perhaps the best prospect.

"Jacobs won't strike out many batters but then you won't murder his pitching either," Harris observed.

Also listed among the promising prospects are Arnold Anderson, brought up from Charlotte, and Tom Baker, obtained from the Giants.

Touchdown Club Moves For Stadium

Committee Will Seek Appropriation; Site at 15th and H Possible

Meeting at the Hamilton Hotel last night, a committee headed by J. Leighton Cornwell, of the Touchdown Club of Washington, took what it termed its first "definite action" in a long drive to obtain a stadium worthy of the Nation's Capital.

The committee, sponsored by the Touchdown Club, a local organization of sports-minded citizens who have long been fighting for a stadium to make Washington eligible for such spectacles as the Army-Navy game and the Olympics, took the following three significant steps:

1. Adoption of a resolution to call upon Congress to appropriate sufficient funds for the study of plans and sites for a stadium to accommodate 120,000 persons.

2. Appointment of a committee, headed by Tom Sandoz, representing the Real Estate Board, to meet with the Park and Planning Commission at 1 o'clock tomorrow to look at its modified plans for a stadium.

3. Appointment of a second committee to investigate a site at Fifteenth and H streets northeast, for its possibilities of building ground for a stadium.

The committee to meet with the Park and Planning Commission is composed of Harvey Jones and John Benney, representing the Washington Board of Trade; William Watt, athletic officer of the District American Legion posts; Michael Hyman, Department of Justice American Legion posts, and Len Walsh, Ted Welliver and Ralph Pittman, of the Touchdown Club.

The second committee is comprised of J. Leighton Cornwell, chairman, and Tom Sandoz and Harvey Jones.

MAURICE ENRIGHT

When some public spirited soul ventures the opinion that the feet of policemen and shopgirls take an awful beating throughout the day, Maurice (Bum) Enright sniffs faintly and changes the subject. "Bum" is one of the busiest and most popular basketball referees in town. Anyone who hasn't seen his wraith-like figure slide up and down a basketball court and suddenly stop proceedings with a loud "'You're holding on the arm!" is still a strang-

Washington College Star Brings Total Points to 961 for Annapolis Five

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 8.—In a Maryland Collegiate Association game of basketball here tonight Washington College won from the St. John's Colts, 64 to 30, which was no surprise, and the real interest attended the highly successful efforts of Alex Zebrowski, rangy sharp-shooting center of the Eastern Shoremen to reach a total of 1,000 points for the four years he has been playing for Washington.

When Zebrowski started tonight his total was 920 points, and when the game was over he had scored 41 of the 80 points he wanted to realize his ambition.

No Cheering Rule Waived For Ky. Bouts

Because of Columbus University's protest that the rule could not be enforced despite vigilance by the referee, the District of Columbia Boxing Commission yesterday announced that cheering during the progress of a round in college bouts would not be prohibited, if the contending schools agree to such a waiver.

One reason for the boxing commission's act was an incident which arose in the recent Columbus-De-Sales match. When the referee, acting clearly within the rules and requirements of the National Intercollegiate Athletic Association, halted a bout and made an appeal for silence, it served only to aggravate the situation.

In his letter to the boxing commission requesting waiver of the unpopular rule, Provost John R. Fitzpatrick of Columbus University stated:

"For a number of years I have entertained the opinion that the no cheering rule is strictly artificial. The purpose may be worthy but its application tends to stifle a natural urge. Those witnessing a boxing exhibition desire to give vent to their feelings as those witnessing football and other sports events. The rule, it seems to me, is unnatural and has no place in the rule book."

Two Freshman Teams Face High Schools

I have seen four stories in local papers in the past few days on El Chico . . . and every one came from the same Kentucky Derby handout . . . looks as if the scribes should begin reading each other's papers . . . Bozie Berger, former Tech High and Maryland U. star, leaves to join the Red Sox in the South on February 16 . . . Berger still retains a habit that he had when he played sandlot baseball and independent basketball here . . . every time he gets in a tight place he sticks out his tongue . . . for a long time, I had forgotten this peculiarity . . . but in a picture of Berger sliding into third base last summer, there was his tongue hanging out . . . It is not uncommon for a basketball game to be pulled out of the fire by a shot that was in the air when the final whistle sounded . . . but here's the equivalent in a football game . . . Lafayette was leading, 3-0, with a few seconds to play . . . Lafayette punted and the ball was in the air when the final whistle sounded . . . Cooper French, of Penn State, gathered in the ball on his 40-yard line and ran 60 yards to a touchdown . . . final score, Penn State, 6; Lafayette, 3 . . . The Pacific Coast League was the only minor league circuit to make money in 1929 . . . and only 8 of the 16 major league clubs showed a profit . . . but the Chicago Cubs had the biggest season financially in their history to that period . . . The late John E. Madden, who bred Zev, never considered him a great horse . . . and he believed Colin was a better horse than Man o' War, too . . . It's harder to pick a horse to run in third position than in first . . . and it's harder to pick the last horse than the first . . . unless your name is Bill Bennings.

Wild Bill Cummings, Speedway Star, Dies of Crash Injuries

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, Feb. 8.—William C. (Wild Bill) Cummings, daredevil of the motor speedways, finished his last race today—and lost. Death was the victor.

Ironically, it was a passenger automobile that carried the 32-year-old race-driver, who once said "everything turns out for the best," to his final checkered flag. He died in a hospital from injuries suffered in a highway accident Monday night.

Unscathed on the speedways, Cummings never regained consciousness after the accident, in which his automobile plowed through a steel guard rail, bounded over several trees and landed in a creek. He was driving alone, en route to his suburban home.

The happy-go-lucky Cummings was a popular figure in the racing business. Everybody '— fellow drivers, mechanics, railbirds, fans—liked him.

His greatest triumph came in 1934 when he roared to victory in the Indianapolis motor speedway's 500-mile Memorial Day classic, finished less than 30 seconds in front of Mauri Rose, of Columbus, Ohio. Cummings averaged 104.863 miles an hour, then a new record for the distance.

"Wild Bill's" luck dropped lowest in the 1936 Indianapolis race. The starting bomb burst and the field was off—all except Cummings. His gleaming mount, which he had rolled proudly to its starting position a few minutes earlier, wouldn't move. The clutch plate was broken.

His face white as a sheet, "Wild Bill" finally climbed from the car and walked off with bowed head as the machine was rolled to the sidelines.

A few days later he told a friend: "No use to squawk. It's part of the game. Besides, something worse might have happened. Everything turns out for the best."

They'll bury "Will Bill" Saturday, with race drivers and mechanics as pallbearers. He leaves his wife and one daughter.

If You Pout Less, Putt Better Credit the Poor Greenkeeper

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Feb. 8.—Pity the poor greenkeeper.

If he mows the grass too often, he kills it. If he doesn't mow it often enough, the golfer threatens to kill him.

His favorite color is green—but he isn't. He's got to know entomology, pathology, horticulture, botany, chemistry, engineering and the latest in diplomacy.

Any timid husband who gets delirium tremens when friend wife suggests the lawn, 40 by 50, needs mowing is a sissy. All the nation's 7,500 green-keepers do is trim and curry a swath 50 feet wide and an estimated 8,000 miles in length daily during the golfing season.

And, unlike his contemporary, the pro, who dons bright plaids and heads south in the winter, the greenkeeper stays home to treat the soil so you'll pout less next summer and putt better.

"Five years ago if a golfer averaged less than one bad lie a hole he was satisfied. Now if he gets more than one a round he threatens to take up croquet," Joe Ryan, of Philadelphia, president of the Greenkeeping Superintendents Association, said today.

Ryan, who bears a remarkable resemblance to Gen. Pershing, estimates his organization has whittled as many strokes from the average score as have the instructors and the new developments in golf paraphernalia.

They picked up the diplomacy arguing with the chairman of the greens committee, whose wife probably is a member of the Wednesday Afternoon Garden Club, over the wearin'—and the tearin'—o' the green.

The biggest problem facing the organization now is finding a bent grass—there are 75 different kinds—that can be clipped to less than an inch in length daily and still survive through heat and drought.

And from Gus Brandon, of Chicago, the association's secretary, comes the observation that you can tell of a player's success that day by his complaints concerning the greens.

Gonzaga Five Beaten by Eastern in 22-18 Thriller

Purple Bows Second Time This Season

Buddy O'Brien and O'Donnell Knot Score But Rally Is Stopped Hancock, Battiste Star

Eastern High made it two straight this season over Gonzaga yesterday on the Lincoln Park floor, edging out the Purple basketers, 22-18, with a last-minute scoring splurge. In another game earlier this season on the same floor, Eastern's, the defenders issued a 19-12 defeat to its victim.

Until late in the game it was impossible to tell which team would eventually win, though Eastern was ahead all the way with the exception of a minute near the middle of the final period. Going into the final period on the short end of a 17-14 count, Buddy O'Brien and Lane O'Donnell quickly tied up the score for the first time in the game with a field goal and foul shot, respectively. Numerous attempts to take a lead were unsuccessful and Eastern's Capt. Howard Hancock broke the knot.

O'Brien, of the losers, was high scorer with seven points. The best total turned in by Eastern players was six, Hancock and Francis Battiste sharing the honor.

Enright

With basketball speeded up to a point where a pause is as frequent as dew in the Sahara, the trials of refereeing have proportionately increased. And it takes a lot of floor-pounding to watch over ten athletes through four quarters or two halves, seeing that everyone, including the coaches and spectators, is at least mildly satisfied.

Credit—or blame—for his unusual occupation, "Bum" Enright lays at the door of Bruce Kessler, the diminutive former American U. cager and present coach of McKinley High. Soon after his graduation from Gonzaga Prep in 1926, Enright joined a strong sandlot club called the United Typewriter Grays. Kessler was one of the players, as well as the acting manager of the club.

An important clash with the Anacostia Eagles, ruler of the sandlot roost at the time, was scheduled, but Enright was not included in the opening line-up as usual. Through three quarters he held one end of the bench securely to the floor, and finally got into the game with two minutes remaining. Contrary to the usual ending of stories, Enright didn't score the winning points. He got a beautiful set-up chance—and missed.

That made up his mind. If he had fallen off so far in ability that he wasn't used for three quarters and then missed a game-winning basket when he did get in, he figured his playing days were over. He seriously lent himself to officiating. Later, however, Kessler gave him the reason he was kept on the bench. It wasn't that he was losing his eye, but that he hadn't appeared for one of the Grays' previous games.

The explanation of the nickname "Bum," matches any child-saying you've ever heard. A 4-year-old Maurice Enright played around his fathers' saloon down in the Southwest section until his parent became worried about his future. The youngster was acting too tough to suit the benign father, so he was given a milk bottle with a nipple to play with instead of the whisky bottles which cluttered up the place. Young Maurice took the new plaything out in the stable and shattered it on the cobblestone floor, lisping, "I don't wanna play with that. I gueth I'm jutht a bum." The stableman took it up, and it's been his tag ever since.

Columbus U. Loses 2 Men For Ring Meet

Kentucky Squad Arrives Today For Fight Card

Scheduled for its first invasion of the National Capital, Coach Frank Moseley's University of Kentucky boxing team is to report here late this afternoon. Tomorrow night at Joe Turner's Arena, 8:15 o'clock, the walloping Wildcats are to face Columbus University's fighting Explorers in one of the collegiate ring features of the 1939 season.

The Kentucky State Society, a spirited alumni and hosts of friends are expected to join in a warm welcome to be extended the picturesque invaders who are to quarter at the Burlington Hotel prior to tomorrow night's test.

Announcement that two Columbus University dependables have been definitely lost for tomorrow night's match was forthcoming from Coach Jim McNamara yesterday. Due to a severe cold Lou Hayman, who last week fought as a heavyweight, has yielded the 175 spot to hard hitting Jim Brown, while Ernie Silva, 135-pound freshman star, has surrendered his assignment to Jim Willis due to a broken tooth suffered in the DeSales College match.

'Cecil Byron' Changed Name To Jack Roper

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Feb. 8.—For the benefit of those who don't know, and they seem to be in the majority, Jack Roper is best described as a human being.

He is also a heavyweight fighter and the man Mike Jacobs, Tom Gallery and fate selected as the next opponent for Joe Louis. On second thought, leave fate out of the matter. It has enough problems without getting mixed up with the troubles of Messrs. Jacobs and Gallery.

As who's who might have it, but doesn't, Roper was born 36 years ago in Ponchatoula, La., and christened Cecil Byron Hammond. He gave up three names and original good looks, as well as Ponchatoula, in time, and adopted the ring name of his more illustrious brother, Capt. Bob Roper, of A. E. F. boxing fame, when he started fighting along about 1924.

Navy Trounces W. and J., 51 to 37

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 8.—Navy basketers overcame an early lead to be ahead of Washington and Jefferson here today at the half, 20 to 15, and to win the game, 51 to 37, the highest score of the present season. George Ghesquiere, after lagging somewhat in the first half, struck his stride in the second to score 15 points, high mark of the contest, with Norman Ackley, a sturdy sophomore back, tossing five field goals in the final period.

Armstrong May Defend Title Here

Heinie Miller, secretary of the District Boxing Commission, suggested Johnny Hutchinson, of Philadelphia, eighth ranking featherweight, as a likely opponent for Armstrong in a title bout.

Pro Grid Stars On Block at Meeting

Every National League In Market for Better Talent at Conclave

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Trading of player talent may furnish the major interest in the meeting of the coaches, club owners and officials of the National Professional Football League, opening tomorrow for a four-day convention.

George Halas, coach and owner of the Chicago Bears, said player deals of considerable magnitude probably would be made, thus stamping the football meeting as an off-season successor to the winter baseball sessions. Every team in the league, Halas said, is in the market for talent, with coaches more willing to trade a college star who is yet to establish that he can meet professional requirements, than they are men of proven ability. Halas, in the process of rebuilding the Bears, will be in the market for tackles.

O'Toole, Londos Clash HereTonight

Tommy O'Toole, the likable Irish lad who has replaced Danno O'Mahoney in the hearts of his countrymen, makes his second attempt to throw Champion Jimmy Londos in local rings tonight when he meets the bronzed Greek in the feature of the weekly show at Turner's Arena. The match is scheduled for 90 minutes, one fall.

In his last joust with Londos the handsome O'Toole fared not so well, being pinned in very short time. However, while he lasted Tommy gave the champion several uncomfortable moments and is confident that he can even the score tonight.

On the supporting card is a semi-final between the Golden Terror, scourge of local mats, and the 390-pound Chief Sanooke, the first foe ever to outweigh the Terror in a match here, and three 30-minute time limit bouts. These bring together Jack Hader and Nick Campofreda; George Pencheff, Australian championship claimant, and Rube Wright and Pete Peterson.

Schwartz Winner In A.A.U.Handball

Jack Schwartz, the District's No. 1 handballer, got off to a successful start in his quest for his fifth consecutive District of Columbia A. A. U. title last night, defeating John Payne, 20—21, 21—8, 21—12 on the Central "Y" courts.

Albert Levin sprung the surprise of the night, however, when he came from behind to take a bitterly fought struggle from the third ranking Gustave Goldstein. The scores were 21—17, 13—21, 21—20. George Wendlandt experienced little difficulty in defeating Charles Engelhardt, 21—12, 21—5, while Walter Engelhardt decisively trounced Charles Walden, 21—2, 21—2.

Semifinal double play tonight finds Jack Schwartz and Paul Pearlman meeting Murray Collins and Albert Levin at 8 o'clock, while Wendlandt and Goldstein will face Randy Myers and George Newman at 8 o'clock.

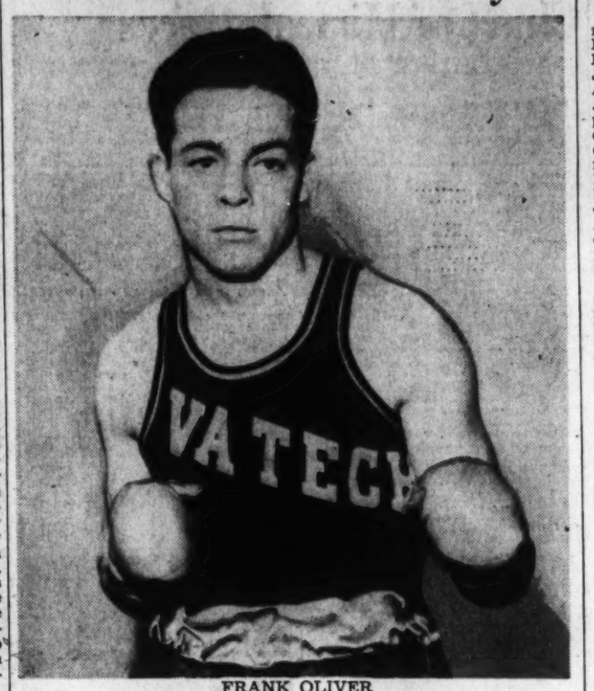
Best Ring Team in V. P. I. Annals Invades Brookland Saturday



FRANK OLIVER
Undefeated V. P. I. 165-pounder

Gobblers, With Two Undefeated Battlers in Line-up, Loom as Real Test for Catholic U.

Loaded with talent in every class, the best Virginia Teach team in its brief boxing history will invade the District Saturday night for the dual meet with Catholic University.

The V. P. I. squad boasts of two undefeated battlers in Billy Austin, the 120-pounder, and Frank Oliver, the 165-pounder. Unlike most college boxing squads which have only eight men, there will be no danger of any forfeits Saturday night, because Virginia Tech has two men for every class.

The Gobblers have fought three matches this year, losing to Virginia, 5 to 3, and defeating North Carolina State, 4½ to 3½, and North Carolina, 5 to 3.

Tech brings a quartet of sluggers in Jimmy Woolwine, 155 pounds; Frank Oliver, 165; Dave Pitts, 175, and Jim Gaugler, heavyweight. Woolwine will oppose C. U.'s great puncher, Joe Bunsa, and this battle should be crammed with action. Both boys have scored 4-second knockouts this year.

Pitts has lost only one bout in his entire college career, and his duel with Gerry Strong should be another slugging match. The star bout of the evening undoubtedly will be between Frank Oliver and Fred Stant. Both boys are natives of Norfolk, each is undefeated, and each is gunning for the national title.

The balance of Virginia Tech's line-up will have Fred Jackson or Wally Alexson in the 127-pound class; Joe O'Rourke or Howard Graninger in the lightweight division, and Jimmy Evans in the 145-pound spot.

Francis' 179 Sets All-Time Record in Bankers League

Tom Francis, rolling for the Union Trust team in the Bankers League, set an all-time league record last night at Arcadia, spilling a total of 179 pins. It was the best individual effort turned in during the 25-year existence of the league.

The record game helped Francis earn set honors as well as game honors for the night, his total for three games being 393. It also paced his team to best team game, 596.

City Bank No. 1 chalked up a 1,700 team set for honors in that department and a three-game sweep of its match with the league-leading American Security & Trust five. The latter, though five games out in front three weeks ago, sank into second place and City Bank took its place.

Southeast League

A season record was hung up by Gus Placos, Peerless Baker spiller, when he turned in a set of 427, combining games of 145, 138 and 144. The feat also helped Peerless to two games over Capitol Restaurant Best score of the losers was registered by Norman Prather, with a 146 game and a 388 set, as the Cafemen took high-team game honors with 599. Peerless was high for team set, 1,704.

Friendship League

The A and W Hot Shoppe, with Paul Miller rolling 351, took two games from Wakefield Dairy at the Silver Spring Alleys. President Valet, topped by Henry Corvelli who registered 364, downed Bond Bread in two games.

leading International Business Machines took a pair from Walsh Motor with H. Franke setting the pace with 338. Travis Brewer's 380 was best as Shepherd Park Wine and Liquor blanked Steward Brothers.

Letter Carriers' League

Two league records fell at the Ice Palace Alleys when L. Bolen, of V street, rolled 156 and J. Ricks, of Main Office, toppled a 385 set. Main Office had the best team set with 1,636. V street took a one-game lead over Ben Franklin, which is tied with Main Office for second place.

U. S. Engineers League

Vogts' 143 game and 359 set were tops at the Ice Palace as he helped the Generals. The Wharf Rats had a high game of 525 and a high set of 1,548.

Bureau of Standards

Ben Page turned in a game of 160 and a set of 391 to contribute to Cosmos' cause. The team had a high game of 591. The Physicists had a team set of 1,725.

Western Electric League

Recreation League

Paced by Astor Clarke's 394 the fifth-place Herzog's rollers knocked the pace-setting American Window Cleaning Co. out of the lead by handing the Cleaners a three-game lacing at Recreation Alleys. University Shop rollers, although idle, moved into first place, one and a half games ahead of the Cleaners. In other matches Marvins Credit Co. made it ten in a row by sweeping their set from Shah & Shah.

Knights of Columbus

By virtue of the scores posted last night in the Knights of Columbus Bowling League, held at the Rendezvous Alleys, three teams tied for first place, namely, Balboa, who dropped two games to De Soto; Trinidad, who lost two to Pinta, and Cortez, who won two games from La Salle. In the other set Santa Maria took two games from Ovando.

Temple Minor League

Interior Dept. League

Reclamation No. 1 held its league lead with two games over Land Office, Rocker's 125 game and 368 set pacing the winners. Reclamation took honors for team game, 594, and team set, 1,680.

Petworth League

All matches were won by odd games, Sollers Plumbers beat Brockman's Market, Superior beat York Service, George Haberdashers beat Schaffer's Motors, Adamson's Plumber's beat Corr's Sport and Kushners beat Petworth. The highest set was tallied by Wingate of Petworth, a 372.

Lucky Strike Ladies League

Social Security Board No. 1 increased its edge over other teams in the league to three games with straight victories over F. S. A.

General Motors League

Bob Miller, of Emerson and Orme Service, rolled the high game of the night, 356, as his team combined to beat Capital Cadillac in the odd game.

Eastern Star Ladies League

Helen Whitbeck rolled a game of 123 to pace Washington Centennials to high team set honors, 1,479, and help in a three-game victory over Joseph H. Milan's. It boosted the Washingtons higher in the league lead.

C. & P. Telephone League

A season record for high team set was rolled by Commercial, 1,720, as it swept its series with Traffic.

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

Copyright, 1939, New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Feb. 8.—Let's see now . . . Lou Nova . . . Walter Neusel . . . Yustin Sirutis . . . Max Roesch (never heard of him) . . . Jack Roper—Ah! There it is . . . Jack Roper. Knocked out Eddie Mader in eighth round . . . got knocked out by Arthur Godoy in seven . . . knocked out somebody named Ed Shelby in one . . . lost to some guy named Eddie Wenstob in ten . . . lost to Eddie Simms in ten and then reversed the decision in another meeting . . .

VIDMER.

So that's Jack Roper. The latest record book only gives one year's record, not even including his birthplace and date of birth. But it seems to me that when it becomes necessary to look up a fighter in the book to find out anything about him at all, he's a long way from being a challenger for the world's heavyweight championship.

Yet this stranger to the heavyweight scene has been matched to meet Joe Louis at Los Angeles in April with the title at stake. Of course there's nothing wrong with Louis fighting in Los Angeles. It is only natural that the natives of that fair (only fair) city and the surrounding territory should be anxious to see Joe Louis in action. They have had only one glimpse of the Brown Bomber and that was back in 1935, when he went out there to beat Lee Ramage. It was long before he became even the Brown Bomber.

View to Be Brief

But with a fellow named Jack Roper in the ring against him it seems certain that their view of Louis in action is doomed to be very brief indeed.

As a matter of fact there's nothing wrong with Louis fighting this Jack Roper. Other champions have fought just as obscure opponents. But they billed those bouts as exhibitions, not for the heavyweight championship of the world. Perhaps it wouldn't arouse so much irritation among the fight fans if Louis just book an exhibition against Mr. Roper and called it a 4-round bout. As a matter of fact it doesn't really matter whether they book it for 4 or 15, or even call it a fight to the finish, for the finish will come within the limits, no matter how they print the posters.

Silent Scorn

It seems to me that if Los Angeles and the Pacific Coast want Joe Louis to fight in their country, the least they should do is throw Tony Galento or Bob Pastor in the ring with him. Of course neither Pastor nor Galento would stand any more chance of winning than this Jack Roper, but at least it would dignify that billing they insist on giving the bout—for the heavyweight championship of the world.

There are, at least, a few people who insist that Galento should receive a chance at the champion. It's true that this crowd consists almost entirely of the National Boxing Commission, Joe Jacobs, Tony's manager, and Tony himself, but nevertheless there's somebody. And Jimmy Johnston, for one (I can't think of another right off hand) keeps crying for a return meeting between the Brown Bomber and Bob Pastor. Of course James's claims hinge heavily on the fact that Pastor managed to stay upright through a previous fight with Louis, but in any event he makes them in a loud tone of voice.

I wouldn't try to sell the California public on the idea that either Galento or Pastor would make a great fight with the champion, and I'm quite in accord with that part of the pugilistic public which considers both Galento and Pastor a couple of bums. But at least they say that much about them—they're bums. They don't say anything at all about this Jack Roper.

15-Year Veteran, Al Simmons Enters N. L. as Happy Rookie

Former Senator Outfielder Sees Return to Form

By the Associated Press.

Bradenton, Fla., Feb. 8.—The National League has been called a lot of things, but it remained for Al Simmons to come up today with a fountain-of-youth tag for the senior baseball circuit.

Al, veteran of 15 years in the American, was all pepped up about his forthcoming debut as a National Leaguer in the colors of the Boston Bees and figured it would make him feel like a rookie again.

"The National League," said Al, "is going to be as new and as mysterious to me as the majors are to a rookie coming into the big leagues for the first time."

Simmons, a star outfielder for Connie Mack's Athletics for years and later with Chicago, Detroit and Washington, has leased a home here to await the opening of the Bees' training season.

"I am happy over the change in leagues and believe it is going to mean a lot to me," Simmons declared. "It's going to be something new and should be an incentive to my playing. I'll certainly give my best."

Simmons is positive he couldn't be entering the senior circuit "under a better boss than President Bob Quinn of the Bees."

"When I was a kid, my big ambition was to play ball for Connie Mack," he explained. "Well, I did and now I am with a new club headed by a man of the same high qualities, the same shrewd baseball knowledge that Mr. Mack possesses. To me, Mr. Quinn is the 'Connie Mack' of the National League."

Simmons and Danny Macfayden, bespectacled mainstay of the Bees' hurling staff, will work out together in the Bees' park here until the rest of the squad arrives.

Francesco, $5.70 Choice, Wins Hialeah Feature Race

Meade Rides 5-Year-Old In Triumph

Redbreast Second, Teddy Weed Third Before 10,000 Fans; Her Reigh Surprises

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 8.—Francesco, 5-year-old son of Jacopo, from the Darby Dan Farm of John W. Galbreath, of Ohio, easily defeated four rivals in the Grade B Handicap that headed the program here this afternoon. Don Meade handled the reins and brought the gelding home a length and a half clear of Mrs. Payne Whitney's Redbreast, which had not started since October. Tomara Stable's Teddy Weed lost second money by a half-length. Go Home and Knight Gallant completed the field, as named.

Francesco, considered at his best over the turf course, on which he finished second to Maeriel in the Miami Beach Handicap in his last outing, was a $5.70 for $2 favorite. He covered the mile and a furlong in 1:49 3-5, under 120 pounds. The Grade C Handicap that preceded the feature saw the 6-year-old Her Reigh, 109 pounds, scoring in 1:50 4-5.

About 10,000 fans visited the Miami Jockey Club's plant and cheered Meade on to his forty-seventh victory of the meeting.

Francesco, after a fast start, dropped well out of it. Knight Gallant stole a daylight lead over Teddy Weed, with Go Home following several lengths farther back. Francesco began his winning move rounding out of the back stretch, while Redbreast, which had been slow to leave the gate, also spurted in ominous fashion.

The Grade C Handicap that was fifth on the card saw Her Reigh, in the silks of W. Maloney, springing a big upset. The gelding came from behind to win by three-quarters of a length, paying $71.30 for $2.

Working her way forward on the inside and then taking out for the stretch run, She's Right drove to a length triumph in the fourth dash of 6 furlongs.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MODEST QUEEN, $4.40, $3.50, $2.60; CHANCE WATCH, $9.90, $4.70; EBONY FLY, $3.00.

MODEST QUEEN, away alertly, displayed keen speed and raced EBONY FLY into defeat in the early stages and drew out in the final furlong, but had nothing to spare at the finish. CHANCE WATCH, on the outside and going well up from the start, saved ground entering the stretch and wore EBONY FLY down in the closing strides. EBONY FLY, in close attendance of the leader in the opening half mile, began to falter after being straightened out into the stretch. GENERAL HOWES, away tardily, finished stoutly through the stretch.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start poor from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:37. Off 2:38½. Winner, J. E. Crider's ch. c. (3), by Cantier—Rubola. Trained by H. B. Marcus. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 4-5, 0:47, 1:12 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BULLET B, $61.30, $13.60, $6.30; KEN'S MOM, $3.30, $2.50; GOOD STAR, $3.80.

BULLET B, away poorly, improved his position gradually on the outside rounding the turn and, closing with a determined rush through the stretch, wore KEN'S MOM down in the final strides. KEN'S MOM forced a steady pace in the early stages and raced GOOD STAR into defeat and made a game effort when the real issue came, but was unable to stave off the winner's bid. GOOD STAR outbroke the field, but Meade rated him in front. He continued gamely to the final 70 yards and then faltered. HUNTER L, well up entering the stretch, could not keep pace with the leaders in the stretch run, but hung on well.

Daily Double, Modest Queen and Bullet B, Paid $246.30.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds maidens. Start poor from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:07. Off 3:11½. Winner, Glen Riddle Farm's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TALL STORY, $10.30, $4.40, $3.50; DAY OFF, $3.50, $2.90; RED WAR, $8.20.

TALL STORY, vigorously ridden, gradually improved his position in the early stages, stole through on the inside entering the stretch, responded courageously to pressure and outlasted DAY OFF. The latter, also under extreme pressure, worked his way up steadily, came around the leaders on the stretch turn, assumed a brief lead in the stretch, but faltered in the closing strides. RED WAR began fast and showed high speed and held on tenaciously when the final test came and outlasted CARLA through the stretch. CARLA, a keen contender throughout, was pinched back at the furlong pole, came again and would have been third in a few more strides.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:40. Off 3:44. Winner, F. L. Kelley's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHE'S RIGHT, $6.80, $3.20, $2.60; GHOST QUEEN, $2.70, $2.30; FALSE POINT, $3.60.

SHE'S RIGHT, going forwardly in the early running, moved to the leaders with determination when straightened into the stretch and drew clear in the last furlong under extreme pressure. GHOST QUEEN broke well, but lacked speed and was outrun, began to better her position in the final three furlongs while circling the field and outlasted FALSE POINT in the final drive. FALSE POINT, also outpaced in the opening half mile, slipped through the inside entering the stretch and closed gamely. U BOAT set a rapid pace and opened up a good lead, but began to falter in the final furlong.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000. Grade C Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:09. Off 4:12. Winner, W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HER REIGH, $71.30, $20.90, $10.60; PALAMEDE, $4.70, $3.20; SEED, $5.00.

HER REIGH, going in her best form, bettered her position steadily on the outside after leaving the backstretch, took command with a rush through the stretch and held PALAMEDE safe at the end. PALAMEDE, slow to get going, worked his way up gradually on the outside in the last three furlongs and made a game effort through the stretch, but could not overhaul the winner. SEED, in the thick of contention all the way, shook off the leaders entering the stretch and drew out, but faltered in the last sixteenth mile. ENDYMION, under restraint and going prominently early, was troubled on the stretch turn, but came again when clear.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200. Grade B Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:41. Off 4:42. Winner, Darby Dan Farm's dk. b. g. (5), by Jacopo—Heloise. Trained by H. Long. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:11 3-5, 1:36 4-5, 1:49 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FRANCESCO, $5.70, $3.30, $2.60; RED BREAST, $4.90, $3.40; TEDDY WEED, $3.50.

FRANCESCO, under steadying restraint until midway around the lower turn, moved up courageously on the outside, but was carried extremely wide by TEDDY WEED on the stretch turn, responded determinedly when clear, wore RED BREAST down and won going away. RED BREAST, very sluggish in the early stages, responded to pressure and bettered his position while having much ground in the final three furlongs, took command at the furlong pole, but faltered in the stretch drive. TEDDY WEED, going in nearest pursuit of the leader all the way, bore out badly entering the stretch, but responded to punishment when straightened out and came again. GO HOME bore out rounding the lower turn and closed stoutly, but never menaced the leaders.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:11. Off 5:14. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PASSING EVE, $3.50, $2.70, $2.30; BIG VICTORY, $7.20, $3.90; WINGED FLIGHT, $3.20.

PASSING EVE, following the pace closely under slight restraint until straightened into the stretch, responded to the urging when placed to punishment and was going clear at the end. BIG VICTORY, rushed to the front from the outside turn, then rated in front and had something in reserve when challenged, but could not withstand the winner's bid. WINGED FLIGHT, rated off the early pace until midway around the turn, finished stoutly and disposed of ASKARIS. The latter moved up with a bold challenge on the stretch turn, but faltered in the stretch.

SIXTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:42. Off 5:44½. Winner, Woolford Farm's b. f. (4), by On Watch—Queen of Jest. Trained by B. A. Jones. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ONE JEST, $13.60, $7.60; $6.50; VEILED LADY, $9.80, $6.20; PANORASCOPE, $6.40.

ONE JEST, always in near pursuit of the leader, moved up steadily rounding the lower turn, took command entering the stretch and held away the remainder of the trip, but had nothing to spare at the finish. VEILED LADY, prominent throughout, finished gamely and outlasted PANORASCOPE in the final drive. The latter, away slowly and forced to race wide all the way, held on gamely in the final drive. SAN ANTIOCA, rated off the pace to the stretch turn, moved up with a rush when called upon, but faltered through the stretch.

Jockey Don Meade Rides His 47th Winner—the 'Hardway'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Francesco (No. 2) had only one horse beaten as this field turned into the stretch, but Meade had him on top at the end. Redbreast (nearest rail) was second and Teddy Weed (No. 1) was third. Knight Gallant, leading in this picture, finished out of the pay circle

At The Post

Hialeah Park, Feb. 8.

Dear Al,

Since Rushaway won yesterday I have had several inquiries for the dates, prices and jockeys when the veteran won two derbies in consecutive days. On May 22, 1936, Rushaway won the Illinois Derby, $12,000 added, at Aurora, Johnny Longden rode him and he paid $9.40. That night he was put into a horse car and shipped to Latonia, where he was an entry in the $15,000 added Latonia Derby the following day. Rushaway won this, and again Longden was in the saddle. He paid $10. His total earnings for the two days was $21,785, and Rushaway earned the title of "Iron Horse." Louis Feustel, trainer of Man o' War when that horse was mopping up purses for Samuel D. Riddle, has arrived from Columbia, S. C., with six horses owned by Mrs. E. Graham Lewis, the former Elizabeth Arden. In the group are Little Miracle, Miracle Sister, Phara Warrior and two unnamed 2-year-olds. Jockey Ruperto Donoso has given second call on his saddle services to the Wheatley Stable for this year. The South American rider is under contract to the Short Brook Stable, owned by Thomas W. Bryce, of Newark, N. J. The Calumet Farm's Bull Lea has been working well for his big winter engagement in the $50,000 added Widener on March 4. Jack Hicks has sold Noel H., the 4-year-old black gelding, to the Lewis Stable at private terms. He was acting for I. J. Cohen, of Detroit. Noel H. is a son of Prince of Wales and Port Weather. Willie Garner, who rode Pompey's Pillar into second money yesterday at long odds, is a nephew of Mack Garner, one of the turf's outstanding all-time riders. Clocker Mike's bank roll continues to dwindle. He dropped another $20 today when Askaris was out of the mohey. As is the case when most of us are losing, Mike will get desperate tomorrow and play $20 to win on Repeller.

BILL.

First race—Pirate Ship turned in a good effort last out and one that suggests that this juvenile is headed for better things. Needs only the right handling. Hard Lu has worked well and is likely to be close. Cele Carney could make a good showing.

Second race—Blue Grotto breaks from the outside in this and promises to do a lot of running. Nash will be in the saddle and the weight is right. I'm going to string along. Jessie V. L. has speed and should be prominent with this kind. Balcony could be a money figure.

Third race—Repeller must tote 120 pounds in this, but will have Don Meade to do the riding and he probably will be up in time to take it all. Star of Padula couldn't win for Meade but is fit and I can't overlook him entirely. Bolis seems well placed and is dangerous.

Fourth race—Graeme Cracker is not a standout in this by any means but he has a fighting chance to take down the chief money and I'm going to be there. Sun Antioch should be close up throughout. Crowning Glory probably needed that last as a tightener.

Fifth race—Fairy Dale has worked well and is my longshot special. Peters will do the saddle work and this one has a chance of getting home on top. Blind Pig and Count Morse to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Cattistock, with Meade up, could account for the main portion of this purse. This one is reported to be fit and ready and deserves a chance on general class. Manseo and Posterity are good now and will battle it out if the top one fails.

Seventh race—Boston Lad gets in this with 102 pounds and I have reason to believe this one is a lot better than generally rated. If you don't like them long stay off. John's Heir and Top Queen have some class and seem headed for money positions.

Eighth race—Continuity won her last impressively and deserve to be backed in this. Hi-Tide should go well in this company. Schley Nurse failed as a tip recently.

1938 Earnings Less Than Half Of 1937 Total

But Corporate Net Is Now Running Well Ahead of Year Ago

New York, Feb. 8.—Earnings reports for 1939 are beginning to appear in substantial numbers, and they contain few surprises. The first 309 reports for the year reveal an aggregate decline in net income of over 50 per cent from 1937, and there is reason to believe that, when final figures for a considerably larger number of companies are available, the decline will prove to have been still greater, says the Standard Statistics Co. today.

Following are 1938 net incomes by industries for 309 corporations (in thousands of dollars), with percentage of decline from 1937.

*Deficit.

With industrial production now running some 25 per cent above the levels of a year ago, electric power output establishing new records for the season, railroad freight rates currently higher than in the early months of last year and carloadings comparing relatively well with a year ago, corporate earnings in the first quarter, at least, will be well ahead of a year ago.

Cotton Closings Are Irregular

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—More active Washington debate on cotton problems had only minor repercussions in the staple contract market which ended today's session with gains of 3 to 4 points in new crop deliveries and losses of 2 to 4 in the near positions.

Local and Southern liquidation of July acted as a depressant in the old crop months. Trade selling accentuated the pressure in this section of the market, but there was a fair demand, including some foreign buying, in distant positions.

Processed Oil

Cottonseed oil carried through yesterday's sharp rally early today but hedge selling swept prices back to a closing range unchanged to 2 points up. Morning support came on short covering and new buying by mill houses. Sales totaled 169 lots. March closed 6.49@6.50; May, 6.65@6.66; July 6.74@6.76; September, 6.81.

Crude oil was quoted in the Southeast at 3¾@3½ cents and in Texas at 5¼@5¾.

N. Y. Exchange To Show Visitors How It Operates

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange has begun work on an ambitious scheme to give to visitors to New York's World Fair this year a complete exhibition of the various operations involved in the execution of orders on its floor.

The engineering staff of the exchange are designing a modern exhibit room in the exchange building as well as providing for enlarged gallery facilities which are to be open to the general public. The exchange had considered creation of an exhibit at the Fair Grounds but officials were said to have concluded the best place for out of town people to see the most of its workings would be the actual floor of the exchange in operation.

The exhibit room, in addition to a complete miniature trading post and telephone booth which can be operated by the visitors, will contain photo-murals depicting operations of the industries whose shares are traded; the exchange's growth and other details, including exhibits showing the route of an order from the West and its execution on the exchange.

Zero Weather Lifts Prices In Wheat Pit

Gains Up to ⅝ Cent Shorts Rush to Cover Corn Prices Higher

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Sub-zero weather reports from the winter wheat area sent shorts to cover today and boosted prices as much as ⅝ cent. Closing ranges were at the day's best level.

The upturn here, first of the week, was aided by a somewhat stronger Liverpool market. Moderate commission house selling checked the trend at mid-session, but gains held well in a light trade.

Freezing temperatures were reported in the domestic wheat area, which in the Southwest have not been preceded by protective snow. A Kansas City report said sub-zero weather was headed for that area with lowest temperatures in two years expected tomorrow. Crop experts said wheat, especially that which is shallow rooted, might be harmed.

Wheat closed ½@⅝ higher, May and July 68½@68⅝; corn ⅛@¼ higher, May 49¾@49⅞, July 50⅞; oats unchanged, May 28¼; soy beans ⅛@¼ higher, May 81; rye ⅛@¼ higher, May 45⅜; lard 3 to 7 cents higher, March 6.37, May 6.50.

Stocks Recover Losses in Dull Trading Steels, Motors, Aircrafts Are Favorites Utility Bonds Continue in Demand

New York, Feb. 8.—The stock market recovered today what it lost the day before but a continuation of the extreme dullness made it a day of no significance. The composite average for stocks showed an advance of 0.41 and steadness also ruled in bonds, most of the commodities and foreign exchanges. Midweek trade news indicated a continuation of the downswing of the last four weeks but not at a pace to cause alarm. Neither the indices nor the political fronts furnished anything to shake the calm of security markets.

Financial men are watching the shifting scene in Washington for some indication of whether the recent signs of rapprochement between the Administration and the public utilities will prove to be another dud or will spread its good influence into other lines of business. At the moment the amount of co-operation with the private power companies is at its best since the Administration first started its attacks on this line of private enterprise more than six years ago.

There appears now to be a sound basis for the belief that the Administration will hesitate before moving into any new competitive areas in the power and light field and once there is any assurance of a clearly defined limitation to such subsidized competition, the development of the private companies, which has been retarded by the Federal policy, can go ahead.

Steel, motor and aviation shares accounted for a major share of such interest as existed in today's market. Motors were buoyed by the favorable statement of General Motors, which reported Tuesday a sharp rise in its fourth quarter profits which indicated that the street's preliminary guesses had been too conservative. The corporation's sales figures today also showed a sharp expansion over a year ago although a decline from the December level.

Chrysler Up 2½

General Motors closed up 1⅛, Chrysler 2½ and Willys Overland preferred 1⅛ while the common of the last named company was the day's most active stock, closing up a fraction. It was aided by an unconfirmed report from Toledo that the U. A. W. had accepted a pay reduction in an auto parts plant of the Willys concern, the first such in that area since the union was started.

Glenn L. Martin stood out in the aviation division, advancing 1¾ points. North American Aviation added a good fraction. Improvement in the European situation has not lessened the interest in armaments for it is too painfully apparent that the rush of all nations to prepare will not be halted by efforts to bring about a world peace conference.

Power shares were quite active considering general dullness, but failed to make impressive gains. Electric Power output for the week was 9.8 per cent ahead of the like 1938 period, the sharpest advance since the holiday period.

Power Bonds Firm

Small changes in either direction and of no particular importance were registered today in the listed bond market. United States Treasury issues held to within a few thirty-seconds of a point of former figures. Best grade investment issues in the corporate department were similarly stable, with utility bonds in favor. Turnover in all listed bonds was only $5,530,000.

Medium-priced carrier liens moved irregularly higher. Gains of a fraction to a point or more appeared in many bonds, and only a few issues showed any offsetting losses. Rail and utility holding bonds were stable. Industrial convertibles improved with the equities to which they afford access. Local tractions were dull and communications issues likewise remained quiet. International telephone bonds proved a strong group.

Latin-American default bonds reflected a mild resumption of interest, but there were exceptions to the upward trend. Argentine issues also advanced. German and other European default obligations were irregular. Italian and Japanese bonds were idle and uncertain. Scandinavian, Australian and Canadian bonds were in good demand.

Steuer Revised HinesEvidence, Dewey Says

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Feb. 8.—District Attorney Dewey, retrying James J. Hines, Tammany district leader, on charges of conspiring to protect the Dutch Schultz policy racket, threatened late today to impeach the testimony of Max D. Steuer, noted lawyer and one of his own witnesses.

The prosecutor moved to get before the jury an alleged failure by Steuer to admit that his story today was at variance with what he told the grand jury.

Earlier the district attorney assailed Gov. Lehman, on the ground he had persisted in further investigating a rumor already discredited, casting doubt on prosecution testimony in the Hines case; and that there had been a partial leak to the press in Albany, N. Y., concerning this rumor.

The Governor's inquiry concerned a statement by two convicts in Atlanta, Ga., that the late George Weinberg murdered "Julie" Martin, one of Schultz's gangsters, in March, 1935, near Troy, N. Y.

Steuer retold his testimony of the first trial. Early in 1933, he said, Hines asked him if he would be interested in handling a Federal income tax matter for one "Arthur Flegenheimer."

Tells of Indifference

He agreed to see whether a compromise could be reached.

Assured it could not, he was also informed that "Flegenheimer" was Dutch Schultz.

At the first trial, Steuer said merely that he told Hines:

"The matter that you spoke to me about cannot be adjusted and I am not interested,' and Hines said, 'I am not interested.'"

Today Steuer said Hines' reply was "Neither am I, any further."

D. C. Co-op Store Moves to New Shop

Washington's only co-operative grocery store equipped to deliver purchases to its patrons last night moved into new quarters at 1519 Wisconsin avenue northeast.

Owners of the store, who are also its best customers, aided in transferring the $3,500 worth of property. Beginning on a street corner, the Rochdale store now is operating at a profit.

It was announced that the enrollment has passed 2,000 members but the drive will be continued until 2,500 members are enrolled. A dance followed the banquet.

Grand Jury Indicts Walker In Extortion

D. C. Optician Killed Self After Receipt Of Purported Letter

Edwin L. Walker, 21, yesterday was indicted for mailing an extortion letter to a Washington optician, who later killed himself while the case was under investigation. The indictment was one of 48 returned by the District grand jury.

Walker's letter demanding money and threatening criminal prosecution, sent in September to Richard B. Covelle, 36, of 1630 R street northwest, was presented to the jury. Covelle shot and killed himself January 17, in an alley behind 915 Fifteenth street northwest, where he worked.

Patent Attorney Indicted

B. Alexander Singer, Washington patent attorney, was indicted for interfering with Internal Revenue officers in the performance of their duties. The agents, E. H. Kuebler and Jackson W. Maslin, attempted to take Singer's car at the Shoreham Hotel in October for non-payment of income taxes. He allegedly snatched the car keys from Kuebler. Later he was ordered held under $2,500 bond.

Three men, arrested as members of the shotgun gang who held up several northwest liquor stores in December and January, were indicted on robbery counts. William C. Wright, 21, one of four men arrested by officers of the Police Robbery Squad, was indicted on five counts. Albert E. Smith, 30, was linked to four of the holdups, and Carl L. Reed was indicted on three robbery counts.

D.C. Told to Put Teeth in Small Loans Bill

House Unit Instructs Seal to Draw Up New And Stricter Act

The House District Committee yesterday instructed Corporation Counsel Seal to draw up a small loan bill for the District "that would have plenty of teeth in it."

This action was taken on motion of Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who said he thought "the District needs some legislation that would make it possible to patrol activities of small loan sharks in this vicinity."

Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, who heads a sub-committee considering amendments to the present small loan law, said he would abandon efforts at "piecing up the old measure" and await the Seal bill.

Seal, who has long advocated a stronger small loan law in Washington, told the committee that "convictions under the present law have been very difficult."

He revealed figures from a recent loan case to show that a Washingtonian had paid more than 100 per cent in interest and "insurance," so much he had been unable to pay back a $33 loan.

A "research report" into small loan activities in the District will accompany the new bill when it is presented to the committee, according to Seal's instructions.

Nichols reported to the committee that he would continue to delay hearings on tax legislation proposed for the District, pending return to the city of Dr. Chester Pond, who made the tax study and who is confined to his home in New York by illness.

House Acts To Give FHA Pay Roll Funds

Inability of the Federal Housing Administration to meet its March 1 pay roll in full, will be removed if an amendment included in the independent offices appropriations bill passed yesterday by the House is retained by the Senate.

The amendment authorizes FHA to draw on $2,500,000 of its reserve fund. Such authority was sought because deficiency in funds would make necessary a temporary curtailment of activities and laying off of workers. Members of the staff expressed no doubt yesterday that pay rolls would be met without curtailment.

It was explained that when Congress extended the housing act in February, 1938, to allow insured mortgages on low cost homes up to 90 per cent of their value, applications increased rapidly. This made necessary an increase in the force of the administration from about 2,100 employes to more than 4,200 and money appropriated proved inadequate.

Meanwhile, FHA issued a report showing its home financing activities in January had increased largely over those of last January.

Mortgages accepted for insurance totaled $42,217,800 in January, an increase of 118 per cent over January, 1938, it was reported.

"The large scale rental housing division," the statement continued, "reported the most active month since it was organized. Construction was started on 14 new projects valued at $18,000,000. A total of 152 projects valued at about $100,000,000 are now completed or under construction."

Roof Contractors Ask Investigation Of Insurance

Exorbitant rates for workmen's compensation insurance "indicate strongly the existence of monopolistic practices," Senator O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, chairman of the anti-monopoly committee, was informed yesterday by the United Roofing Contractors Association in session here.

The telegram to Senator O'Mahoney, signed by T. J. Daly, president, and James McCawley, executive secretary of the association, asked that the committee investigate.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen spoke at the opening of the fifty-second annual convention of the organization. Theodore I. Coe, of the American Institute of Architects, spoke at the banquet last night.

Bill Would Amend D. C. Law on Motor Liens

A bill by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, to amend the District law for recording liens on motor vehicles was introduced yesterday. Randolph would have the liens recorded in the office of Traffic Director Van Duzer, instead of the District Building.

Mrs. Karrick Dies at 74 in Massachusetts

Was Daughter of Justice Brewer and Kin of Cyrus Field

Mrs. Henrietta Louise Karrick, 74, daughter of the late Associate Supreme Court Justice David J. Brewer, died yesterday at her summer home in Stockbridge, Mass., after a lingering illness.

Mrs. Karrick lived for many years in Washington where her husband, the late James Lawson Karrick, was a prominent lawyer and president of the Fidelity Storage Co.

She was a great-niece of Stephen J. Field, also an associate justice of the United States Supreme Court; a great-niece of Cyrus Field, of Atlantic Cable fame, and great granddaughter of the Rev. Dr. David Dudley Field, noted theologian and historian.

Surviving are two sons, David Brewer Karrick and James Lawson Karrick, both of Washington.

Services will be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. in St. Paul's Church, Stockbridge, with the Rev. Edmund Randolph Laine officiating. Burial will be in Stockbridge Cemetery.

Joseph Wheatley, Of Hyattsville, Is Dead at 28

Joseph Matthew Wheatley, 28, of Hyattsville, Md., son of H. Winship Wheatley, sr., former president of the District of Columbia Bar Association, died in Providence Hospital yesterday.

Mr. Wheatley was associated with Griffith Consumers, Inc., as an air-conditioning engineering supervisor. He was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and a graduate of Catholic University. He married Miss Irene McCarthy last June.

Besides the wife, Mr. Wheatley is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Winship Wheatley, sr., three brothers, H. Winship Wheatley, jr., State's attorney for Prince George's County, Md.; Albert Hall, and Francis Ira Wheatley, and two sisters, Miss Rosemary and Miss Margaret Wheatley.

Funeral services have been set tentatively for Saturday, with a requiem mass at St. Jerome's Catholic Church, Hyattsville. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Funeral Services Are Held for Florence Harris

Funeral services for Florence C. Harris, 72, of 1408 Twenty-first street northwest, active worker with the Daughters of the American Revolution here, were held yesterday at Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, the Rev. W. F. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in East Haddam, Conn., today.

A native of East Haddam, Miss Harris had lived here 30 years.

Surviving are two sisters, Miss Jennie J. Harris, of Washington, and Mrs. Julia H. Williams, of Moodus, Conn.

Mrs. Schumacher's Rites Set for Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Jennie Schumacher, wife of Harry C. Schumacher, secretary to Representative Burdick, of North Dakota, will be held at Chambers' funeral home, 517 Eleventh street southeast, at 2 p. m. today. Burial will be in Washington National Cemetery. She died Tuesday.

Pall bearers will be Senator Frazier, Representatives Lemke and Burdick, all of North Dakota; Robert Larson, William Skeels and William McCormick.

Mrs. Schumacher, a native of Fargo, N. Dak., lived here five years. Besides her husband she leaves a daughter, Miss Ethel Schumacher.

Funeral Tomorrow For Crash Victim

Funeral services for John Kennedy, 43, District fireman killed in an automobile accident near Newcastle, Del., on Saturday, will be held at the residence, 111 Cedar avenue, Takoma Park, Md., at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Born in Michigan, Mr. Kennedy came to Washington after the war and was at the time of his death stationed with No. 24 Engine Company here. He was a member of the American Legion, Fire and Police Post.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Norena Kennedy, and a son, John Orville Kennedy.

Randolph F. Bailey Dies at Age of 55

Randolph F. Bailey, 55, of 940 Randolph street northwest, died at Georgetown Hospital yesterday following a short illness.

Surviving are the wife, Ellen, and four daughters, Laura and Catherine Bailey, Mrs. Ethel Kinsey and Mrs. Helen Bogan, all of this city.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. Saturday at St. Gabriel's Church, Grant Circle and Webster street northwest. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Cheatham Dies; Fired Last Cannon in Civil War

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—William Franklin Cheatham, 94, Confederate soldier credited with firing the final cannon in the fighting at Appomattox before Lee's surrender, died today at his home in Chesterfield County.

He was the last surviving member of the Joseph E. Johnson Camp No. 2, Confederate Veterans.

'Inherits' Needle From Mother

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Mrs. Mary Tozzo holds the needle which passed from her body to that of her baby, Dolores, before the child was born. The needle was removed from baby's back yesterday at New York. Physicians were puzzled but admitted the possibility of such an "inheritance." The fact that the eye of the needle pointed inward when it was removed instead of outward was considered to substantiate the theory offered by the mother

Security First, Mrs. Roosevelt TellsSouthrons

Democracy Safe as Long as It Satisfies, Youth Council Hears

The American people "can never have a real democracy without first giving them a basis of economic security," Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt last night told the Council of Young Southerners at a dinner at the Shoreham.

"People who don't know where their next meal is coming from don't give much thought to what kind of government they have," she stated.

Mrs. Roosevelt told the recently formed nonpartisan council and its guests that they need not fear the growth of fascism and communism in this country as long as American democracy performs adequately. "You need never worry about something new if what you have is meeting your needs and satisfying your desires," she said. The First Lady advised the council to work "to bring together" industrial and farm youth to discuss common problems.

Dr. Homer P. Rainey, director of the American Youth Commission and president-elect of the University of Texas, said economic favoritism for the North in national legislation has resulted in conditions "even more devastating to the South than her losses upon the field of battle."

The South has "too long allowed itself to be dominated by a spirit of self-pity," the educator said. "We have too long reacted emotionally to our problems rather than using our intelligence to solve the problems we face."

The Council of Young Southerners, formed "to encourage youth activity in the solution of their own problems," plans shortly to begin a series of forums throughout 13 States of the South.

Medical Surety For 40 Million Seen in 1944

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Feb. 8.—An American Hospital Association accountant predicted today 40,000,000 Americans will "have guaranteed hospital and medical care by 1944 if doctors agree to supplement the group hospital insurance plans now in effect in 52 cities.

Dr. C. Rufus Rorem, of Chicago, director of the committee on hospital service of the association, said approximately 3,000,000 persons were participating in the group hospital insurance plans last January 1.

This figure, he predicted, would increase to 12,000,000 by 1942 under the force of guaranteed hospital service alone, and would swell to 40,000,000 by 1944 if doctors agreed to supply medical service under similar arrangements.

Heads of various community plans came here today for a midwinter conference.

Frank Van Dyk, director of the Associated Hospitals of New York, said Government medical regulation was inevitable unless some such plan of group medical care was made Nation-wide by the medical profession itself.

"This program is growing so fast doctors will be forced into it, whether they like it or not," he said.

Russians Repulse Japanese in New Border Clashes

Moscow, Feb. 8 (AP).—New Japanese attempts to capture the Soviet island "No. 227" in the Argun River, on the northwestern border between Siberia and Manchukuo, were reported in an official government communique tonight.

The Japanese were repulsed Monday and again Tuesday, the announcement said, with aggregate Japanese casualties of 15 killed or wounded.

The Soviet Charge d'Affaires in Tokyo again has been asked to protest energetically, it was announced.

$7,000,000 Set As Cost of U. S. Base Pay Plan

Bulow Given Budget Bureau Estimate on $1,200 Minimum Wage

A minimum wage of $1,200 for all Federal employes would cost $7,000,000 and affect 78,400 workers, the Civil Service Commission yesterday informed Senator Bulow (Democrat), of North Dakota, chairman of the Senate Civil Service Committee.

In a report to Senator Bulow, who recently introduced a bill asking the $1,200 minimum, the commission stated that the proposal had been discussed with the Budget Bureau.

While "neither approving nor disapproving" the bill, the commission told Senator Bulow the Budget Bureau stated that the measure "could not be construed as being in accordance with the President's civil service plans" for Government workers.

Workers whose salaries would be raised by the Bulow proposal—which is duplicated in a bill introduced in the House by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia—include 28,000 persons already under civil service and 3,700 persons now working on a part-time basis, the Civil Service Commission said.

Representative Flannery (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, yesterday introduced two bills that would affect Government workers.

He asked creation of a United States Civil Service Board of Appeals, which would settle disputes between civil service employes and their bosses, and also asked that workers in the offices of Collectors of Internal Revenue be given the classified civil service rating.

The proposed appellate board would be composed of three members, one from the Civil Service Commission, one selected by employes and one appointed by the President.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 8.—Price movements were mixed in today's stock market. British funds and international issues made satisfactory showings and there was continued buying of brewery shares. Domestic railroads held firm, while the industrial group moved irregularly. Oils, mining shares and rubbers closed quiet. Foreign bonds were mixed.

Paris.—The bourse closed today with prices generally higher. Rentes advanced fractionally and banking shares were about 50 francs up. Suez Canal closed 100 francs higher and Royal Dutch improved.

Liverpool.—Cotton futures finished unchanged to 1 point higher today. Offerings were light. Demand from Bombay improved and local houses and professionals also bought. Wheat futures edged up from a barely steady start to close ¼d lower to ¼d higher. Reports of sales of two cargoes of Australian wheat to Shanghai attracted support. Miller demand for actual grain also improved.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Tournament bidding tactics are constantly changing and improving, but the same plays that caught the unwary in auction days are still catching the unwary today.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Double	Redouble	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Q ♡.

The hand in the box, taken from the Cleveland tournament, shows how the unpredictable Fred D. Kaplan brought in a hopeless three notrump contract by the old device of leading the adversaries' suit, giving the illusion he had strength in it when actually it was his most vulnerable point. His partner was Mrs. Samuel Rush, national champion.

Their rather strange bidding was explained by North stating that she meant to bid two, not three, hearts, and by South saying he redoubled to make the opponents think he really had a diamond stop.

The redouble, however mad, had the effect of inhibiting West from opening his suit and instead he chose the queen of hearts. This was allowed to ride around to South's king, which took the trick. Kaplan entered dummy with a club pretending to finesse the suit, overtaking the ten with the queen and boldly returned the three of diamonds. East ducked the ten was played from South and West hoping to kill the diamond exit card on the board, also ducked allowing the ten to hold the trick. Thus East, not unnaturally thought that declarer held the king as well as the ten of diamonds.

Declarer now attacked the heart suit, losing to East's jack. East returned a spade and another heart lead forced the ace, but East still believing that Kaplan had the diamonds guarded, led back another spade allowing him to run home with nine tricks and one for good measure.

South made three notrump, redoubled with an extra trick winning two spades three hearts four clubs and a diamond.

East and West can win four diamonds and two hearts to set the contract two if they will but take their tricks.

Self-Help Group Gives Work to Record Number

An all-time high in the number of persons receiving work the week of January 30-February 4—423 persons—was registered, the Self-Help Exchange reported yesterday.

Store sales of 6,647 scrip, representing nourishing meals and warm clothing for unemployed persons, exceeded by 796 any previous record. Four exchange workers were found permanent jobs.

Group Asks U.S. to Take Over Mount Vernon

A resolution calling for the United States Government to acquire the historic home of George Washington at Mount Vernon, and maintain it as a National shrine will be presented to members of Congress by the Regular Veterans Association, Walter P. Boehm, commander of Gen. Malin Craig Post, No. 20, announced yesterday.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

JUSTICE, that prim lady who carries a pair of golden scales, must smile behind her bandaged eyes at those agents of the United States Biological Survey. For when constabulary duties are to be done they look neither to right nor left while hailing the offenders, stock, lock and gunbarrel, into court.

Just recently, these agents brought into United States Court at Lexington, Ky., a distinguished assemblage as follows: One policeman, a city attorney, a county attorney, a circuit court judge, a banker, an insurance agent, a hotel proprietor, a beer dealer, a funeral director and a couple of florists. They were charged with violating the Federal dove shooting law.

About the agents unafraid; The Biological Survey says they are impressed with one thing—"be impartial." They are few in number, but are hand-picked. Forty-one of the number are stationary, 19 float about in search of offenders. There are 1,400 deputized agents, but the brunt of the duty falls on the 60 regular agents. They wear uniforms when in such places as the courtroom, but in the field they wear rough clothes, for the going is hard. Many are called for the jobs, but few are chosen. Out of 47 once considered, but 19 made the grade. They know that they must be effective; once they caught a Federal judge; once they caught a Supreme Court justice. "We don't don't go after the big fellows particularly, but we don't overlook them, either," a survey official commented yesterday.

MILD bewilderment, a trifle of chagrin, was the reaction in the Postoffice Department to Mr. Farley's announcement that a commemorative stamp would be issued this year in honor of baseball's centennial. This was surprising because Mr. Farley had informally, at least, opposed the notion of a baseball stamp. The Department officials generally had felt that to issue any sports stamp might open unending possibilities. For example, a stamp is issued for baseball's centennial. Wouldn't this, to a troublesome extent, at least, open the way for agitation for a stamp to honor every outstanding event in baseball, football, hockey, skiing, volleyball, badminton, ice skating, tennis, basketball, handball? . . . The officials didn't want to start it. Some of them are wondering why Mr. Farley changed his own viewpoint about it.

IF the Public Health Service officials have any say, there will be no dismissals of employes who for so long have had the status of attendants but have performed a variety of other work. The Civil Service Commission has said they must be reassigned to attendant duty or dropped from the service. This has scared them, understandably, and they want to know what's what. The outcome can't be foreseen now; it amounts to another issue being shuttled about in the general confusion of making the Executive orders effective. But if the P. H. S. has any say at all, no one will be dropped from the service. They say honestly that they don't want this to happen. The outlook seems that these employes, who have shown their capability of doing work above the grade of attendant, will be shunted to that grade. As there are now more of these employes than there are attendant jobs, it might be that some will be let out. It is some more of the embroidery on the Executive orders which we all hailed with such a shout.

HERBERT S. CHAMBERLAIN, of the P. O. Department, left recently for San Francisco, where he will oversee the first-day sale of Golden Gate Exposition stamps, February 18. There was much competition in the department to get this trip . . . Isaac Gregg, of the Postoffice Department information office, is sojourning in Florida with Mrs. Gregg . . . John H. Butler, 1151 North Capitol street, retires from the GPO after 40 years' service. Others retiring there are Robert C. Berry, 15 N street northwest, 20 years; Mrs. Minnie U. Burton, 200 Primrose street, Chevy Chase, 28 years, and Warren E. Smith, 3124 Cedar street, Mount Rainier, Md., 35 years . . . Steadily, the number of Federal employes increases in the District of Columbia, totaling 120,589 as of December, the C. S.'s last figures. The increases have been consistent since last April, when the score stood 113,778.

AGRICULTURE Department scientists are bothering over the persimmon wilt that is killing millions of persimmon trees. They term the condition "explosive" in its wide scope. So what? Well, the better golf club heads are made from persimmon wood. That strikes home to you!

Bob Burns Says—

More folks git into trouble over money matters than anything else. The police grabbed a man in Chicago the other day on suspicion of his bein' a pickpocket. But he refused to talk. In fact, he wouldn't even open his mouth. They finally pried it open an' what do you s'pose they found inside—five twenty-dollar bills!

He'd picked the pocket of his best friend an' he figured, by keepin' quiet, they'd never be able to prove it. But the poor sap wasn't wise to one thing. As long as he had that dough in his mouth, he was a second Edgar Bergen an' th' dough was Charlie McCarthy—because most every one knows by this time that even if they don't say nothin'—"money talks!"

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Dispute

Two in dispute put peace to flight
When both are wrong yet each is right. —Old Mother Nature.

Yes, it is possible for both sides in a quarrel to be both wrong and right. It happens over and over again. Much of the trouble in the Great World of ours could be and would be avoided were it not for the fact that it is possible for people to be both wrong and right.

Hooty the Great Horned Owl and Whitey the Snowy Owl, who had come down from the Far North because of famine up there, were not friendly even though they were cousins. Each resented the presence of the other because it made the hunting just that much harder. So they were inclined to quarrel anyway. But the subject of their present dispute had nothing to do with food or hunting. Whitey had mentioned old Snow King and that even he was having a hard time to get a living this winter. Hooty promptly wanted to know who old Snow King was.

"Do you mean to say that you don't know old Snow King?" asked Whitey in a tone that implied that he thought Hooty must know very little, very little indeed.

"If I knew I wouldn't have asked you. Who is he?" hissed Hooty.

"He's a Bear, a great, big white Bear. Do you mean to say you never have seen a Bear? But of course you haven't or you never would have asked such a silly question," retorted Whitey.

"Of course I have seen Buster Bear, but you don't see him out this time of year; he's asleep," protested Hooty indignantly "And he isn't white; he is black," he added.

"Black!" cried Whitey. "Are you telling me that a Bear wears a black coat? Now I know you never have seen a bear. I have seen old Snow King many times and his mate, Snow Queen, and their cubs, to say nothing of many of their family. They all wear white coats. A Bear with a black coat, the idea! That proves you never have seen a Bear."

Hooty could hardly contain himself. He hissed and he hooted. "White Bears! I don't know who your Snow King is, but he certainly isn't a Bear. Why a Bear's coat is as black as the blackest of the Black Shadows that come out from the Purple Hills every night. It is you who does not know what a Bear looks like. A white coat indeed! Anyway Bears are not around in the winter, they are asleep."

Whitey was making a sound that was much like laughter. "I just wish old Snow King could hear you say that. I'll grant you that Snow Queen digs down in the snow and sleeps through the worst of the winter, but not old Snow King. No, sir, not that fellow. He is just as much awake in winter as in summer, and I don't know but a little more so for then he has to travel farther and work harder in order to get enough to eat. Where did you ever get the idea that all bears sleep in winter?"

"You just don't know what you are taking about. Find me so much as one track of a bear anywhere in all the Green Forest and I will agree to believe all that you have said," declared Hooty.

"Probably there isn't a bear in all the Green Forest to make a track. As I said before, you don't know what a bear is. You wouldn't know one if you saw it. The idea of a bear with a black coat! The idea! Whitey chuckled in a way which was most provoking.

So the foolish dispute went on. And the odd thing about it is that both were wrong and each was right. Whitey the Snowy Owl knew only the Polar Bear, while Hooty knew only the Black Bear. One had never seen a bear with a black coat and the other never had seen a bear with a white coat. Many disputes are just as foolish and for a like reason.

Sen. Glass' Side of Controversy Over Appointment of Judge Roberts

Virginian Asserts President Errs When He Denies Granting Veto Power to Gov. Price in 'Purge' Effort

The text of Senator Glass' statement in reply to the President's letter to Judge Roberts follows:

The only reason I think the President's extraordinary letter to his rejected nominee for judge of the Western District of Virginia deserves the slightest notice is the fact that some of the covert implications should be brushed away. The Senate itself is amply able to attend to his attack upon the time-honored custom of respecting the reasonable objections of its members to Executive nominations intended to be offensive to them; but I think it pertinent to summarize the relative facts in order that the public may determine the exact truth of the matter at issue.

On last March 16, under a two-column picture of Gov. Price and Hon. James A. Farley, characterized as "Chief Patronage Dispenser in the Federal Government," thus obviously to accentuate the significance of the subjoined announcement, there appeared in heavy headlines, in the Richmond Times-Dispatch, an article captioned, "Price Backing Seen Necessary for Federal Job." The body of the article, being largely quoted from an editorial of the chief newspaper proponent of Judge Roberts, printed at his home, stated that, "Henceforth the indorsement of Gov. Price will be necessary before any ambitious Virginian may hope to land an important Federal job."

Conferred With President

Stating that the editor of the paper quoted from had "conferred with the President in Washington the preceding Monday," the paper stated without reservation that "President Roosevelt himself has made this decision, which means the Governor is to have the veto power on all appointments of any consequence in Virginia."

As incredible as this publication seemed, it did not shock the Virginia Senators, because they had previously learned that Gov. Price, eagerly accepting the delegated function of Federal patronage dispenser in Virginia, had theretofore communicated with certain Federal officials recommended by the two Senators for reappointment on their assured record as "among the most outstanding officials of their class in the United States." To their credit it must be said that not one of these officials had sought the Governor's proffered indorsement and none had been willing to join in the effort to discredit the Virginia Senators.

After waiting a day for Gov. Price to contradict this extraordinary statement published right under his nose, I addressed the President a note on March 17, drawing his attention to the obnoxious publication. In this note I ventured to say: "I desire to ask if recommendations made by me as a Senator of Virginia for important Federal appointments, requiring the advice and consent of the United States Senate, are to be subject to the effective veto of the Governor of Virginia."

Question Not Answered

It seemed to me then, as it does now, that this was a perfectly reasonable and simple question, which might be answered directly and, of course, without evasion of any kind. It was not answered then directly or otherwise. Instead, the President wrote me a page essay on the requirements of the Constitution as to Federal appointments, whereupon I ventured to reply that I had a fairly intimate knowledge of the fundamental law and nowhere discovered anything in it requiring Federal appointments to be made by and with the advice and consent of a State Governor.

Failing to get anything of a pointed nature, beyond this lecture on the Constitution, it seemed to me then and in my mind is now confirmed, that the President approved the offensive publication which was the basis of my inquiry. This I stated in another note.

The answer of the President to this note, which he now thinks was "in a personal and friendly vein," still failed utterly to deny or affirm whether recommendations by the Virginia Senators were to be subject to the veto of the Governor of the State. True, I was told to go ahead in the usual way, but the President added that he would reserve the right to consult "Nancy Astor, the Duchess of Windsor, the WPA, a Virginia moonshiner, Gov. Price, or Charlie McCarthy." I cheerfull, absolve Charlie McCarthy from giving the davice designed to discredit the Virginia Senators, and the record shows that none of the persons named was consulted except Price.

The President, indulging in this trivial evasion and having disdained a frank answer to my simple question as to whether he proposed to subject the recommendations of the Virginia Senators to the veto power alleged to have been delegated to Gov. Price, my colleague and I hesitated to make any suggestions at all. We did not do so until specifically asked by the Department of Justice to send in a nomination at once, as it was desired to submit the name to the Senate for confirmation before adjournment. We desired to present the name of former Gov. George C. Peery; but I was told by the President he would not appoint a man over 60 years of age. By the Attorney General I was urgently advised to name a man between 40 and 50 years of age, with prospect of long service. Incidentally, this only piece of advice by the Department of Justice was totally disregarded in the nomination made by the President.

Two Names Submitted

The Senators prevailed on Judge A. C. Buchanan, 48 years old, of the Virginia Circuit Court, to permit the use of his name and also on Frank Tavenner 43 years old, as Assistant United States District Attorney, saying that either would be acceptable to the Virginia Senators. Can any human being conjecture why one or the other of these men was not appointed, except that the Governor of Virginia in conjunction with the only hostile Congressman of the six whose districts are embraced in the Western Judicial District were promised the appointment regardless of the Senators and with the ill-disguised purpose to discredit them?

Tavenner is one of the brightest young lawyers in the Western Judicial District, of fine antecedents and himself a splendid character, with useful experience in Federal Court pracice. He was indorsed by every bar association in the second largest Congressional district of the State.

Judge A. C. Buchanan is a notable character on the bench and the Supreme Court records attest that he is incomparably superior in legal knowledge to the nominee rejected by the Senate. Time and time again, as I pointed out to the Senate Judiciary Committee, the State Supreme Court had adopted Buchanan's opinions textually in important cases as its own. Some years ago, when it was thought desirable to revise the State's judicial procedure, Buchanan was by the Supreme Court put on the Judicial Council to do this work. There is no man in Virginia, on or off the bench, who stands higher in reputation for probity and learning. Although petitions for the President's nominee were circulated through the Congressional District before the ink was dry on the bill creating this judgeship, scores of lawyers indorsed Buchanan when he was reluctantly induced by the Virginia Senators to permit the use of his name. Every lawyer of his circuit indorsed him and lawyers in every county of his Congressional District. George Peery, Governor until last January, the presidents of outstanding colleges and universities, judges on the bench, members of the General Assembly, as well as many men of character and great worth approved the recommendation of the two Senators. What objection was there to his appointment except that he had been recommended by the two Virginia Senators, charged by the Constitution with advising and consenting to such Federal appointments?

Roberts Summoned

Did the President ever open his lips or communicate directly or indirectly with either of the Virginia Senators concerning their recommendations for the judgeship? He did not. Did his Department of Justice discuss with them in any wise the relative fitness of the six applicants for the position? It did not. Was not Judge Roberts promptly brought to Washington for conference? I am reliably told he was. Was any one of the other six persons mentioned for the judgeship brought to Washington or communicated with in any respect? Not one of them I am told. Gov. Price's own testimony, of official record, shows an admission that he was called over long distance phone by the Department of Justice and asked his opinion of Roberts. Was he asked his opinion of Buchanan or Tavenner of any other one of the six persons mentioned for the judgeship? He was not. Was Gov. Peery, four years ago, asked about the qualifications of Judge Pollard for the Eastern District of Virginia? He was not, nor, in my belief, was any other Governor since the foundation of the State, invited to project himself into a scheme to "purge" the two United States Senators from a State by practically vetoing their recommendations for executive appointment.

Before the Judiciary Committee I ventured the opinion that the Attorney General "never had the slightest idea of giving consideration to the recommendations of the two Virginia Senators because the Governor of Virginia had been promised the right of veto on nominations that they made." The President says neither of these statements is true; but, with as much deference as the occasion requires, I believe the record demonstrates that both statements are true. If the Attorney General had any such intention, he never made the slightest effort to carry it into effect, not even the common courtesy of communicating with either United States Senator on the subject. If the President did not delegate the veto power on Senatorial nominations to the Governor of Virginia, why did not the latter deny the offensive assertion published in all Virginia papers and by nearly all of them condemned; and why should the President of the United States have declined to answer a simple question propounded to him by a United States Senator for whom he had repeatedly professed friendship?

Price Admitted Privilege

Gov. Price, as may be seen from the stenographic report of the proceedings before the Senate Judiciary Committee, virtually, if inadvertently, admitted he had been given the privilege of vetoing Senatorial nominations when he said: "It was an empty honor. All the patronage had been distributed."

What was an "empty honor?" Why, of course, the delegated power to veto Senatorial recommendations. And why was not the privilege immediately exercised? Gov. Price says because the Federal patronage had already been distributed; but he failed to say he immediately projected himself into the matter of Federal appointments by trying to make the officials renominated by the Senators understand that his indorsement was essential. And his chief newspaper advocate boasted that the names of these four officials were held up by the Justice Department until Price gave his approval. This is a record on that point which I confidently submit to the public for its own intelligent conclusion.

The President in his unprecedented letter to his rejected nominee expresses the opinion that "every person of common sense knows" that "no Governor, no Senator has at any time had or ever will have the right of veto over Presidential nominations." This is as inaccurate as many other statements and inferences made by the President are. Ninety-six Senators have the right of veto over Presidential nominations in specified cases, and on last Monday, 72 of them against 9 to the contrary exercised their right of veto on the President's nominee for Judge of the Western District of Virginia, and I am assured that others would have done likewise had they been present at the vote. But, of course, persons of common sense or uncommon sense will readily understand that the Virginia Senators were not primarily discussing veto by the Governor of "Presidential nominations." We were discussing the delegated power of the President's political vice regent in Virginia to veto Senatorial nominations, exercised so conclusively in the case of Judge Buchanan and Frank Tavenner.

Extraordinary Statement

The most extraordinary statement in the President's lament to his rejected nominee is contained in the forty-fifth of his forty-six paragraphs. He states that the Senators from Virginia have in effect said to the President: "We have nominated to you two candidates acceptable to us; you are hereby directed to nominate one of our two candidates, if you do not we will reject the nomination of anybody else selected by you, however fit he may be." Of course everybody knows that this implication has not the shadow of fact to support it. The Virginia Senators neither said nor intimated anything of the kind, and in making such a statement the President must have been actuated by a vastly greater measure of anger than he was pleased to ascribe to me. As the record shows, his Department of Justice asked the two Virginia Senators for a recommendation. For years this courtesy has prevailed and a reading of the debates shows that the writers of the Constitution intended it to be perpetual. Complying with the request, the Virginia Senators named two men against whose eminent capabilities and character no man has dared utter a word. The President not only ignored the recommendations of these men, but did not extend to the two Virginia Senators the common courtesy of discussing with them the appointment of a Federal judge in their State. We were prepared to accept any capable man who was not deliberately intended to be offensive to us by himself completely ignoring us and willingly making himself the beneficiary of an attempt to dishonor us in our State and among our colleagues. The Virginia Senators are still perfectly willing to accept any capable nominee of the President who is not willing to concede to the Governor of Virginia or a bitterly hostile Congressman the right to veto the suggestions by the Senators of men of the highest character and capability.

This is no fight for patronage. I do not care a tinker's damn for patronage. I do not recall that I ever met Judge Buchanan. I do not know nor have I ever inquired whether or not he approved my course in the Senate. I inferred his appointment would not get either Senator a vote he would not receive anyhow, because I knew Buchanan has too much character and too great a sense of propriety to be a judicial "sniper" or to permit politics of any description to enter his court. I was looking for a judge, not for a job. I was not seeking a man under my political patronage nor one under the patronage of any politician. Buchanan would have been an ornament to the Federal bench as he has been to that of the State; and it is to be deplored from every point of view that he should have been rejected by the appointive power merely through a desire to "purge" the junior Senator next year and the senior Senator of Virginia later should I live longer than the intriguers hope.
